MEANING OF TERMS

USED IN CLASSIFYING ANNOTATING CASES.

THE different expressions used to describe the effect of the annotating cases have the following meanings, and the classification of the annotating cases has been done strictly in accordance with these meanings. The annotating cases are listed chronologically except such as are classified as " Referred to " or " Mentioned." These come at the end and are arranged inter se in chronological order. The terms used in classifying the annotating cases are as follows :—

- " APPLIED " (Apld.).—This expression is used to denote the fact that the principle of law enunciated in the annotated case has been applied to a new set of facts and circumstances in the annotating case.
- " APPROVED " (Apprvd.).—This expression is used to denote the fact that the annotated case has been considered to be good law in the annotating case where the latter is in a higher court than the former.
- " CONSIDERED " (Consd.).—This expression is used where the remarks in the annotating case are devoid of adverse criticism and merely denote the giving of more or less careful consideration to the annotated case.
- " DISTINGUISHED " (Distd.).—This expression is used where the earlier case is not necessarily doubted, but where some essential difference (either on the facts or in law) between it and the annotated case is pointed out.
- " DOUBTED " (Dbtd.).—This expression is used where the court in the annotating case without definitely going to the length of saying that the annotated case is wrong, adduces reasons which seem to show that it is not accurate.
- " EXPLAINED " (Expld.).—This expression is used where the earlier case is not necessarily doubted, but the decision arrived at is justified or accounted for by calling attention to some point of fact or of law which is usually, but not necessarily, one not obvious on the face of the report.
- " EXTENDED " (Extd.).—Compare " APPLIED," supra.
- " FOLLOWED " (Folld.).—This expression is used to denote that the same principles of law are applied in the two cases. It does not necessarily imply that the facts are substantially identical in the two cases.
- " NOT FOLLOWED " (N.F.).—Compare " FOLLOWED," supra, to which it is the adverse.
- " OVERRULED " (Overd.).—This expression is used where the annotating case is on substantially identical facts with the annotated case and in a higher court and the rule in the latter case is held to be wrong.
- " REFERRED " (Refd.).—This expression is used only where the annotating case deals with the point of the Digest paragraph and is without comment of any definite character on the case annotated, and where there is no delicate shade of approval or disapproval which would justify the use of any of the foregoing words.
- " MENTIONED " (Mentd.).—This expression is used only where none of the foregoing terms apply. In other words, it is used only where the case annotated is cited on a point having nothing to do with the point in the Digest paragraph.

Part I.—Distinction between a Profit à Prendre and an Easement.

1. Right of pasture.]—(1) Under Prescription Act, 1832 (c. 71), s. 1, proof of a thirty years' enjoyment of common of pasture is not complete if proof be given of an enjoyment for twenty-eight years immediately preceding an action in which the right is disputed, & it appear that twenty-eight years back the enjoyment was interrupted, but that the right was exercised before the interruption; & the party disputing the right is not bound to show that such interruption was adverse: it lies upon the party prescribing, under the Act, to prove thirty years' uninterrupted enjoyment.

(2) Semble : under sect. 2 of the Act, prescription for a right, every year, & at all times of the year, to put & turn the party's cattle into & upon a certain close, is too vague, & may be demurred to. If there be no demurrer, & the issue on such plea be tried, the party prescribing, & relying on sect. 2, must give proof applicable to some definite easement; & he will fail if the evidence entitle him not to an easement, but to a profit à prendre.

(3) A plea of prescription is supported if the party prove a right more extensive than that pleaded; but the right proved must be of such a nature that it may comprehend the right pleaded.

(4) A plea claiming a right of common of pasture & a plea claiming a right to put & turn cattle into a particular place, are essentially different, as the latter describes a mere right to an easement.—BAILEY v. APPELEYARD (1838), 8 Ad. & El. 161; 3 Nev. & P. K. B. 257; 7 L. J. Q. B. 145; 112 E. R. 798; sub nom. BAYLEY v. APPELEYARD, 2 Jur. 872; sub nom. APPELEYARD v. BAYLEY, 1 Will. 18. No general common law right.]—On an issue, whether close C. was or was not pltf.'s close, the following evidence was rejected. That the close was within the manor of O.; & pltf., by lease from the lord, was possessed of the manor & all the common & waste lands within same; that M. was immemorially common & waste of & in the manor, & of great extent; that, adjoining to & surrounding M., & within the manor, were & immemorially had been "very many distinct messuages, lands & tenements, severally held of the same manor by several tenants thereof, respectively, which said tenants, for the time being, of the said messuages, etc., respectively, had, in respect thereof, severally & respectively, always had, exercised & enjoyed, & been entitled to have," etc., "rights of common for all their commonable cattle in, upon & throughout M."; & that, ante litem motam, certain of such tenants, deceased, well acquainted with M. & its neighbourhood, & the manor, & who, as such tenants, had always had, etc., & been entitled to have, etc., such rights of common, did, while they were such tenants, & were in the exercise, etc., & so entitled, declare that C. was parcel of M., & waste of the manor. On bill of exceptions, stating as above:—Held: (1) the evidence was rightly rejected, for that the rights to which the declarations referred were not of a public nature; (2) the evidence was not the less admissible because no evidence had been offered of actual exercise of the right of common on the locus in quo; (3) there was no objection to it on the ground that the parties making the declaration had not competent knowledge, or were interested; (4) there is no general common law right of tenants of a manor to common appendant on the waste.—*DUNRAVEN (EARL) v. 20. Distinguished from common appurtenant—Tenancy of manor.]—Pltf. filed a bill to establish a right of common of vicinage over a common within a manor of which deft. was lord. By his answer, deft. denied pltf.'s right:—Held: pltf., though not a tenant of the manor, was entitled to production of all documents which might tend to support his claim.

But there are in the English law two different sorts of rights of common, one being the right of common appendant & the other being the right of common appurtenant. The right of common appendant depends upon being tenant of the manor & having a right in respect of the tenement held of the manor. The right of common appurtenant depends upon a grant from the lord, & includes common of vicinage (LORD ROMILLY, M.R.).—MINET v. MORGAN (1871), L. R. 11 Eq. 284; 23 L. T. 280; 18 W. R. 1015.

Afterwards B. purchased the house, land, meadow & pasture, to which all, etc., to him & his heirs, & demised same to pltf. who put his cattle into the thirty acres to common, & they were driven out by deft., farmer of A.:—Held: prescription did not make a thing appendant to another, unless it agreed in nature & quality with it, as a thing corporeal could not be appendant

PART II. SECT. 1, SUB-SECT. 2.—A.

14 i. By prescription—Pleading.]—Appendancy being incident & of common right, commencing by operation of law & implying prescription, the person who claims it need not specially state that he prescribes for it; but an appurtenancy may be claimed either by grant or prescription & the word appurtenant does not imply which of these modes is rested upon, wherefore, as it is against common right, the law requires the mode to be stated.—HAYES v. BRIDGES & GUESS (1795), Ridg. L. & S. 390.—IR.

PART II. SECT. 1, SUB-SECT. 2.—C.

21 i. Arable land—Not appurtenant.]—Common of pasture can be appendant only to arable land; but it may be appurtenant to other land.—HAYES v. BRIDGES & GUESS (1795), Ridg. L. & S. 390.—IR.

to another corporeal thing, nor vice versa; but a thing incorporeal might be appendant to a thing corporeal, or e converso; though a thing incorporeal could not be appendant to a corporeal, which did not agree with it in nature, as a common of turbary could not be appendant to land, but to a house; (2) common appendant only belonged to ancient arable land, & for horses & oxen to plough, & cows & sheep to manure the land; it could not be appendant to meadow or pasture; (3) common appendant was of common right, & need not be prescribed for; (4) the prescription being for common appendant time out of mind, to a house, meadow & pasture, as well as to arable land, the common was appurtenant, & not appendant; (5) common appendant, being of common right, was apportionable by the commoner's purchasing part of the land in which, etc., as rent was, on the lord's purchasing part of the tenancy, so by his alienation of part of the land to which the common was appendant; but, common appurtenant being against common right, by the purchase all the common was extinguished; (6) unity of possession of the whole land was an extinguishment of common appendant; (7) common by vicinage was not common appendant, but, inasmuch as it ought to be by prescription time out of mind, it was, in this respect, resembled to common appendant, & one may enclose against the other, for one cannot put his cattle into the lands of the other but they must escape thither, in which case the trespass is excused by reason of the ancient usage; (8) common appendant remained, though a house was afterwards built on the land, or the arable land was converted to pasture; but in pleading it ought to be prescribed for as appendant to land, so it might be appendant to a manor, carve of land, etc., though it comprehended a house, meadow, etc.

(9) When common appendant is apportionable by purchase of part of the land, the commoner ought to prescribe for the whole, till such a day when he purchased, when by sale the alienor may prescribe for common appendant to his parcel.

(10) Common being apportioned by purchase of part, if an assise be brought, the terretenant of the land charged with the residue of the common shall be only charged.

(11) Common appurtenant, & in gross, may commence either by grant at this day, or by prescription.

(12) In case of common by vicinage between adjoining manors, the lord of one manor may enclose against the others, & thereby take away such common.—TYRRINGHAM'S CASE (1584), 4 Co. Rep. 36 b; 76 E. R. 973.

49. Must be connected with enjoyment of land.]—Pltfs. alleged in their statement of claim that they were owners & occupiers of lands & houses in a parish in which were certain lammas lands, partly freehold & partly copyhold of two manors, & over which the owners & occupiers of lands & tenements in the parish had from time immemorial enjoyed as appurtenant to their respective lands & tenements in the parish a right of pasture for the cattle commonable thereon during the season between the removal of the crops in each year & the time of preparing the land for sowing in the next succeeding year; that the precise commencement & close of the season were regulated by bye-laws made by the homage of one of the manors, the number of cattle which each owner or occupier was entitled to turn out in respect of his tenement being proportioned to the annual value of the tenement according to a scale fixed by the homage; & that deft., the lord of the manor & tenant for life of the lammas lands, had recently inclosed parts of such lands, & had destroyed the pasture thereof, thereby depriving pltfs. & the other owners & occupiers of their rights of pasture. On demurrer:—Held: (1) in order to make a right of pasture over common or lammas lands appurtenant to particular lands there must be some relation between the enjoyment of the right & the enjoyment of the particular lands: that is, there must be some connection between the beasts used on those particular lands & the number or description of beasts that may be depastured on the common or lammas lands; as, for instance, where the right claimed is for the beasts which plough the particular lands; or, for every beast used on such lands not exceeding a certain number; (2) in an action claiming rights of pasture, or rights of a like nature, it is the duty of the ct., as far as possible, to attribute a legal origin to such rights, where there is evidence of long-continued user, but that duty can only be discharged at the trial; (3) it was unreasonable that either the stint or the commencement & close of the season should be fixed by the person entitled.—BAYLIS v. 78. Pasturage & herbage—Not fern, heather, etc.]—Previous to the disafforestation & grant of A. Forest in 1677, the Crown was absolute owner of the soil of the forest, & possessed all the rights belonging to such ownership including vert & venison. The tenants of the adjoining manors had customary rights of common of pasture, herbage, & pannage, but the court rolls & other documents contained no evidence of any customary right in the commoners to cut & carry away from the forest brakes, fern, & litter, except by permission of the forest officers, & afforded negative evidence that no such right was ever claimed or lawfully exercised. In a suit instituted in 1691, for the purpose of determining how much of the forest might properly be inclosed having regard to the rights of common, the commoners by their answers claimed rights of pasturage, & pannage for swine & as to such of them as had houses, certain quantities of fuel wood for their houses, but made no claim in respect of any other estovers. By the decree made in 1693, after allotting to the owners for inclosure & improvement portions of the forest within which the commoners were to be excluded & debarred from any common of pasture, herbage or pannage, the residue of the forest, containing 6,400 acres, was allotted to remain open & uninclosed, “& defts., their heirs, tenants, & assigns, & all other persons having right of common in the forest according to their respective interests therein, shall from time to time have & take the sole common pasturage & herbage of all & every the lands allotted & left for common,” the owners, their heirs & assigns, tenants & farmers, being for ever excluded “from having or claiming any common of pasture or herbage upon or in the said lands so left for common.” In an action brought by the owner of the inheritance in 1878 to restrain one of the commoners from cutting & carrying away brakes, fern & litter from the 6,400 acres, for use upon the copyhold tenement in respect of which he had his right of common, deft. claimed this right as one of the commoners entitled to the benefit of the decree of 1693, & also alternatively by prescription in respect of his particular tenement:—Held: (1) upon the construction of the decree of 1693, the right of the commoners over the 6,400 acres was limited to common of pasturage & herbage, & did not include the right to cut & carry away the brakes, fern, heather & litter growing therein; (2) the existence at the date of that decree of any special custom authorising the commoners to cut & carry away brakes, etc., & litter in that which had been a royal forest, had not been established, & was negatived by the absence of any claim to such a custom by the commoners in the suit in which that decree was made; (3) evidence of usage subsequent to the date of the decree of 1693 could not affect the construction of that decree, which in its terms was clear & unambiguous; (4) as the deft. & his predecessors in title were shown to have claimed to take, & to have actually taken, as of right & without any permission from the lord, litter from the 6,400 acres for the use of the tenement for upwards of sixty years immediately before the action, they had, under Prescription Act, 1832 (c. 71), acquired a right to do so, although they had claimed to do the acts complained of under the mistaken supposition that all the commoners were entitled to do them.—*DE LA WARR (EARL) v. 91. New dwellinghouse—Built on same tenement as old dwellinghouse—Old dwellinghouse pulled down.]—(1) Trespass for breaking & entering pltf.'s close & treading down the grass, etc., & breaking & destroying the hedges & fences of pltf., etc. Deft., as to all the trespasses, pleaded that pltf.'s close was parcel of the manor of C., & that a certain messuage, & four acres of land, with the appurtenances, at the several times when, etc. were, & from time immemorial had been, within & parcel of the manor, & a customary tenement of that manor; & that within the manor there was, & from time whereof, etc. there had been an ancient custom that every customary tenant of the customary tenement, with the appurtenances, should have common of pasture upon pltf.'s close. That J. being seised of the customary tenement, having occasion to use his common of pasture, entered the close in which, etc., & put his cattle in, & because the hedges and fences had been improperly erected, threw them down. Replication, denying the custom for the customary tenant of the customary tenement to have common of pasture, upon which issue was joined. Second plea, a prescriptive right of common of turbary in respect of the customary tenement, consisting of a messuage & land. Replication, denying the custom in respect of such customary tenement, upon which issue was joined, & new assignment, that deft. entered for other purposes than those mentioned in the plea. It appeared in evidence, that at the time of the plea pleaded, there was an ancient customary tenement, consisting of a dwellinghouse & out-buildings, garden & a small quantity of land, the customary tenant whereof had immemorially enjoyed such common of pasture in the plea mentioned; that for many years deft. had been such customary tenant, & in 1812 had built a new dwellinghouse on a part of the garden: that both the old & new dwellinghouse continued to be occupied till 1823, when the former fell into decay, & was abandoned by the tenant, & then remained unoccupied until it was finally pulled down in 1825, from which time there had been no dwellinghouse on the tenement, except the one built by deft. in 1821. During the years in which both the old & new dwellinghouses were occupied, the tenant of the former continued to exercise such customary rights on the wastes of the manor in respect thereof as he had before, & during that period it did not appear that the occupier of the latter had exercised any customary rights on the wastes of the manor in respect thereof, but since the new dwellinghouse had been alone occupied, the customary tenant of the tenement had claimed & enjoyed all the same rights in respect thereof as had been claimed & enjoyed at any former period, & among others, the customary right stated in the second plea:—Held: deft. was entitled to have the issue joined upon the right of common of pasture found for him in respect of an ancient customary tenement.

(2) It appeared that defts. committed one trespass by breaking down a large portion of the fence which was standing upon pltf.'s close, which pltf. had then newly erected upon the common, & that defts. did so, really intending to assert & preserve their rights of common of pasture & of turbary; but that they broke down much more of the fence than was necessary for the convenient ingress & egress of men & commonable cattle into & upon part of the close which was inclosed by the fence, & that they did not intend, at the time of committing the trespass, to exercise any of the rights of common, nor had they with them any commonable cattle:—Held: defts. were entitled to have the issue found for them, upon the plea of "not guilty" to the new assignment.

(3) Qu.: whether defts. were entitled to have the issue on the right of common of turbary found for them.—ARLETT v. ELLIS (1829), 9 B. & C. 671; 109 E. R. 249.

93. — — —.]—(1) The release by the lord of a manor of his seigniorial rights over a freehold tenement held of the manor does not operate to extinguish rights of common over the lord's waste appendant to such tenement (STIRLING, J.).

(2) For many years before 1859, the tenants of a farm forming part of the demesne land of a manor had enjoyed, under the terms of their leases, rights of common over the waste of the manor. In 1859, while the farm was still in lease the lord sold a portion of it. In the general words of the conveyance to the purchaser were included "all commons to the said piece of land or any part thereof belonging." On the completion of the sale the tenant of the farm gave up possession to the purchaser of the piece of land sold; but no formal assignment was made, nor was the lease mentioned in the conveyance:—Held: in the absence of circumstances showing a special intention that a right of common should be enjoyed by the purchaser in respect of the land sold, the language of the conveyance was insufficient to pass or to create such a right.—*BARING v. may be good by grant, it may be good by prescription.—SPARKE'S CASE (1621), Win. 6; 124 E. R. 5.

139. ———.]—In an action of trespass, for taking & impounding pltf.'s cattle, in P. & G. field, deft. pleaded, first, that T. & his ancestors had been immemorially used to have, for themselves, & their heirs & assigns, the sole & several pasturage in 217 acres of P. & G. field, in gross, for all his & their cattle, from Sept. 4 in one year, to Apr. 5 in the following year; that T. in 1755, by indenture granted the pasturage to S. his heirs & assigns for ever; that J. who claimed by descent from S. in 1836, demised the pasturage to deft. (not saying by deed), who seized pltf.'s cattle, because they were depasturing the land in question. Deft. pleaded secondly that for 30 years before suit commenced, J. & his ancestors had enjoyed of right, without interruption, for himself & themselves, his & their heirs & assigns, the sole pasturage in the field in question in gross, stating a demise, but not by deed, to deft. & concluding as in the first plea. The replication traversed specially the right of T. as alleged in the first plea, & traversed the enjoyment of J. as of right, without interruption, for thirty years, as alleged in the second plea. Within the last twenty years, encroachments had been made upon the 217 acres, by buildings & inclosures, & about forty acres had in this way been appropriated by individuals, but no encroachments had been made upon that part of the 217 acres, on which the alleged trespass took place:—Held: (1) these interruptions, being of modern date, did not prove that T. had no right to the pasturage in 1755; (2) the interruptions not having been made upon that part of the land where pltf.'s cattle were depasturing, they were not conclusive evidence of an interruption of deft.'s enjoyment of that part; (3) a lease & agreement made by the ancestors of the present owner, by which they demised the pasturage in question to one U, were admissible in evidence, as proving the seisin of T., the original grantor of the pasturage, by showing the enjoyment of parties who claimed under him; (4) the right of pasturage in question was capable of being conveyed, & did not necessarily descend to the heir.

Qu.: (5) whether the right of pasturage in question was within Prescription Act, 1832 (c. 71), s. 5; (6) whether a right of common in gross is within the equity of that sect.

140. By custom — Manor.] — (1) The copyholders of a manor may have the sole & several pasture in the lord's soil & exclude him.

(2) Where copyholders claim common, or the several pasture in the lord's soil, it is not necessary to show what estate they have in their copyholds, because the custom annexes it as a profit to their estates for the time being.

(3) Copyholders may by custom have the sole pasture in exclusion of the lord.

(4) Where one claims common appurtenant it must be for his cattle levant & couchant, because it is the standard of the profit he is to have.

(5) But where copyholders claim the sole pasture in exclusion of the lord, it is not proper to limit it to their cattle levant & couchant.

(6) One who claims common in gross or for his cattle levant & couchant, cannot license a stranger to put his cattle on the common, but if he claims common only for a certain number of cattle, or the sole pasture he may.

*C. Nature of Right.148. Pasturage—Vested in corporation of borough—Distinguished from right of common.]—

The corpn. of a borough had from time immemorial exercised, by actual enjoyment by the free burgesses or by way of receipt of rent or acknowledgment, a right of pasturage for all cattle, sheep & other commonable animals, levant & couchant within the borough, over lands in the neighbourhood of the borough, during a certain season of the year, & there was no evidence that during such season the owners or occupiers of the lands in question, or any other persons, had exercised the right of pasturage over such lands. The corpn. had from the time of Henry VIII. from time to time exercised the right of releasing for valuable consideration their rights of pasturage over portions of the land subject thereto, still continuing to exercise their rights over the rest as before, without any resistance thereto upon the ground that the release of the part of the land extinguished the right as to all, which would have been the case with a mere right of common. In the releases & other deeds of conveyance made by the corpn. in reference to their rights, they had always been described in terms which would be appropriate to rights of common strictly so called:—Held: according to the principle of law by which a legal origin is, if possible, to be presumed for a long established practice, it must be presumed that what the corpn. was entitled to was "sola vestura," or an exclusive right of pasturage over the lands in question, & not a right of common, which would have been extinguished by a release of part of the land, notwithstanding the description of the right as a right of common in a long series of documents. — *JOHNSON v. 162. — Extent of right.]—Upon the trial of a feigned issue to try whether A. was entitled for & in respect of B., to a separate right of feeding & folding an unlimited number of sheep over certain open fields & commons, it appeared that A. had a right of common over such open fields & commons in respect of sheep levant & couchant upon B.:—Held: (1) the evidence negatived the unlimited right claimed, & the verdict was properly found for defendant.

The claim put in by plaintiff before the court was in the form in which it had been stated in the issue, & his claim in respect of B. had been admitted by the court:—Held: (2) a rule for referring it to the master to amend the issue, & for a new trial to be had upon the issue so amended, should be discharged.

(3) Plaintiff claimed in respect of all the freehold which formerly belonged to the manor farm, a separate right of feeding & folding an unlimited number of sheep exclusively to his own use, called the manor flock, having & exercising equal rights of pasturage in every respect with the town flock, over, in & upon all the open fields & commons of R. This is not a claim of a right of common in respect of sheep levant & couchant on the land, but for any number of sheep so as not to exceed the right of pasturage exercised by the town flock. The argument urged on the part of plaintiff shows that such a right might, by proper proof, have been established (FRISKINE, J.).—IVATT v. MANN (1842), 3 Man. & G. 691; 4 Scott, N. R. 312; 11 L. 175. ——— Ancient house rebuilt.]—The destruction of an ancient house, to which rights of common of estovers & turbary were appurtenant, does not necessarily operate as an abandonment of those rights. The rights may be enjoyed as appurtenant to a new house erected in continuance of the ancient house, provided that no greater burden is imposed upon the servient land. The question whether the new house is or is not in continuance of the ancient house is a question of fact. In order to be a continuance of the ancient house it is not necessary that the new house should be built upon the foundations of the ancient house.—A.-G. v. REYNOLDS, [1911] 2 K. B. 888; 80 L. J. The nature of common of turbary is well known, which is nothing more than such a quantity of turfs as may be sufficient for the house to which the common is appendant, but here the custom is laid not only in the tenants, but the occupants, which is a very great absurdity, for an occupant who is no more than a tenant at will, can never have a right to take away the soil of the lord (LORD HARDWICKE, C.).—*ELY (DEAN & CHAPTER) v. 179. Freeholders of manor—Inhabitants.]—(1) Where rights have been exercised from time immemorial the ct. is bound, if possible, to find a legal origin for them.

From time immemorial the freeholders of a manor, in which there were no copyholders, had exercised various rights of common over the waste, but the ct. rolls showed that the rights had also been exercised by the "inhabitants" generally. On a bill filed by four persons claiming to be freeholders, on behalf of themselves & all other the freeholders of the manor, to establish the common rights:—Held: (2) the exercise of the rights by the inhabitants was to be accounted for on the supposition that the rights belonged originally to the freeholders, & were exercised by tenants & others occupying & interested in the land through them; (3) though, the rights being claimed by prescription, the freeholders must be supposed to have taken by separate grants, it was a reasonable way of accounting for the rights being exercised by all, that each grant was with such privileges as were enjoyed by all the other freeholders; (4) a decree might be made in favour of one of plffs., who alone had made out a clear title, & all other freeholders, & such decree might establish all the different rights of common, though he was not shown to have exercised them all; (5) the neglect to pay a quit rent & do suit & service did not deprive him of his rights; (6) a right to take turf & furze & gorse for use for fuel in the freeholders' houses, subject to the power of the ct. leet to regulate the user by bye-laws, could be prescribed for.

(7) In another similar suit there were copyholders of the manor as well as freeholders, but none of them were parties. The bill was filed by freehold tenants of the manor on behalf of themselves and all other the freehold tenants, & all owners of freeholds within the ambit of the manor. The rights were proved to exist in the freehold tenants, but not in the owners of freeholds as such, & it appeared that the copyholders also were entitled to rights of common:—Held: a decree could be made in the copyholders' absence, & though there was in fact a misjoinder of plffs., relief could be given, as an amendment might have been ordered at the hearing.

(8) Where the lord of a manor asserted a right to inclose the waste of the manor & some of the freehold tenants under threat of legal proceedings, ceased to use the waste for depasturing cattle as they had theretofore done:—Held: this was not an interruption acquiesced in of right within Prescription Act, 1832 (c. 71), s. 4, so as to bar the right of the freeholders generally.—WARRICK v. QUEEN'S COLLEGE, OXFORD (1871), 6 Ch. App. 716; 40 L. J. Ch. 780; 25 L. T. 254; 19 W. R. 1098, L. C.

191. Crown grant—Incorporating inhabitants.]—(1) A right claimed by the inhabitants of a parish to cut & carry away for use as fuel in their own houses fagots or haskets of the underwood growing upon a common belonging to the lord of the manor is a right to a profit à prendre in the soil of another. Such a right, therefore, cannot exist by custom, prescription, or grant, unless it be a Crown grant which incorporates the inhabitants.

(2) Such a Crown grant will not be presumed from proof of user by inhabitants if the presumption is inconsistent with the past existing state of things, & there is no trace of such a corp'n. having existed at any time. Such a presumption would, moreover, be wholly unreasonable in a case where at the time when the corp'n. was supposed to be in existence & entitled to the right, the tenants of the manor were exercising inconsistent rights & asserting their entire control over the underwood.

(3) The user must be connected with the right claimed. A prescriptive right to cut underwood in respect of a particular house is not established by proof of user when the only evidence is that the right was exercised in respect of the inhabitants of the parish generally.—RIVERS (LORD) v. The corp'n. claimed a several fishery discharged from the usage in favour of the inhabitants:—Held: (1) inasmuch as the claim of the corp'n. rested on prescriptive enjoyment, the whole user ought to be taken into account, & the right to a several fishery could not be maintained, unless it were consistent with the user by the free inhabitants; (2) the claim of the free inhabitants was not to a profit à prendre in alieno solo, but was a claim to which the law could & would give effect by presuming a grant to the corp'n., subject to a condition or charitable trust in favour of the free inhabitants.—*GOODMAN v. (2) Freeholders in parishes adjoining the river W. had been in the habit of fishing a non-tidal portion of the river for centuries, not by stealth or indulgence, but openly, continuously, as of right & without interruption, not merely for sport or pleasure, but commercially, in order to sell the fish & make a living by it. 227. Lost grant — Prescription — Enfranchised copyholds.—The practice in a manor was for the lords to grant copyholds for three lives, & to renew at a fine upon the dropping of any of the lives; but there was no custom binding them to renew. The copyhold grants did not mention a right of fishing; but from time immemorial the copyholders had enjoyed a right of angling in a stream which formed the boundary of the manor, & of passing along the bank over the lands of other tenants of the manor for that purpose. Subject to this, the right of fishing was in the lords. In 1845 the lords enfranchised a copyhold belonging to S., which adjoined the river, & released in the most ample terms all rights of fishing & all other rights they had over the enfranchised tenement. After this various other copyholds were enfranchised, & for nearly forty years the copyholders & the enfranchised copyholders exercised the same right as before of angling & going over the land of S. for that purpose. T. was the owner of several tenements formerly copyhold of the manor which had been enfranchised since 1845. In 1885 S. set up a gate & prevented T. from passing over his land to fish. T. acquiesced in the interruption until 1889, when he commenced an action, on behalf of himself & all other the owners & occupiers of copyholds or enfranchised copyholds, to establish the right of angling & of passing over the land of S. for that purpose:—Held: (1) by the enfranchisement deed of 1845 the lords gave up all their rights over the land of S., & no reservation or exception of a power to make to other tenants grants giving rights over that land could be implied, as there was no obligation on the lords to make such grants, & as the rights given up included the reversionary right of the lords to grant rights of fishing on the expiration of the lives for which the copyholds were held, the lords had no power to give to T. by his subsequent enfranchisement deeds any rights over the land of S., & T. had no title to maintain the action; (2) lost grants of the rights to the enfranchised copyholders could not be presumed; (3) the interruption of T.'s alleged right, acquiesced in by him, for four years before action brought, was a bar to that right under Prescription Act, 1832 (c. 71), s. 4, & such right, being in the nature of a profit à prendre, could not be claimed by prescription on behalf of a large & indefinite class such as owners & occupiers.

(4) Where a privilege has been exercised as of right for a long series of years, the ct. will make every presumption in favour of its legal origin, but the circumstances of the enjoyment must be carefully looked to; & as in the present case there were copyholders whose right of way & of fishing was not disputed, the ct. considered the case not to stand on the same footing as if the persons exercising the privilege formed only one class.—TILBURY v. 239. —.——.*—The tenants on certain ancient copyhold messuages within a manor had since 1599 asserted a custom for them to fish in certain waters within the manor, but there were continual protests by the lord of the manor. As far back as living memory went the tenants had habitually fished without interruption by the lord of the manor, & some of them had let the fishing & did not regard their right as limited to catching fish for their own consumption. In an action by the owner of two of the messuages, which had been turned into fee simple, against the lords of the manor & their fishing tenant, for a declaration that pltf. had a right of fishing for the consumption of the occupants of the messuages:—Held: on the evidence pltf. had failed to prove the existence of an immemorial usage amounting to a legal custom, & as the alleged usage had been without reference to the needs of the occupants of the messuages pltf. had failed to prove a reasonable usage, & he was not entitled to the declaration asked for.—*PAYNE v. SECT. 5.—COMMON IN THE SOIL.

SUB-SECT. 1.—ORIGIN AND NATURE OF

243. Custom or prescription—Claim of profit in alieno solo—Drifted sea sand—Bad.—To an action of trespass for taking away sand from pltf.'s close, it was pleaded, that the close was contiguous to the sea-shore, in Cornwall; that the sand had from time to time, before the times, etc., drifted & been carried by the wind from the sea-shore upon the close, & been there deposited; that in the parish of E. there was a custom for all the inhabitants for the time being, occupying lands in E., to enter the close at seasonable times, & take therefrom reasonable quantities of all such sand as had so drifted, etc., for the purpose of manuring the lands in their occupation in the said county; deft. justified, as an inhabitant & occupier, etc.:—Held: the supposed custom was void, inasmuch as the sand, when drifted upon a close, became part of it, & the claim therefore was to take a profit in alieno solo.—BLEWETT v. TREGONNING (1835), 3 Ad. & El. 554; 1 Har. & W. 431, 432, n.; 5 Nev. & M. K. B. 234, 308; 4 L. J. K. B. 223, 234; 111 E. R. 524.

244. — — — — — Gravel, sand, etc., from foreshore—Bad.—To an action of trespass for breaking & entering certain land of pltf., being part of the sea-shore between high & low water mark in or adjoining the township of O., & taking gravel, stones, sand, etc., deft. pleaded several pleas of justification, some setting up a right in the inhabitants of the township of O. to take the gravel, etc., to be used for the cultivation & improvement of their land; others claiming it for the necessary repairs of the highways in the township; others setting up a prescriptive right under a thirty or sixty years' user respectively; & others claiming to exercise the right, as parish officer, for the repair of the highways:—Held: so far as the pleas were capable of being construed as justifying under a custom, such custom would be void, being a claim of a profit à prendre in alieno solo, which can only exist by grant or prescription; if the claim were founded on prescription, it would be equally bad, inasmuch as it was a claim by persons who, not being a corpn., were incapable of taking by grant, & not being claimed in a que estate.—CONSTABLE v. NICHOLSON (1863), 14 C. B. N. S. 230; 2 New Rep. 76; 32 L. J. C. P. 240; 11 W. R. 698; 143 E. R. 434.

248. — — — — ——(1) An alleged right in the inhabitants of a parish to take gravel without stint from the bed of a river, the property in which was in pltf.:—Held: bad in law.

(2) In an action to restrain interference with a several fishery in a river, formerly flowing through the waste of a manor, by dredging gravel from the bed of the river, defts. set up a right to the bed of the river by reason of an inclosure award by which eight yards on each bank of the river were allotted to the inhabitants for the purpose of throwing mud & weeds thereon & for other purposes:—Held: defts. had no such right.—*HOUGH v. 250. Tenants of manor—Custom.—The customary of a manor, compiled within the period of legal memory, recognised a right in the tenants to dig coal propriis usis. It appeared, from subsequent documents, that the privilege of digging coal for their own consumption had been enjoyed by the tenants under the waste, but there was no evidence of a similar restricted enjoyment by the tenants under their customary inclosures. There was evidence of tenants having, during a long period, dug coal in their customary inclosures for sale:—Held: the custom was restricted to digging in the waste for coal for the tenants' own consumption.—PORTLAND (DUKE) v. Deft. put in evidence the ct. rolls which recorded a presentment, dated from 1695, that the freeholders of the manor had a right of getting stone from the waste to be used & spent on their respective tenements:—Held: (1) the entry on the rolls was admissible, & was good evidence of the alleged custom; (2) such a custom was not unreasonable.—HEATH v. 269. — On behalf of all owners & occupiers within forest—Capable of legal origin.]—Pltfs. filed their bill on behalf of themselves & all other the owners & occupiers of lands within the Forest of E., other than the waste lands of the forest, except such of them as were defts., or alleged to be represented by defts., against the lords of the several manors within the forest & two persons who claimed to be owners & occupiers of portions of the waste lands which had been inclosed, & the A.-G. Pltfs. alleged that they were owners &, as to part, occupiers of a farm within the forest ; that the whole of the forest was subject to rights reserved by the Crown on granting the manors, & that the Crown had reserved an absolute right of disposition over the herbage ; that the lords of manors within the forest could not inclose with the consent of their respective homages without license from the Crown ; that the government of the forest was formerly administered by forest cts., whose jurisdiction embraced all matters touching the preservation of the rights of the Crown in the forest ; that by virtue of ancient forest laws, made by the Crown, the owners of lands & tenements within the forest had enjoyed rights of common of pasture over the wastes of the forest ; that such rights had from time immemorial been enjoyed by the owners & occupiers of such lands & tenements, without regard to the boundaries of the manors or parishes in which the lands & tenements were situate ; & that pltfs. & their predecessors in title, & their tenants, & the other owners & occupiers of lands & tenements within the forest, had from time immemorial enjoyed as of right by virtue of the forest laws, as appendant or appurtenant to their respective lands & tenements, common of pasture, for cattle levant & couchant on their respective tenements, over the waste lands of the forest. The bill prayed for a declaration of the right claimed, & for an injunction restraining defts. from inclosing any of the waste lands, & from allowing any parts which had been already inclosed to remain so :—Held : (1) the right alleged was one which might exist by law, & was sufficiently pleaded ; (2) the bill was not objectionable as being on behalf of occupiers as well as owners ; (3) the persons who claimed to be owners of the lands alleged to have been improperly inclosed were sufficiently represented ; (4) as the bill was filed to establish one general right, defts. could not successfully demur on the ground that they might have separate defences.—SEWERS COMRS. (2) A grant by the Crown of a profit à prendre out of Crown lands to the inhabitants of a parish, constitutes the inhabitants a corpn. quoad the grant, & an action to establish any such right is maintainable only by the inhabitants as a corpn. & not by an individual inhabitant suing on his own behalf alone.

(2) If the commons of the town of A. & of the town of B. are adjoining, & one ought to have common with the other, by reason of vicinage, & in A. there are fifty acres, & in B. one hundred acres of common, the inhabitants of A. cannot put more cattle into their common of fifty acres than it will feed.—CORBET'S CASE (1585), 7 Co. SECT. 3.—BALKS.

316. Presumption of ownership.]—An Inclosure Act directed, that comrs. should award to the corpn., who were owners of the soil of certain commons, a twentieth part of the commons by way of compensation. Plffs. having given evidence of acts of ownership in the locus in quo, deft., to show that plff's. right to it had been compensated for by allotments made by the comrs., gave evidence that these allotments amounted to a twentieth part of the commons. In contradiction to this evidence, plffs. proved that a part of the land, which they alleged to be the common, consisted of uncultivated strips of land between the cultivated parts of the common & the lands of private proprietors, called balks; & plffs. gave some evidence of property in these balks. The question of property in the locus in quo generally was left to the jury, who found for plffs.:—Held: it was not ground for a new trial, that the jury was not told that, in presumption of law, the balks belonged to the owners of the adjacent land, unless the contrary were proved.—GODMANCHESTER CORPN. v. PHILLIPS (1836), 4 Ad. & El. 550; 1 Har. & W. 686; 6 Nev. & M. K. B. 211; 5 L. J. K. B. 108; 111 E. R. 893.

317. 320. ——— ——— ——— Sporting rights in lord.]—B. Bank was a tract of inclosed pasture land within the manor of B. & had been from time immemorial subject to eighty customary rights called cattlegates. Pltf. was lord of the manor & deft. was seised of certain cattlegates as a customary estate of inheritance. Pltf. was also owner of a cattlegate which came to his predecessor, as lord of the manor, by seizure quousque for non-payment of a fine. Each cattlegate gave the owner thereof a right of depasturing on B. Bank a certain number of cattle & sheep during a certain period of the year. The whole of the cattle & sheep depastured B. Bank in common. A frithman was appointed by the cattlegate owners, whose duty it was to take care that B. Bank was properly stinted, & he was remunerated for his trouble by the cattle owners. A cattlegate owner having a house within the manor had also a right to cut peat for consumption in his house. By 46 Geo. 3, c. lxiv., authority was given to the lord of the manor to enfranchise any copyhold or customary messuages, cottages, lands, tenements or hereditaments, parcel of the manor; & several cattlegates were enfranchised under this Act: but there was no distinction in point of enjoyment between the enfranchised & the customary cattlegates. From time immemorial the cattlegates had been held of the lord of the manor as customary estates of inheritance by payment of fine certain, rents of small amount being payable annually for each cattlegate, & under dues, duties, suits & services of right accustomed. On the death of a cattlegate owner, the cattlegate descended by custom to the heir-at-law, who was admitted at the lord's ct., when he paid a fine. The cattlegates also passed by customary deed, followed by admittance at the next lord's or out of ct. by the steward of the manor. The deed was brought into ct. by the alienee, & was presented by the jury or homage. A fine was payable on the admittance, but there was no heriot due. On the death of the lord of the manor, the owners of cattlegates could be compelled by the custom to be admitted by the new lord, & to pay a fine. The lord was entitled to seize quousque for nonpayment of fines. On alienation by a feme covert, the woman was examined apart from her husband. The lords of the manor had always searched for, pursued & killed grouse & other game on B. Bank, no other person having claimed to do so, or ever having done so except by their license. Since 1819 the lords of the manor had preserved the game. In an action by pltf. against deft. for shooting on B. Bank without pltf.'s permission:—Held: (1) the cattlegates gave the owners no right to the possession of the soil, but the ownership of the soil remained in the lord of the manor, subject to the right of several pasture upon it by the cattlegate owners, & the lord might maintain trespass against a cattlegate owner for sporting over it without his permission; (2) the fact that the lords of the manor had always killed game on the pasture land without obstruction by the cattlegate owners, that no other person claimed to do so, or did so except by stealth or by licence from the lord of the manor, & that one cattlegate owner had applied for & obtained leave from pltf. to shoot game there, that pltf. & his predecessors preserved the game & prevented other persons from searching for game there, did not support a claim by pltf. to an exclusive right of killing game there irrespective of his right as owner of the soil.—RIGG v. In pursuance of the Act the comrs. allotted lands for a turf common. A portion of these lands was taken by a railway co., & the purchase-money was paid into ct. A question was then raised as to who was entitled to the fund:—Held: (1) the lord was entitled to so much of the fund in ct. as represented the value of the soil of the land taken by the railway co.; (2) the trust was for the benefit of the occupiers for the time being of the cottages, & not a trust for the owners, who were only entitled to benefit by the addition to the value of the occupation caused by the gift of the right to the occupiers.—Re CHRISTCHURCH INCLOSURE ACT (1888), 38 Ch. SUB-SECT. 1.—DISTINCTION BETWEEN PRESCRIPTION AND CUSTOM.

367. In general.—Def. pleaded that all the inhabitants within the town of D., where pltf. supposed the trespass, have of time whereof memory, etc. been used to have common for their beasts; & he, def., as one of the inhabitants of the same town put in his beasts, etc.:—Held: (1) tenants at will could not prescribe in their own right; but in the right of their lords; (2) tenants at will do not prescribe in a thing which endures in perpetuity; but they say that the usage & custom of the town has been of time whereof memory does not run to the contrary.—ANON. (1478), Y. 368. ——(1) A custom for one copyholder to have common or estover, etc., in his lord's soil, is good; she may allege that "within the manor there is a custom from time immemorial, that all customary tenants of certain messuages have common in such a place," etc.

(2) Where a copyholder claims common in the soil of another, he must lay a prescription in the lord; but where he claims common in the soil of the lord, he cannot prescribe in the name of the lord; & as he cannot prescribe in his own name, the law allows him to allege it by way of custom.

(3) Difference between prescription & custom; the former being personal, & always alleged in the person; as a man & his ancestors, or those whose estate he hath; the latter being local, & serving for the inhabitants of a town, etc., or as to insensible things, as to devise lands.—*FOISTON v. 371. ———.]—A good deal of the argument on behalf of applt. has rested, I think, upon the failure to observe the proper distinction between rights which are claimed by custom & rights which are claimed by prescription. A custom must be reasonable, & a custom which destroys the subject-matter of the grant would not be reasonable. A right claimed by prescription is subject to no limitation, as far as its use & reasonableness is concerned, & the owner of the soil, that is, the owner of the bed of the river, has a perfect right if he chooses, if the fishing belongs to him, to grant a right to fish to any number of persons although it may destroy his own right. Therefore the fact that the right may be exercised by an unlimited number of persons is not a circumstance that is fatal to the prescription (WILLS, J.).—CHESTERFIELD v. FOUNTAINE (1895), [1908] 1 Ch. 243, n.; 77 L. SUB-SECT. 2.—RIGHTS DEPENDING UPON PRESCRIPTION.

A. What Rights may be claimed.

372. In general.—A man may prescribe or allege a custom to have & enjoy solum vesturam terrae, from such a day till such a day, & hereby the owner of the soil shall be excluded to pasture or feed there; & so he may prescribe to have separatam pasturam, & exclude the owner of the soil from feeding there. So a man may prescribe to have separatam piscariam in such a water, & the owner of the soil shall not fish there; but if he claim to have communiam piscariae or liberam piscariam, the owner of the soil shall fish there.—WHITE v. SHIRLAND (1581), 1 Coke on Littleton 122 a.

graze or feed on a common. Deft. claimed that he had gained the right to do so under the above Act, & alleged acts of user & enjoyment without interruption for sixty years or thirty years of a right of common of pasture for all his cattle levant & couchant upon two closes of land in B. Deft. as to one portion of the period of thirty years, failed to prove that there had been any turning out of animals at all. As to another part of the period of thirty years there was an absence of evidence both as regards the beasts turned out & also the capacity of his land, & he did not distinguish in any way what he turned out in respect of one close & what he turned out in respect of the other:—Held: the claim to a prescriptive right failed.

(2) Deft. also claimed that by reason of being an inhabitant & ratepayer of M. he was entitled to rights of common of pasture without stint or alternatively for all beasts levant & couchant on his land. Evidence was given that during the period in respect of which the witnesses spoke not only they themselves but their fathers & grandfathers turned out, without stint, goats, donkeys & pigs, besides commonable beasts, & showed also that not only the inhabitants but everybody else, irrespective of where they lived, turned beasts out on the common. No evidence was given in support of a right confined to the inhabitants of M. or to commonable beasts:—Held: deft.'s claim as an inhabitant of M. also failed.—MITCHAM COMMON CONSERVATORS v. BANKS (1912), 76 J. 399. — Manor tenements.—(1) Occupiers of tenements under the copyholders of a manor cannot prescribe for common.

(2) Bye-laws purporting to regulate the right to pasture on lammas lands of a manor were made by the homage from time to time. The latest bye-law provided that freeholders & copyholders might depasture a number of cattle regulated by the number of acres they held; & that occupiers might also depasture a number of cattle regulated in a different mode by the number of acres they occupied. Some of the lammas land was taken for the purpose of public undertakings, & compensation paid in respect of the right to depasture. In an action by occupiers on behalf of themselves & other occupiers:—Held: they were not entitled to participate in the compensation. Such a claim could only be made by custom, by grant or by prescription. There could be no such custom giving a profit à prendre in alieno solo; there was no grant, & there could be no right by prescription, inasmuch as the claim would be against the owner of the land in respect of which the claim was made.—*AUSTIN v. 429. Need not be continuous—If without adverse interruption—Question for jury.—The interruption which defeats a prescriptive right under the above Act is an adverse obstruction, not a mere discontinuance of user by the claimant himself.

In a case under s. 1 of the above Act, if proof be given of a right enjoyed at the time of action brought, & thirty years before, but disused during any part of the intermediate time, it is always a question for the jury whether, at that time, the right had ceased or was still substantially enjoyed. The inference to be drawn from the facts proved, on this point, is not a presumption within s. 6 of the above Act.

Where a commoner had ceased to use the common during two years of the thirty, having no commonable cattle at the time, but had used it before & after:—Held: a jury were justified in finding a continued enjoyment of the right during thirty years.—CARR v. FOSTER (1812), 3 Q. B. 581; 2 Gal. & Dav. 753; 11 L. J. Q. B. 281; 6 Jur. 837; 114 E. R. 629.

442. What claim to right of common includes—Not claim to right of soil.—The claim to a right of common or profit referred to in s. 1 of the above Act means a claim to such right, & not a claim to the soil upon which the right is to be exercised. Consequently no right by prescription to a right of common or profit can be established by proof of enjoyment thereof for the period specified in the above sect. under a claim of right to the soil.

443. Sufficiency of evidence.]—The forest of H., at the time of the passing of Crown Lands Act, 1851 (c. 43), comprised certain open commonable lands, called K.'s Forest, in the parishes of B. & D., containing 2842 acres, & another tract of waste in the parishes of C., L., & S., consisting of 1104 acres, & also a piece of woodland called T.'s Hill, containing about 44 acres. The rest of the forest consisted of inclosed land in the five parishes. Hainault Forest (Allotment of Commons) Act, 1858 (c. 37), s. 6, enacted that the comr. appointed to carry the Act into execution should ascertain & determine by his award whether the rights of common, or any of them, extended indiscriminately over all the commonable lands which he might find to be situate within the boundaries of the late forest, including the unallotted portion of K.'s Forest, or whether such rights, or any of them, were limited to the commons in the particular parish, district or place in which were situate the lands in respect of which the rights were claimed, or what was the nature of such rights. The evidence as to the rights of common of the commoners of the five parishes consisted of acts of user for more than sixty years previously to & down to the time of the disafforestation, & was to this effect, that a reeve was appointed for each of the five parishes, whose duty it was to mark the cattle of the persons entitled to common in their respective parishes; that the marking usually took place near the boundary of K.'s Forest, & within the parish to which the cattle so marked belonged; that the cattle were generally turned out at the spot where they were marked, & then went where they pleased, those turned on to K.'s Forest straying all over the other commonable land in the forest in the parishes of C., L., & S., & those turned on to the commonable lands in those parishes straying over K.'s Forest. The comr. by his award found that "the rights of common which are exercisable in respect of those parts or districts of the five parishes which lie within the boundaries of the forest, as ascertained, are exercised exclusively over the commons or commonable land hereinbefore mentioned situate within such parishes, including K.'s Forest; & that the rights of common, or any of them, are not limited to the commons in the particular parish, district, or place in which are situate the lands in respect of which the rights are claimed; but that the rights claimed for each of the parishes, districts or places, extend indiscriminately & generally over all the commons or commonable land in each & every of the parishes, districts, or places, including K.'s Forest":—Held: the decision of the comr. was warranted by the evidence & the matter within his jurisdiction.

As to T.'s Hill, the evidence of user was similar to that relating to the rest of the uninclosed lands, but it appeared in addition that, in 1827, fifteen acres of it had been inclosed by a former owner without interruption, & that, in 1856, other eight acres of it had been exchanged by the present owner for other land belonging to the Comrs. of Woods & Forests, & that the residue was then inclosed together with the land acquired by the exchange:—Held: there was nothing in the evidence to take T.'s Hill out of the general decision of the comr.—Re HAINAULT FOREST ACT,

452. —.]—A lost grant cannot be presumed where such a grant would have been in contravention of a statute.

By an Act providing for the inclosure of certain commons, & their drainage in connection with that of a larger area in a fen level, as a work of public utility, it was enacted that the herbage on roads to be set out under the Act should belong to the person or persons to whom the Inclosure Comrs. should by their award allot the same, & that in their award the comrs. should insert such orders, regulations & determinations, to be observed & followed by the several proprietors, as should be necessary or proper to be inserted therein, for the completing & maintaining of the drainage & inclosure. By their award the comrs. awarded that the herbage on certain roads, which adjoined watercourses, should belong to the surveyor of highways, to be by him let annually for the depasturing of sound & healthy sheep, but of no other cattle or stock whatever. The surveyors of highways had for more than fifty years made a practice of letting the herbage on the roads for the depasturing of a certain number of horses & cattle as well as sheep:—Held: the prohibition of the pasturage on the roads of stock other than sheep was intended to be a permanent provision, & was meant not merely for the protection of the allottees of land under the Act, but also for the preservation of the drainage system in the public interest, & it was not competent for the allottees or any body of persons to make a grant or release in favour of the surveyor of highways, so as to extend the right of pasturage to stock other than sheep; & a legal origin could not be presumed in order to support the practice of the surveyors of highways.—*NEAVERSON v. 498. Manorial records—Signed by some copy-holders.]—Parchment writings preserved amongst the muniments of a manor, dated in 1698 & 1717, purporting to be signed by many persons, copy-holders of the manor, stating an unlimited right of common in the commoners, which having been found inconvenient, they had agreed to stock the common in a certain restricted manner, is evidence of reputation as to the general right, sufficient to destroy the restricted right set up by pltf., a copyholder, in an action on the case against a freeholder of the manor for overstocking the common beyond such stint: although it was objected that the instrument was not proved to have been signed by a majority of the then copyholders of the manor, nor that pltf. held the copyhold tenement of any one of those who had signed it.]—

502. Crown survey.]—The lord of a manor having attempted to inclose a portion of the waste, a bill was filed against him by one of the tenants, who was both a freeholder & a copyholder of the manor, on behalf of himself & all the other freehold & copyhold tenants of the manor, to obtain a declaration of their rights to common over the waste, & to restrain the lord from inclosing any portion of the common:—Held: (1) pltf. was entitled to sue on behalf of all the freeholders & copyholders of the manor; (2) the burden of proof that after making the proposed inclosure, a sufficiency of the waste would be left to satisfy the commonable rights of the tenants, lay upon the lord, the tenants having in the first instance established their right to common.

(3) A survey made by the direction of the Crown in 1607, when the manor belonged to the Duchy of C., was produced in evidence, but the commission on which it was founded had not been produced, & could not be found:—Held: admissible.—*SMITH v. 541. Right to compel specific performance—Moor vested in trustees by statute—For benefit of inhabitants.]—Lands of a moor were vested in trustees by Act of Parliament, which provided that “all actions & suits by or on behalf of the trustees against any persons or bodies might be prosecuted in the name of one as nominal plff., on behalf of the inhabitants of the parish.” A railway co. took lands & paid money into ct., & gave a bond under 1845 Act & took possession. They ultimately agreed in writing to pay a certain sum, but failing to complete, a bill was filed by one of the trustees on behalf of the inhabitants for specific performance, setting out the clause of the Act giving power to sue:—Held: a demurrer for want of equity to this bill must be overruled.—CRANSTONE v. SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

543. Compensation payable to commoners—Appointment of surveyor to ascertain—Onus on promoters—Not commoners.]—Where the promoters of an undertaking acquire by conveyance from the lord of the manor, the right in the soil of any lands subject to any rights of common, but no effectual meeting is held for the appointment of a committee by the commoners, to agree with the promoters as to the amount of compensation for the extinguishment of their commonable rights, it is the duty of the promoters, and not of the commoners, to take the initiative in getting a surveyor appointed by justices, to determine the amount of compensation.

Where the promoters fail to do so, and enter upon the land without payment or deposit of compensation to the commoners, whose rights of common are disturbed by the promoters, any such commoner may maintain an action against the promoters for the injury thereby sustained.—*STONEHAM v. 2. APPORTIONMENT AND APPLICATION OF PURCHASE-MONEY.

A. Who Entitled and in what Proportions.

546. Copyholders & freeholders of manor—Entitled to common of pasture under bye-law—In proportion to stint laid down in bye-law.]—In 1835 certain bye-laws of a manor were passed, which provided that every copyholder & freeholder of lands & tenements within the manor should be entitled to common of pasture for one head of cattle for every £10 annual value of his lands & tenements, provided always that the whole number of cattle to any one copyholder or freeholder should not exceed thirty, & that each copyholder or freeholder should, on or before Aug. 12 in every year, claim such right; in default of such claim same should be transferable to the occupiers of such lands or tenements respectively in ratable proportions, in addition to their own rights as occupiers; & that every occupier of any copyhold or freehold lands or tenements within the manor should be entitled to common of pasture, when his or her rent or annual value was at or under £10 a year, to three head of cattle, & so on in proportion of three head of cattle up to the value of £50, after which there was to be only one head of cattle for every £5 of value. Portions of the common lands were purchased by the E. Waterworks Co. & other cos., & the purchase-money, amounting to about £4,000, paid into ct. A suit was instituted to determine the rights of the parties in the £4,000:—Held: the fund was divisible among the copyhold tenants of the manor & the freeholders within it, according to the stint fixed by the first of the above clauses.—*FOX v. 551. Application of purchase-money—By investment for benefit of commoners—Division refused—Commoners resident freemen of borough.]—Every resident freeman of the borough of B. had the right of annually turning on to the Freemen's Commons, allotted under an Inclosure Act of 1795 to the corpn., as trustees of the allotment, in lieu of certain rights of common of resident freemen, one head of stock for a period fixed from time to time by the town council, subject to a payment annually fixed by the town council for every head of stock so turned on; this right was transferable. A portion of the Freemen's Common having been taken by a railway co., on a bill to obtain the direction of the ct. as to the application of the purchase-money, filed by the committee appointed under Lands Clauses Act, 1845, s. 102:—Held: the present resident freemen were not entitled to have the corpus of the purchase-money divided amongst them; the proper course would be to invest the money in land, to be held in trust for the freemen from time to time resident within the borough; in the meantime the money ought to be invested, & the dividends paid to such resident freemen at the same time in each year as they had been accustomed to enter upon the enjoyment of their rights of common.—NASH v. COOMBS (1868), L. R. 6 Eq. 51; 37 L. J. Ch. 600; 32 J. P. 612; 16 W. R. 663.

were entitled to receive three guineas each for their costs.—WATERLOW v. BURT (1870), 18 W. R. 683.

553. Proof that all parties interested present before court—All persons found commoners by court baron of manor.—On an application for payment out of ct. of a sum of £122, paid into ct. by the P. Urban District Council, under 1845 Act, s. 107, as compensation for the extinction of certain commonable rights over a portion of H. Moor, acquired by the council under the powers conferred by Paignton Urban District Water Act, 1900, which incorporated the 1845 Act, the two questions that had to be decided were, firstly, whether the ct. had jurisdiction to order the payment out otherwise than to a committee of the commoners; & secondly, whether there was sufficient evidence that the parties before the ct. were the only persons entitled. The land in question formed part of the common of a manor, & a ct. baron had been held to ascertain of whom the commoners consisted; all the persons found to be commoners by the ct. baron were before the ct.:—Held: (1) 1845 Act, Inclosure Act, 1854 (c. 97), & Commonable Rights Compensation Act, 1882 (c. 15), were all applicable; (2) there was sufficient evidence that all the parties interested were present.—Re GERVIS (1902), 46 Sol. Jo. 336.

554. Proof of right—What is admissible evidence.—In an action in the Ch. Div. by a statutory committee of commoners for specific performance of an agreement to purchase commonable rights, an order was made directing the trial before a jury in the Q. B. Div. of the following issue of fact, namely, whether a certain piece of land was common land or subject to any commonable rights either of the commoners of the parish of C., or of the commoners of the parish of L.:—Held: evidence of reputation was admissible on the trial of such an issue.—EVANS v. MERTHYR TYDFIL URBAN COUNCIL, [1899] 1 Ch. 211; 68 L. J. Ch. 175; 79 L. T. 578; 43 Sol. Jo. 151, C. A.

555. Committee of commoners—Or Board of Agriculture—Court has no jurisdiction—Except in cases of misconduct.—Under 1845 Act, & Inclosure Act, 1854, where common lands are taken for a public undertaking, the committee of commoners appointed to receive the compensation money payable in respect of the extinguishment of commonable rights, or, in cases of difficulty, the Board of Agriculture, as the successors of the Inclosure Comrs., are the proper tribunal to determine who are the persons interested in such money, & what are their interests, & in the absence of misconduct, the ct. has no original power to interfere with the jurisdiction of either body. An action against a committee of commoners by a person who claimed to be entitled as sole commoner to the whole of the compensation money in their hands was dismissed for want of jurisdiction.—RICHARDS v. DE WINTON, RICHARDS v. EVANS, [1901] 2 Ch. 566; 70 L. J. Ch. 719; 84 L. T. 831; 65 J. P. 696; 50 W. R. 87; affd., [1903] 1 Ch. 507, C. A.

It is sufficient that the committee is a de facto committee.

Part IX: Rights, Remedies and Liabilities of Lord of Manor as Owner of Soil.

SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

557. General rule.—In an action for trespass for breaking & entering pltf.'s close, & treading down the grass, etc., & breaking & destroying the hedges & fences of pltf., etc., deft. as to all the trespasses, pleaded that pltf.'s close was parcel of the manor of C., & that a certain messuage & four acres of land was parcel, & a customary tenement of that manor, & that there was, & from time whereof, etc., there had been a custom within the manor that the customary tenant of that tenement should have common of pasture upon pltf.'s close; that J., being seised of the customary tenement, having occasion to use his common of pasture, entered the close in which, etc., & put his cattle in, & because the hedges & fences had been improperly erected, deft. threw them down. Pltf. in his replication took issue upon the custom, & new assigned that deft. entered for other purposes than those mentioned in the plea:—Held: (1) upon the issue joined upon the replication, pltf. was at liberty to prove a custom for the lord of the manor to inclose parcels of the waste, & a grant to him of the locus in quo under such custom, & it was not necessary that that custom should be specially replied; (2) a custom for the lord of a manor to inclose the waste without limit or restriction, being inconsistent with the rights of the commoners, was bad in point of law, but that a custom to inclose, even as against common of turbary, parcels of the waste, leaving a sufficiency of common, was good, & it lay on the lord, or his grantee, to show that a sufficiency of common was left; (3) when the lord or his grantee erects fences upon the common, the commoner may by law destroy the fences, & the fact of deft. having entered upon pltf.'s close, & thrown down the whole of the fences which he had erected, when he might have entered upon the close without throwing down any part of the fences, was not evidence that he entered for other purposes than those mentioned in the plea, & did not warrant the jury in finding a verdict for pltf. on the new assignment.

(4) The lord has rights of his own reserved upon the waste; I do not say subservient to, but concurrent with, the rights of the commoners. He has a right to stock the common, & to every benefit to be derived from the soil, not inconsistent with the rights of commoners. When it is ascertained that there is more common than is necessary for the cattle of the commoners, the lord, as it seems to me, is entitled to take that for his own purposes (BAYLEY, J.). —ARLETT v. ELLIS (1827), 7 B. & C. 316; 9 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 897; 5 L. J. O. S. K. B. 301; 108 E. R. 752; subsequent proceedings (1829), 9 B. & C. 671.

Common managed by committee of commoners.] --
 A pond which was part of a common of a manor was a nuisance. The copyhold tenants had been in the habit of appointing a committee of themselves, with the assent of the lord of the manor, to manage & regulate the common:—Held: under Nuisances Removal Act, 1855 (c. 121), s. 12, the lord of the manor was not the proper party against whom to proceed for abating the nuisance.—

(2) Seemle: a custom for any person, not merely any copyholder, to kill rabbits on a manor without molestation would be on the face of it unreasonable.

(3) The lord of the manor by deed leased the right to train & gallop horses on the waste of the manor: - Held: the lord would not be liable for damage done to the rights of common of pasturage of the copyholders by the lessee, unless it was proved that the lessee caused the damage as the lord's agent or with his licence.

580. ——— Sufficiency determined by rights of commoners—Not by number of sheep actually on common.]—In an action brought on behalf of all the tenants of a manor to restrain the lord inclosing parts of the waste, & from digging or removing any part of the soil of the waste, so as to interfere with their rights of common, it was shown that the tenants had rights of common of pasturage appendant over the waste for sheep, & that certain landowners not tenants of the manor had rights of common appurtenant over it for sheep, & that such rights appendant & appurtenant entitled the commoners to turn out a greater number of sheep than the waste would carry, but it was also shown that having regard to the average number of sheep which had been turned out for many years it was highly improbable that nearly as many sheep as the waste could carry would ever be turned out upon it:—Held: (1) the question whether there was a sufficiency of common must be determined, not according to the average number of sheep which the commoners had for a great number of years been in the habit of turning out, but according to the aggregate number of sheep which they were entitled to turn out; there was therefore not a sufficiency of common, & the lord ought to be restrained from doing any acts which would diminish the amount of pasturage.

(2) Qu.: whether, in ascertaining sufficiency of common, regard ought to be had to the present & modern system of sheep farming, according to which the sheep do not while turned out get all their sustenance from the common.—*ROBERTSON v. Defts. pleaded not guilty, & also several justifications; one, under a right of common, to which plff. replied a right of approving in the lord, leaving a sufficiency of common; another, under a right of digging sand or gravel upon the waste, which was traversed by the replication. Defts. also pleaded a custom within the manor, that if any person has been desirous to approve or inclose any part of the waste of the manor, obtaining the consent & licence of the lord, he might be presented by the homage of the ct. baron at a general ct., & if the homage thought that such inclosure would be of no prejudice to any of the tenants, etc. of the manor, it had been the custom to present that such person, so obtaining the consent & licence of the lord, might inclose the parcel of the waste, & a fine or rent had been set on such person by the homage; the plea then stated that the homage had not presented any such person, etc. Replication, that the lord had a right to inclose the said parcel under the Stat. Merton, & did approve same, there being left common sufficient to all persons having a right, etc. To this defts. demurred severally:—Held: the right of the lord to approve was a common law right & was not abridged by the custom giving the tenants a right of inclosing under certain restrictions.—DUBERLEY v. 620. ——— Custom.]—(1) Where the lord of a manor has appropriated by leasing & also has granted out by copy of court roll portions of the waste, the fact that there has been a sufficiency of common of pasture during ten years is evidence that the inclosures have not interfered with the rights of the commoners.

In 1751 the lord of the manor of C. demised a brick-kiln then standing on the waste thereof, with liberty to inclose a piece of land not exceeding half an acre, & to dig earth for the use of the kiln; this lease, after its expiration, was renewed from time to time, & meanwhile leases of other parts of the waste were granted for the purpose of erecting thereon kilns & of digging clay. During the currency of the lease made in 1751 presentments were made by the homage of encroachments on the waste by strangers, but no objection was made to the granting of the leases, & the commoners bought bricks at the kilns:—Held: (2) the granting of the leases ought to be referred to a legal origin; (3) there was evidence sufficient to establish that the lord of the manor had by custom the right to approve, so that he left a sufficiency of turbary and estovers to the commoners.

By a deed, made in 1614, certain copyhold land of the manor of C. was enfranchised, & thereby the lord granted to M. all & all manner of turbaries, digging & carrying of turfs, estovers, & common of estovers, heath, & fern . . . in such sort, nature, quality, & condition as the freeholders & tenants in free socage of the said manor, within the parish of C. had used & enjoyed same:—Held: (4) the terms of the deed afforded no evidence that at the time of its execution the freeholders of the manor had larger rights of common than the copyholders; (5) the deed did afford evidence that the grant of common of turbary & estovers to M. was made subject to the customs of the manor; & the lord could approve as against the successor in title of M.

The court rolls of the manor of C. contained twelve entries relating to grants by the lord of parcels of the waste; the entries commenced in 1664 & ended in 1858, with a break of many years, & in ten of them it was stated that the homage consented to the grant; the land included in the whole of these grants amounted to rather more than 51 acres, the extent of the waste being about 4,500 acres. The homage was composed wholly of copyholders:—Held: (6) the entries afforded evidence of a custom within the manor to grant parcels of the waste with the consent of a homage of copyholders; (7) the custom was valid as against the freeholders having rights of common over the waste. LASCELLES v. ONSLOW (LORD) (1877), 2 Q. B. D. 433; 46 L. J. Q. B. 333; 36 L. T. 459; 11 J. P. 436; 25 W. R. 496, D. C.

It was proved that pltf. & the other freehold tenants within the present ambit of the manor had commonable rights, & that the copyholders of the manor had also commonable rights, but it was not proved that the owners of freehold tenements within the former ambit had such rights:—Held: (1) the joining as pltf. the owners of freehold tenements within the former ambit amounted merely to a misjoinder of pltf., & did not prevent the ct. from making a decree upon the bill; (2) though pltf. might have sued on behalf of the copyholders also, if they had rights co-extensive with those of the freeholders, he was able to maintain his bill on behalf of the freeholders alone; (3) where the lord claims a right to inclose a part of the waste, the onus of showing that sufficient waste is left for the commoners lies upon the lord.—*BERTS v. freehold tenants of the manor brought an action on behalf of themselves & all other freehold tenants against the lord of the manor to restrain him from further infringement of their rights. In a special case stated in that action:—Held: (1) the above Act applied only to agreements by persons entitled to common of pasture, & not to agreements by persons who were the owners of the bushes & underwood; (2) the agreement of 1769 was inoperative against such owners; (3) the lord had no right to inclose as against them.—NICHOLLS v. Part X.—Rights and Remedies of Commoners.

SECT. 1.—NATURE OF REMEDY.

SUB-SECT. 1.—WHETHER ACTION OR ABATEMENT PROPER REMEDY.

642. General rule.]—The commoners of a manor may abate a nuisance, which wholly excludes them from exercising their rights of common over the lord's waste, without first resorting to the cts. for relief. But if the nuisance only amounts to a partial exclusion, a sufficiency of common being left for the exercise of common rights, the commoners ought not to take the law into their own hands, their proper remedy is to apply to the cts. for a declaration of their rights. This rule applies whether the right of common alleged to be infringed is for common of pasture, or of turbary, or of estovers.

Where tenants of a manor in assertion of a claim to common of turbary & of estovers over certain heath lands, alleged to be waste of the manor, entered on the heath lands & cut down trees, there being sufficient heath lands for the exercise of the rights claimed, if any:—Held: the trespass was unjustifiable & the lord was entitled to an injunction & damages.—HOPE v. 693. Who bound—One of class not personally party to action—Defended by representative defendants.]—A suit was instituted in the Ct. of Ch. by plffs. on behalf of themselves & all other occupiers of lands & tenements within E. Forest, against, amongst others, the lord of a manor within that forest & two grantees from that lord of part of the wastes of the manor. Plffs. claimed to be entitled to rights of common over the wastes of the manor, & alleged that the lord of the manor inclosed or authorised the inclosure of large portions of the waste, so as to interfere with the rights of common, & had granted other portions of the waste to persons who made similar inclosures, & that such persons were too numerous to be made parties to the suit but were sufficiently represented by the two grantees made defts. A decree was made establishing the right of common claimed, & granting an injunction. After Jud. Acts came into operation, plffs. filed a supplemental statement of claim against another grantee from the lord, seeking to have the benefit of the decree against him, & an injunction:—Held: (1) deft. was bound by the decree in the suit, & could not litigate the right of common thereby established.

(2) Epping Forest Amendment Act, 1872 (c. 95), which was passed during the pendency of the suit, provided that no new legal proceeding, except such supplemental or amended bills as might be filed by plffs. for the purpose of making the suit effectual, should be instituted, brought or taken respecting the matters in question except with the leave of the E. Forest Comrs.: Held: assuming that Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 76, enabled plffs. to institute a supplemental action in a proper case under the former Act, the present statement of claim was not supplemental, & ought not to have been delivered without the leave of the comrs.—SEWERS COMRS. SUB-SECT. 2.—AGAINST FELLOW—

A. Right of Action.

731. For what action lies—General rule.]—One commoner can maintain an action against a fellow-commoner for wrongful acts by which the former's right of common is destroyed or interfered with, or which unless stopped would grow into a legal right to the prejudice of the rights of common of the other commoners.

Defts., who were only entitled to have common of pasture for their cattle levant & couchant over the waste of the manor, were carting goods & refuse to & from their tenement over, & depositing refuse on, a part of the waste of the manor, & admittedly intended to acquire a right of way by prescription:—Held: they could be restrained by injunction at the suit of a fellow-commoner, & he need not prove actual pecuniary damage.—KING v. BROWN, DURANT & Co., [1913] 2 Ch. 416; 82 L. J. Ch. 548; 109 L. T. 69; 29 T. L. R. 691; 57 Sol. Jo. 754.

741. ——— Not where cattle on common by colour of right—Common of vicinage.]—The principle laid down in Hall v. Harding (No. 739, ante), that one commoner cannot distrain the cattle of another commoner because they come upon the commonable land by colour of right, applies to common pur cause de vicinage as well as to common appurtenant.—*CAPE v. Annotations:—Consd. Atkinson v. Teasdale (1772), 3 Wils. 278; Wells v. Watling (1779), 2 Wm. Bl. 1233. I always thought the doctrine of Lord Coke, in Marys's Case, that there must be a loss of the common in order to maintain this action, a singular doctrine of his own, & not any part of the judgment of the ct.; the injury consists in preventing the enjoyment of the common tam amplo modo (GOULD, J.). Any act that will ground a per quod, & lessen the profit of the common, will support an action against the commoner. Nor do I see anything singular or repugnant to this, in the doctrine of Marys's Case (BLACKSTONE, J.). Pryce v. Belcher (1846), 3 C. B. 58; Robertson v. Hartopp (1889), 43 Ch. D. 484; King v. Brown, Durant, [1913] 2 Ch. 416. Refd. Jeveson v. Moor (1700), 12 Mod. Rep. 262; Hall v. Harding (1769), 4 Burr. 2426; Pindar v. Wadsworth (1802), 2 East, 154. In Wells v. Watling ((1779), 2 Wm. Bl. 1233) GOULD, J. questioned the doctrine of Lord Coke in Marys's Case (GROSE, J.). Mentd. Crouther v. Oldfield (1706), 1 Salk. 364; *Grinnell v. Annotations:—Consd. George v. Lysaght & Meade-King (1883), 49 L. T. 49; Robertson v. Hartopp (1889), 43 Ch. D. 484. Refd. Kitchen v. Knight (1821), M'Cle. 373; Bower v. Hill (1835), 1 Hodg. 15; Harrop v. Hirst (1868), 17 W. R. 164.

746. For damage to pasture—By person exercising lawful rights—Not actionable.—The owners of two closes immediately abutting upon a common, over which the freeholders of the manor had the right of depasturing their sheep & the inhabitants of the neighbourhood had the right of public recreation, caused damage to the freeholders of the manor by the lawful use of their premises in diminishing the turf of the common, which was already insufficient for the depasturing of the proper number of sheep. In an action for damages by the freeholders, who were commoners:—Held: there was no cause of action against the owners of the adjoining closes for the damage consequent upon the user of their premises, though resulting in the diminution of their rights of common.—GEORGE v. LYSAGHT & MEADE-KING (1883), 49 L. T. 49; 47 J. P. 696.

747. —By licensee of corporation—Having regulation of common under statute—Licence opposed by commoners.—By special Acts of 1774 & 1870 the right of resident freemen & widows of resident freemen of the town of N. to depasture two milch cows each on the Town Moor was established & regulated, the number of cows to be depastured in any one year on the moor being limited to eight hundred, & every freeman & widow of a freeman was entitled in Apr. of each year on application to their stewards & wardens to a stint ticket for two milch cows to be depastured on the moor, which was transferable to any resident inhabitant of the town, but no person was to hold more than ten such tickets. In 1912 the area of the moor available for pasturage was insufficient to carry the statutory number of cows. The Act of 1774 authorised the corpn. at the request of the stewards & wardens from time to time to grant leases of parts of the Town Moor for the purpose of improving the same, but s. 7 enacted that no lease should be granted of that part of the Town Moor called C. & such part adjoining the same as should be necessary for holding the C. fairs, nor of another part of the moor called the Race ground, nor of any part of the moor where any booths, stalls & other erections had been set up during the holding of the fairs or horse races, but the same should be reserved for fairs & horse races as theretofore. The Act of 1870, s. 6, constituted a committee of the stewards & wardens, to be elected annually, to act for the stewards & wardens & for the freemen & widows of freemen for all purposes relating to the Town Moor, & s. 8 authorised the committee & the corpn. from time to time to enter into agreements for the appropriation of parts of the Town Moor for not exceeding ten days at a time for agricultural shows or other public purposes. Prior to 1882 horse races with attendant roundabouts & shows had for many years been held on the race ground on the Town Moor, but in that year they were & ever since had been held elsewhere. From 1882 down to 1912 a temperance festival with attendant roundabouts & shows was annually held on the old race ground on the moor with the joint consent of the committee & of the corpn., & had grown into a very large gathering of many thousands of people. In 1912 the heavy traction engines used by defts. to bring their roundabouts & shows to the festival cut up the surface of the moor & seriously damaged the herbage; consequently, in 1913, the committee, while consenting to the festival being held as usual on the moor, declined to join with the corpn. in granting a licence to defts. to bring their roundabouts & shows on the moor for the festival. The corpn. nevertheless granted defts. a licence for that purpose, & damage ensued to the herbage. Most of the holders of stint tickets for the years 1912 & 1913 were not freemen but persons who had purchased tickets from freemen. In an action by the committee against defts. for an injunction to restrain them from bringing their roundabouts & shows on to the moor, & for damages, the corpn. not being parties to the action:—Held: (1) neither the horse races nor the temperance festival with the attendant roundabouts & shows was a fair within the meaning of the Act of 1774, s. 7; (2) the corpn. had no power under either of the Acts to grant the licence to defts. without the consent of plffs.; (3) defts. were trespassers & plffs. were entitled to an injunction against them & damages; (4) the measure of damages was the amount of injury to the herbage, irrespective of whether the stint ticket holders were or were not freemen.—WALKER v. MURPHY, [1915] 1 Ch. 71; 83 L. J. Ch. 917; 112 L. T. 189; 79 J. P. 137; 59 Sol. Jo. 88; 13 L. G. R. 109, C. A.

769. ——— Owner in fee of land to which common appendant—Also tenant for life of common land.]—In the year 1796 S. was seised in fee of a certain farm & also of an estate for life in a certain moor. In 1822, S. & the tenant in remainder joined in a conveyance of the moor to C. in fee, that he might be tenant to the praecipe for the purpose of suffering a recovery, in order to create a mtge. term, but no recovery was suffered. In 1827 S. became bkpt., & by subsequent conveyances his interest in the moor vested in deft., & his interest in the farm vested in pltf. S. always occupied the farm by his tenants who had enjoyed without interruption the right of depasturing their cattle on the moor. In the year 1856, deft. distrained pltf.'s cattle damage feasant when pltf. claimed the right of common by enjoyment as of right for the respective periods of sixty & thirty years mentioned in Prescription Act, 1832 (c. 71):—Held: (1) there was no unity of seisin to extinguish the easement or prevent its existence; (2) the title to the tenements was such that there could not, in point of law, have been an enjoyment of the right of common for the period of sixty years, as of right, for S. being owner in fee of the farm & also tenant for life & occupier of the common, the rights of the tenants of the farm over the common were derived from him, & as he could not have an enjoyment as of a right against himself within the meaning of the statute, so neither could his tenants; (3) the conveyance by S. in 1822 to make a tenant to the praecipe, made no difference & consequently the thirty years' claim could not be supported.—WARRBURTON v. 786. ——— For two years—Out of thirty.]—CARR v. FOSTER, No. 429, ante.

787. ——— For sixteen years & fourteen years—Evidence of common rights for over a hundred & fifty years.]—By Inclosure Act, 1845 (c. 118), s. 27, the comrs. were to set forth in their provisional order the terms on which the inclosure should be made, & if the lord of the manor was entitled to the soil of the land proposed to be inclosed, should specify the proportion of the land which should be allotted to the lord in respect of his right & interest in the soil, either exclusively or inclusively of his right to the mines, etc., under such land, or inclusively or exclusively of any right of pasturage which might have been usually enjoyed by such lord or his tenant. Pltf., the lord of a manor, was owner of the soil of the waste proposed to be inclosed, consisting of four tracts, & was also owner of seven farms of demesne lands. The provisional order directed that one-sixteenth part in value of the waste should be allotted to pltf. as lord of the manor in lieu of his right & interest in the soil, exclusively of his right to the mines, etc., under same:—Held: (1) right of pasturage which might have been usually enjoyed by the tenants, meant the quasi right of pasturage over the wastes of the manor enjoyed by the lord or his tenants in respect of his demesne lands in such a manner as would establish, in ordinary cases, an immemorial right of common; (2) the provisional order, being silent as to the right of pasturage, must be taken not to have included it in the allotment of one-sixteenth.

(3) Pltf. having sent in claims to pasturage over all four tracts in respect of his seven farms, objections were delivered to some of the claims, but no objection was sent in as to the claims over one of the tracts:—Held: by the scheme of the Act, the valuer & assistant comr. had no power to disallow the claims which were not objected to.

(1) In order to support a claim, made on the inclosure in 1860, in respect of one of the farms called M., over one of the tracts called F., it was proved that the farm was between three & four miles from F. The tenants of the farm, previous to 1826, were dead. The tenant, in 1828, turned a few horses on F. & also sixteen or eighteen sheep during the summer of that year, & a pony in 1844 & 1845. But the tenant did not keep a flock fit to be turned on F., & sheep were not sent to F., because there was better pasture on M. Sheep were also sent to F. during the years 1859, 1860, & 1861. Leases were produced from pltf.'s custody beginning in 1677, in which rights of common generally were granted to the tenants of M.; & in leases of 1727 & 1741 it was agreed that the tenant of M. should have a right of way for his cattle & sheep to & from F. over one of the other farms; & in a series of leases of that other farm from 1732 to 1791, there was a proviso that the tenants of M. should have this right of way:—Held: there was sufficient evidence of a right of pasturage usually enjoyed by the lord or his tenants. *MUSGRAVE v. 813. ———.]—Pltfs. were respectively the owners in fee simple of two properties in the parish of W., situated on the north side of a lane used by them as the nearest way to the village & railway station. A short distance from pltfs.' properties the lane became a patch of green & then forked off into two branches. Deft. was the owner of a property situated between the two branches, the southern boundary of which adjoined the patch of green with a fence between. Deft. had attempted to inclose the patch of green adjoining the end of his property, & by so doing had interfered with one of the branches of the lane. Pltfs. thereupon brought an action against him, claiming an injunction to restrain him from inclosing any part of the patch of green, on the ground, inter alia, that the patch of green was waste of the manor of W., & that they had rights of common of pasture & turbary thereon. It appeared that down to 1881 pltfs.' properties were freeholds of the manor of W. At that date the seignory thereof was released. Pltfs. alleged that their predecessors in title, freehold tenants of the manor, were entitled in respect of the two properties & over the wastes of the manor, including the patch of green, to rights of common of pasture & turbary thereon :—Held : although rights of common annexed to copyholds were extinguished on enfranchisement, there was no similar doctrine with reference to the extinguishment of rights of common on the release of seigniorial rights due by the freeholders of a manor, & pltfs.' rights of common had not been extinguished by the enfranchisement in 1881.—BROOME v. 842. ——— Whether doctrine applicable to copyholder.]—A copyhold was surrendered in 1809 to a trustee for the Crown for military purposes. In 1808 the then lord of the manor had granted to M., the governor of a neighbouring fort, a licence to inclose a portion of the waste adjoining the copyhold, & occupy it at a yearly rent during his life, if he so long continued governor, which he ceased to be in 1811. Nothing further was shown as to the title to the land included in the licence except that at the commencement of this action in 1874 the Crown had been in possession of it as inclosed ground, as well as of the original copyhold, for more than forty years. Since 1811 there had been repeated admittances of trustees for the Crown to the original copyhold, in which it was described by metes & bounds not including the close L. comprised in the licence. In 1874 the lord of the manor, without the consent of the Crown, granted a licence to get coprolites out of close L. at a royalty, & received £222 for royalties. The Crown brought an action for an injunction & damages. The tenant who held close L. under the Crown had separately received full compensation for surface damage, & the land had been restored to its original condition: Held: (1) assuming the doctrine that encroachments made by a lessee enure to the benefit of the landlord to be applicable to encroachments by a copyholder, the application of that doctrine was excluded by the facts that the inclosure of close L. having been made by licence from the lord was not an encroachment, & the subsequent admittances did not treat close L. as part of the copyhold tenement; (2) the Crown had under the Stat. Limitations acquired a freehold title to close L., & as the coprolites belonged to the Crown, the damages were not excessive.

Qu.: (3) whether the doctrine that encroachments made by a lessee enure to the benefit of the landlord is applicable to encroachments by a copyholder; (4) whether if close L. had been copyhold, a finding, which gave to the copyholder by way of damages the whole sum received by the lord for the coprolites, could have been sustained.—*A.-G. v. 848. ——— Subsequent grant by lord of manor.]—A tenant encroached on an adjoining waste, part of manor belonging to her son, a minor. On her son attaining his majority, the homage presented that she had encroached. She thereupon applied for & obtained from her son, the lord, a grant of the piece of land so encroached on. She never paid any rent for it, nor was any service ever rendered in respect of the grant. At the expiration of the tenancy, the landlord took possession, not only of the land demised, but of the piece of the waste encroached on. On ejectment by the lord of the manor:—Held: in the circumstances, the ordinary presumption of law that an encroachment made by a tenant is for the benefit of his landlord was rebutted; by the acceptance of the grant from the lord, the encroacher became his tenant, & the lord was entitled to succeed.—BERNEY v. BICKMORE (1863), 8 L. T. 353.

849. ——— Inclosure by licence.]—The lessee of certain premises for a term of ninety-nine years, dependent on four lives, inclosed, with the assent of the lessor given by word of mouth, a piece of adjoining waste which belonged to the lessor, as lord of the manor, on the understanding that the piece so inclosed should be treated as if comprised in the lease. Upon the determination of the lease, which was more than twenty-one years from the date of the inclosure, the reversioners brought ejectment to recover the land so inclosed from the tenant:—Held: the assent of the landlord to the inclosure of the additional piece of land did not create such a tenancy of the land as to bring the case within Real Property Limitation Act, 1833, s. 7, or prevent such inclosure from being an encroachment within the ordinary rule of law that an encroachment made by a tenant must be taken to be made for the benefit of the landlord, & treated as part of the demised premises; & consequently the statute did not begin to run till the determination of the lease, & plffs. were entitled to recover the land.—*WHITMORE v. 852. ——— ——— ——— Evidence insufficient.]—To raise the presumption that an encroachment on waste land by a tenant was made for the benefit of his landlord, it is not necessary that the land encroached upon should be contiguous or adjoining to, in the sense of conterminous with, the land held by him as tenant; it is enough if it be so near thereto that it may be presumed that his position as tenant enabled him to approve. Nor does the circumstance of the intervention of a small river & a fence & a narrow strip of waste between the holding & the encroachment rebut the prima facie presumption, though there be no direct access between the two across the stream. About forty years ago, A., a labourer, in the course of three years completed the inclosure of four acres of waste land of the manor of P., separated only by a small river and a narrow strip of the waste from a farm held by B. under the lord; & when the inclosure was completed, B. paid A. £4 10s., & took possession of the four acres, & occupied them with the farm. At the expiration of his term, B. claimed to be entitled to the fee simple of the four acres; & in ejectment by the lord, who claimed them as an encroachment by his tenant for his benefit, a verdict was taken for the plff., the whole matter being reserved for the consideration of the ct., who were to draw inferences of fact; the ct. drew the inference that the encroachment was made by A. as the servant of B.:—Held: there was nothing in the relative position of the inclosure & the farm to rebut the presumption that B. held the inclosure as part of the farm.—LISBURNIE (EARL) v. DAVIES (1866), L. R. 1 C. P. 259; Har. & Ruth. 172; 35 L. J. C. P. 193; 13 L. T. 795; 12 Jur. N. S. 340; 14 W. R. 333.

857. — Presumed after lengthy occupation—Coupled with acts of ownership.]—In 1739 it was agreed between the lord & freehold tenants of a manor, that no other part of the wastes of the manor should at any time thereafter be inclosed or built upon, unless by the mutual consent of the lord of the manor for the time being, & of the greater part in number & value of the freehold tenants of the said manor under their hands & seals, & in case of any improvements & inclosures by such consent that the same & all profits & advantages arising therefrom should belong to & be divided between the lord & freehold tenants in the proportions therein mentioned. The articles of agreement were confirmed by a private Act of Parliament passed in the same year. Persons were appointed by the lord & freeholders to receive the rents on their behalf, & books were kept showing how the rents were received & divided, in accordance with the provisions of the agreement. An entry appeared in one of these books in 1803 that R. paid a rent of £1 1s. in respect of certain premises which were there described as a stable; & it appeared from entries in the books that he continued to do so down to 1808, when the property then in tenancy was mentioned as held by D. at a yearly rent of £2 12s. 6d. In 1811 D. was entered as holding a coal warehouse at the rent of £4 10s. “now & in future.” In 1813 D. paid the same rent in respect of a coal & corn warehouse, & that rent was paid by D. & his successors in title until just before this action was brought:—Held: (1) a consent to the inclosure of the property in question, in accordance with the agreement, might in the circumstances be fairly assumed; (2) the result of possession under such consent was that a tenancy from year to year was created. *WELLER v. turbary; (b) of pasture. Replication, that the closes are parcel of S. Moss, within the manor of S.; that there are divers ancient messuages which had had common of turbary & pasture upon the waste. The replication then stated a custom within the manor of S., for the owners of S. Moss, by themselves, or their moss-reeves, to assign to the owners of such ancient messuages certain reasonable proportions of the moss-dales, to be by them held in severalty, for the purpose of getting turves, & after the moss-dales should have been cleared, the owners of the moss should hold them in severalty, discharged from all common of turbary & pasture. The replication then stated the clearing & approval of the closes accordingly. Rejoinder, traversing the custom, & verdict for plff. On motion in arrest of judgment it was objected, (a) that the custom was bad, as extending to messuages without the manor; (b) that it was bad, as repugnant to the right claimed in the plea; (c) that it was bad, as not being stated to extend to all the ancient messuages; (d) that it was bad, in stating that "reasonable proportions" were to be assigned:—Held: the custom, as stated in the replication, was good.—CLARKSON v. B. As to Sporting Rights.

880. Reservation of manorial sporting rights—Sporting rights extinguished—As incident to ownership of soil.]—To trespass quare clausum fregit, deft. pleaded, that by a private Act of Parliament, reciting that P. was lord of the manor of M. & as such lord, seised of the soil of the manor, common & waste lands in the parish of M. & that P. & others were proprietors of messuages etc., within the parish &, as such, entitled to rights of common over the waste lands, it was enacted, that the waste lands should be inclosed, that P. should have one-eighteenth part of them in compensation for his right to the soil, & that the rest should be allotted among the several proprietors of messuages etc., in lieu of their rights of common, provided that nothing in the Act should prejudice the right etc., of P., his heirs or assigns, to the seigniorial & royalties incident to the manor, but that P. his heirs etc. & all succeeding lords of the manor, should hold & enjoy all courts etc., fairs, markets, stallages, tolls, rights, royalties with free warren, & liberty of hunting, hawking, fishing & fowling etc. privileges, etc., matters & things whatsoever to the manor, or to the lord thereof for the time being, incident, belonging or appertaining. The plea then alleged that the allotment was duly made, that the locus in quo was allotted to I., who took possession of & occupied the same by virtue of the allotment, & that from thence until the time when, etc., the same had been possessed in severalty by I. & pltf. & those claiming under I.; that P., at the time of the passing of the Act, was seised of the manor of M. with the rights, royalties, & appurtenances thereunto belonging; that all the estate etc. of P. had come to deft.; & deft. being so seised justified the trespass, for the purpose of hunting & fowling:—Held: (1) whether the legal seisin of the freehold was vested in the lord until the execution of the award or not, the plea showed that pltf. was entitled to the exclusive possession of the close, which sufficiently enabled him to maintain trespass; (2) the right of hunting & fowling over the allotments of the common lands was not reserved to the lord by the clause in the inclosure Act, the object of that clause being to reserve to the lord all those manorial rights which he possessed before the inclosure, as lord, except the right to the soil; & the power of the lord to sport over a waste within his manor, being, not a licence or liberty, but a mode of enjoyment of his own property.—GREATHEAD v. MORLEY (1841), 3 Man. & G. 139; 3 Scott, N. R. 538; 10 L. J. C. P. 246; 133 E. R. 1090.

881. ———.]—An inclosure Act after directing one-sixteenth of the common land to be allotted to the lord of the manor as a compensation for his right to the soil, & the residue, with certain exceptions, among the commoners, contained a proviso that nothing in the Act should defeat, lessen or prejudice the right, title or interest of the lord to the mines & minerals in or under the commons, or to any seigniorial or royalties incident & belonging to the manor, the same being thereby reserved to the lord, with full power for him at all times to hold & enjoy all rents, fines, duties, customs & services, & all etc. & perquisites & liberty of hunting, coursing, fishing & fowling within & throughout the manor, & all goods & chattels of felons, treasure-trove, waifs, estrays, forfeitures, royalties, jurisdictions, franchises & privileges whatsoever to the manor incident or appertaining, other than & except such right as could or might be claimed by him as owner of the soil & inheritance of the commons, in as full, ample & beneficial manner, to all intents & purposes, as if the Act had not been passed. As owner of the soil of the commons, the lord had before the Act the free & exclusive right & liberty of shooting & killing game thereon, but there was no right of free chase or free warren within the manor:—Held: the lord retained no right to shoot over the allotments.—*BRUCE v. lands, & to allot the residue amongst other persons entitled to rights of common; & it was enacted that the several allotments should be vested in allottees respectively in full bar & satisfaction of all rights of common & other rights & interests whatsoever in, over & upon the lands, except such manorial rights as were thereafter reserved to the lady of the manor, her heirs & assigns; & that all rights of common should cease over the lands. The reservation clause provided that nothing in the Act contained should prejudice the right, title or interest of the lady of the manor, her heirs & assigns, in or to the seigniority of royalties incident or belonging to the manor, but that she might hold & enjoy all rents, quit-rents & other rents, reliefs, duties, customs, & services & all cts., perquisites, & profits of cts., rights of fishery, & liberty of hawking, hunting, coursing, fishing & fowling within the manor, & all tolls, fairs, marts, markets, stallage, goods & chattels of felons or deodans, etc., royalties, jurisdictions, franchises, matters & things whatsoever to the manor, or to the lord or lady thereof incident or belonging, or which had been theretofore held & enjoyed by the lady of the manor or any of her ancestors, other than & except such common right as could or might be claimed by the lady of the manor as owner of the soil & inheritance of the commons or waste grounds: Held: the Act did not reserve to the lady of the manor the right of shooting which she formerly possessed over the lands allotted under the Act by virtue of her ownership of the soil. —*SOWERBY v. The reservation clause provided that nothing in the Act contained should prejudice the right, title, or interest of the lord of the manor, his heirs & assigns, of, in, or to the coal, etc., under the allotments, or of, in, or to the seigniories & royalties, franchises, & liberties, incident & belonging to the manor; but that he might have, hold, take, & enjoy “all rents, services, cts., etc., piscaries, fishing, hunting, hawking & fowling, etc., & all other royalties, liberties, franchises, privileges, pre-eminences, jurisdictions, & appurtenances whatsoever to the barony & manors or to the lord or lady thereof for the time being incident, appertaining or belonging, or which have been anciently used, exercised, & enjoyed by the lord or lady of the barony or manors, other than & except such right of common, pasturage, & free warren in respect of conies, which was intended to be extinguished, as could or might be claimed by him, her, or them as owner of the soil of the moors, commons & waste grounds, in as full, ample, & beneficial manner as he could or might have held & enjoyed them in case the Act had not been passed. The clause then dealt with the reservation of minerals & gave all necessary wayleaves & powers of search & working to the lord. It did not appear whether before the Act there was a general right of free warren in the lord:—Held: the Act did not confer on or reserve to the lord an exclusive right of shooting game over the allotments.

884. Sporting rights not extinguished—Vested exclusively in the lord.—An Act of Parliament, for allotting the land of a stinted pasture of a manor for the purposes of improvement, in which manor there was no right of free warren, declared all the allotments freehold to all intents & purposes. It then reserved to the lord the right to mines, & the right to get the minerals, making compensation for damage to the herbage; it declared the allotment to him to be in full recompense & satisfaction for all his right & interest as lord of the manor in & to the residue of the stinted pasture. It provided that he should enjoy seigniories, royalties, etc., also right of hunting, shooting, fishing & fowling in, through & over the stinted pasture, & every part & allotment thereof, & all other seigniories to the lords of the manor belonging, except those barred by the Act, in as full & ample a manner as if the Act had not been passed:—Held: the lord still possessed the exclusive right of hunting, shooting, etc., over the allotments.—*EWART v. Act an allotment was directed of certain waste lands; by s. 21 the mines, etc., under the allotments were not to be taken into the valuation of the allotments, they being reserved to the lord; by s. 32, subject to the reservations in the Act, the allotments were to be the freeholds of the allottees; by s. 31 it was provided that the lord should have all rents etc., piscaries, fishing, hunting, hawking, & fowling, & all beasts & birds considered as game etc., & all other royalties, liberties, privileges, franchises, pre-eminences, jurisdictions & appurtenances in as ample a manner as they were then or had been theretofore used, exercised & enjoyed by him, or as he “might or could have held, used, etc., the same” in case the Act had not been passed; that sect. contained no reference to mines, but s. 35 reserved them to the lord, with certain powers of search & working. Before the Act there was no right of free warren in the lord:—Held: the Act reserved to the lord an exclusive right of sporting over the allotments.—LECONFIELD (LORD) v. DIXON (1867), L. 886. Waste converted into stinted pasture—Rights of game reserved—Rights of shooting vested in lord.—A manor, with all the wastes & rights of sporting etc. was conveyed to trustees in trust for the owners of ancient tenements within the manor. By an award confirmed by an inclosure Act, the waste of the manor was converted into a stinted pasture; a certain number of stints were allotted to the trustees as lords in trust of the manor, & a proportionate number to each freeholder, ancient or otherwise. The award provided that the right & interest in all mines under the lands to be inclosed also the right to all manor game upon the said lands be not in any way affected or interfered with by the inclosure; & that all persons entitled to such mines & game had the same right of entry & other rights as heretofore used & enjoyed:—Held: the effect of the award coupled with 1815 Act, s. 116 was to pass the soil in the stints to the lords in trust & the freeholders as tenants in common & to leave the right of shooting in the lords so that the right was severed from the soil & became an incorporeal right in gross.—HILTON & WALKERFIELD OVERSEERS v. BOWES OVERSEERS (1866), L. R. 1 Q. B. 359; 7 B. & S. 223; 35 L. J. M. C. 137; 14 L. T. 512; 14 W. R. 368.

887. — Right of game not reserved—Exclusive right of shooting divested from lord.]—By an inclosure Act, the comrs. were authorised to apportion to the lord of the manor, in satisfaction for his right & interest as such lord, a certain quantity of the waste in cattlegates. By a subsequent sect., reciting that the waste was of such small value as not to bear the expense of being allotted, the comrs. were empowered to set it out in one inclosure, & to regulate the stint among the owners of land entitled to rights of common, awarding them sheepgates in proportion to their several rights. The proprietors or persons entitled to the greater part of the sheepgates were then empowered, with the consent of the lord, to appoint comrs. to divide this stinted pasture into allotments to & amongst the proprietors of the said common or waste land, in proportion to their respective rights & interests therein. A further sect. reserved to the lord the right to enjoy, search for, & work all mines, minerals, & other rights & privileges in the waste, except the right to the soil thereof, for which a compensation was thereinbefore directed to be made, in as full, ample, & beneficial a manner as if the Act had not been made:—Held: the effect of the Act was to take from the lord the right to the soil of the waste & with it the exclusive right of sporting thereon.—*ROBINSON v. 888. Express reservation of rights & royalties to lord—Mines under allotment to tenant not included.]—By the terms of an inclosure Act, for inclosing the wastes of a manor, a certain portion was to be made to the lord in lieu of his right & interest in the soil, & the residue was to be allotted to the several tenants in fee, discharged from all customary tenures, etc.:—Held: a saving clause, reserving to the lord all seigniories incident to the manor, & all rents, fines, services, etc., & all other royalties & manorial jurisdictions whatever, did not reserve mines under those allotments to the tenants, though there was a subsisting lease of such mines at the time the Act passed, granted by the lord of the manor.—*TOWNLEY v. 889. Implied reservation of mineral rights—Lord to pay compensation—On entering on allotments to dig minerals.]—At the time an inclosure Act passed, the soil & freehold of a common thereby allotted were vested in the lord of the manor, subject to certain rights of pasture. The coal & minerals & unopened stone quarries under the surface of the common also belonged to the lord as part of the freehold, & he was entitled to work the mines. The Act did not recite the particular rights of the lord, but enacted that certain allotments should be made to the commoners in lieu of their rights, & to him for his right as lord to & in the soil of the said common, & also to & for the damage he would sustain by being obliged to make satisfaction to the proprietors of the lands inclosed, for digging for any coals or minerals: it also enacted that if the lord should enter upon any of the lands for the purpose of digging "any coals or other minerals," he should make satisfaction to the proprietors of the lands for damage done. The Act contained no clause in express terms excepting the mines & minerals:—Held: (1) the Act, by necessary implication, reserved to the lord his right to the mines & minerals under the land so inclosed; (2) he was entitled to work them, paying compensation to the owners of the surface for damage thereby done; (3) stones dug from quarries are minerals.—MICKLETHWAIT v. WINTER (1851), 6 Exch. 644; 20 L. J. Ex. 313; 17 L. T. O. S. 185; 155 E. R. 701.

890. Minerals—Includes all "fossil" bodies.]—Certain waste lands in the manor of S., to the soil of which, & everything constituting the soil, the lord of the manor was entitled, were, by an inclosure Act, which recited the lord's title, taken away from the lord & allotted to the commoners, except as saved by a clause reserving to the lord all mines & minerals, of what nature or kind soever, lying & being within or under the commons & waste grounds, in as full, ample & beneficial a manner, to all intents & purposes, as he could or might have held & enjoyed the same in case the Act had not been made; & providing that he should & might at all times thereafter have, hold, win, work & enjoy exclusively all mines & minerals, of what nature or kind soever, within & under the commons & waste grounds, with full liberty of digging, sinking, searching for, winning, & working the mines & minerals, & carrying away the lead ore, lead, coals, iron-stone, & fossils, to be gotten thereout, provided that the lord, in searching for & working the mines & minerals, should keep the first layer or stratum of earth separate & apart by itself, without mixing the same with the lower strata. S. 33 provided for reimbursement to the owners of allotments, for injury done by searching for or working the mines & minerals:—Held: (1) the reservation clause must be construed with reference to the title of the lord to the whole of the soil; (2) inasmuch as the object of the Act was to give to the commoners the surface for cultivation, & leave in the lord what it did not take away for that purpose, the word "minerals" must be understood, not in its general sense, signifying substances containing metals, but in its proper sense, as including all fossil bodies or matters dug out of mines, that is, quarries or places where anything is dug; notwithstanding the provision in the latter part of the clause, authorising the carrying away the "lead ore, lead, coal, iron-stone, & fossils," as fossils might apply to stones dug in quarries; (3) the clause reserved to the lord the right to the stratum of stone in the inclosed lands.—*WAINMAN v. The Act gave the Comrs. of Woods & Forests the right to sell the allotment made to the King, subject to the rights of the King to the mines, ores, minerals, coal, limestone, or matter whatsoever in or under the same, & contained a proviso reserving to the King his rights to any mines, ores, minerals, coal, limestone or slate in the common land, & all rights & royalties previously belonging to the King, & gave a right of compensation to the owners of the land for any damage done in digging, raising, & carrying away such mines, etc.:—Held: (1) the word "minerals" included granite; (2) the Crown was entitled to win the granite by open workings, making compensation for any surface damage done.—*A.-G. v. 893. — — — — —.—(1) "Soil":—Held: to mean "surface."

A local inclosure Act, after reciting in its preamble that the lord of the manor was entitled to the soil of the wastes thereof, & all mines & minerals in or under the same, directed allotments to be set out, with the ground & soil thereof, for public & specific purposes, & empowered the comr. to set out & sell a sufficient portion of the wastes to defray the expenses of the inclosure. It then directed one-sixteenth of the remainder of the wastes to be allotted to the lord, as a compensation for his interest in the soil, over & above such proportion as he should be entitled to as owner & the residue of the wastes to be divided, set out & allotted amongst the owners & proprietors included in the Act. The Act reserved to the lord all mines & minerals under the lands thereby directed to be divided & inclosed, except such parts as were set out for public & specific purposes, with full working powers. Powers were reserved to the lord not only to exercise such rights as he had before the Act, but also upon making compensation to do things which he could not have done before the Act, in as full & ample a manner as he could have done if the lands had remained open & uninclosed, & the Act had not been passed.

Inclosure Act, 1801 (c. 109), s. 32, incorporated with the local Act, so far as not controlled by the latter, enacted, that every allotment set out & sold to a purchaser to defray the expenses of any local inclosure should be absolutely discharged from all common & other right thereon or therein, & be vested in the purchaser in fee as his absolute property:—Held: (2) the local Act dealt with surface rights only, leaving the lord's right to the mines untouched; (3) the comr. had no control over & was not competent to convey the minerals under the lands sold to pay expenses; (4) the rights reserved to the lord were not restricted to such acts as he might have done before the Act; (5) the lord was entitled to work the mines under the lands sold to such an extent as might reach to the utter destruction of the land sold, subject only to a liability to pay compensation for damage done.—*WAKEFIELD v. 894. — — — — —.—A special inclosure Act, which incorporated the Inclosure Act, 1801, recited that pl'tfs. as the lords of a manor were the owners of the soil of the commons & wastes within the manor, & of the mines & minerals therein, & directed that a certain portion of the commons & wastes should be allotted to the pl'tfs. as lords of the manor as a full compensation for their right to the soil of the commons & wastes, & that the residue of the commons & wastes should be allotted to & amongst the persons having right of common on the commons & wastes, & directed that all parties should hold their respective allotments in severalty freed & discharged from all rights of common, & saved to plffs. all their estates, rights & interest in the commons & wastes directed to be inclosed except such rights & interests as the inclosure thereby authorised required to be barred, destroyed, or extinguished. Excepting the above recital, the Act & the award were silent as to mines & minerals:—Held: (1) the word “soil” was used throughout the Act not in its widest sense, but in the restricted sense of the surface of the soil; (2) the allottees of the commons & wastes took an estate in fee simple only in the surface of their allotments, the underlying mines & minerals being reserved to the lords.—*ST. 896. ——— Right of lord to minerals extinguished—Recital in Act.—A special Act passed in 1814 for the inclosure of lands in three manors, which were dealt with in similar terms, in each case recited that the lords of the manor were the owners of the soil & waste grounds within the manor & of the mines & minerals therein, & directed that a certain portion of the commons & wastes should be allotted to the lords of the manor as a full & sufficient recompense for their right to the soil of the commons & wastes, & that the residue should be allotted in severalty among the commoners in full bar & satisfaction of & for their respective rights of common, & saved to all persons, other than those to whom any allotment or compensation should be made, & except such rights & interests as the inclosure thereby authorised should absolutely require to be barred, destroyed, or extinguished, all such rights & interests in the commons & wastes as they would have enjoyed if the Act had not been made. Excepting the above recital the Act & award were silent as to mines & minerals:—Held: (1) the recital was not sufficient to cut down the ordinary meaning of the word “soil”; & the right to the minerals passed as part of the soil to the allottees of the several allotments; (2) as regards the parties to St. Catharine’s College, Cambridge v. Rosse (No. 895A, ante) in which the Ct. of Appeal had decided that the lords of the manor were entitled to the minerals under the lands allotted to the commoners, the lords of the manor were not entitled to let down the surface of those lands for the purpose of working the minerals thereunder.—THOMSON v. ST. CATHARINE’S COLLEGE, CAMBRIDGE, ETC., [1919] A. C. 468; 88 L. J. Ch. 163; 120 L. T. 481; 35 T. L. R. 228; 63 Sol. Jo. 264, H. L.

897. Mines ratable where actually situated—Though allotments ratable elsewhere.—By an inclosure Act it was declared, that all the allotments to be set out to the several persons having right of common on a moor, should be deemed to be situate within the same townships & places respectively, wherein the lands lay in respect of which such allotments should be made: & it was provided, that nothing in the Act should affect the right of P. to certain coal mines under the moor:—Held: the first clause affected only those portions of the soil, which were allotted to the commoners, and not the coal mines under those allotments, & such coal mines were ratable to the relief of the poor in the parish in which they were actually situate, as they were before the Act passed, though the allotments became ratable elsewhere.—*R. v. (b) Right to let down Surface.

898. General rules for construction of Acts.

(1) In construing Inclosure Acts each Act has to be interpreted according to its own provisions.

The general rules for the construction of such Acts are the following:—

(2) Where the ownership of the minerals & of the surface is severed, the prima facie inference is that the owner of the surface shall enjoy the surface allotted, & shall have the common right of support for his tenement.

(3) In order to rebut this inference the burden lies on the owner of the minerals to show affirmatively & by clear words that he has the right of letting down the surface, but express words are not required.

(1) The presence or absence of a compensation clause is an important element in the construction of such Acts. The prima facie inference in favour of the surface owner is strengthened by the absence of any provision for compensation, though the presence of a limited compensation clause is not of itself sufficient to rebut the inference.—BELL v. DUDLEY (EARL), [1895] 1 Ch. 182; 64 L. J. Ch. 291; 72 L. T. 11; 59 J. P. 199; 43 W. R. 122; 11 T. L. R. 60; 39 Sol. Jo. 79; 13 R. 120.

899. Right of working reserved - Without making satisfaction—Special provision for payment of compensation otherwise than by owner of minerals—No prescriptive right to let down surface.—A declaration alleged that plff. was lawfully possessed of lands, yet defts. so wrongfully, carelessly, negligently & improperly, & without leaving any proper or sufficient support, worked mines under the land, that great parts of it fell in, whereby plff.’s interest in the land was deteriorated, & a mare of plff. was killed. Deft. pleaded, as to working the mines without leaving any proper or sufficient support, an inclosure Act by which, after reciting that the lord of the manor of W. was seised of the soil of the commons, parcel of the manor, & of the coal mines under them, & certain persons were entitled to the right of common in the commons, & being willing & desirous to improve their estates & properties, & that the said commons might be cultivated & improved, & rendered of some use & value, had agreed, with the consent of the lord, that the same should be inclosed, allotted & divided amongst them, it was enacted that the commons should be set out, awarded & divided accordingly; & that the lord should hold & enjoy the mines under the commons so to be allotted & divided, together with all convenient & necessary ways & liberty of laying ways over the same, & of searching for & working the mines, as fully as if the Act had not been passed, without making any satisfaction for so doing; & after reciting that damage might be done to persons by reason of the searching & working the mines by the lord under their allotments, it was enacted, that when any person should sustain damage in his allotment by the searching for & working of the mines therein, or the laying of ways therein, compensation to be assessed by one or more justices of the peace should be made to him, & borne by the occupiers of the allotments in the same township: that the commons were allotted & divided under the Act, & the land of pltf. was parcel of the said commons: that from time immemorial up to the passing of the Act, the lord & his assigns had been used & accustomed as of right to search for, win & work the mines under the commons without leaving any support for the lands under which the mines were situate, & without making any satisfaction for any injury caused by such working; & that from the time of passing the Act the mines had been so worked, without leaving any support; & that defts. worked the mines under a lease thereof from the lord:—Held: (1) the plea was bad, such a prescription having been held void, as unreasonable, in Hilton v. Earl Granville, 5 Q. B. 701.

Deft. also pleaded as to working the mines without leaving proper & sufficient support, that the lord of the manor of W. was seised in fee of the mines within the manor, & that, for forty years next before the commencement of the action, the lord & his tenants had been used & accustomed of right to work the mines without leaving any support for the lands under which the mines were situate, & justifying the working of the mines as tenants to the lord in the exercise of the said right & custom. Another plea was similar, alleging the custom for twenty years:—Held: (2) these pleas were bad, as they did not show any acts done on pltf.'s land; & acts done on the land of another although done as of right for twenty or forty years, could not affect pltf.'s right.—BLACKETT v. BRADLEY (1862), 1 B. & S. 940; 31 L. J. Q. B. 65; 5 L. T. 832; 26 J. P. 358; 8 Jur. N. S. 588; 121 E. R. 963.

900. — Owner of minerals may let down surface —Without paying compensation.]—

To a statement of claim for working mines under pltf.'s land without leaving sufficient support for the surface, deft. pleaded in his statement of defence that he was the lessee of the mines from the lord of the manor, that pltf.'s land had, previously to the passing of an inclosure Act under which the waste of the manor was inclosed & allotted, formed part of such waste, that the lord of the manor from time immemorial had been accustomed to work the mines under the waste without leaving sufficient support for the surface & without making any compensation for injury so caused, that by the inclosure Act it was provided that the lord of the manor, his successors or assigns, might hold all mines & quarries lying under the waste together with liberty of searching for, winning & working the same as fully & freely as he or they might have had & enjoyed the same in case the Act had not been passed, & that without making or paying any satisfaction for so doing, & that it was further provided by the Act that compensation for damage caused to any person's allotment by such working of the mines should be assessed by a justice of the peace, & should, when so assessed, be paid by the occupiers of the other allotments in the same township:—Held: the statement of defence was good, on the ground that, whether any valid custom such as alleged in the statement of defence existed previously to the Act or not, the Act expressly gave to the lord of the manor & his assigns the right to let down the surface by mining without making any compensation.—GILL v. DICKINSON (1880), 5 Q. B. D. 159; 49 L. J. Q. B. 262; 42 L. T. 510; 44 J. P. 587; 28 W. R. 415, D. C.

905. ——— Right of support not taken away.—Before 1757 the lords of a manor had the right to work mines & minerals under the waste lands of the manor so as to let down the surface, provided enough pasturage was left to satisfy the rights of the commoners. By an inclosure Act of 1757 the waste lands were inclosed & allotted, & the lord of the manor was empowered to work the mines & minerals under the allotments as fully & freely as he might have done if the Act had not passed, & that without making or paying any satisfaction for so doing. A compensation clause in the Act provided that any damage done to an allottee by the exercise of the powers reserved to the lord should be paid for by an assessment upon the occupiers of the other allotments:—Held: the common law right of the surface owners to the support of the surface was not taken away by express words or necessary implication.—BUTTERLEY COLLIERY CO. v. 906. ——— Reservation impliedly subject to right of support — For public road—Set out under Act.—Comrs., acting under the powers conferred on them by a local inclosure Act for inclosing certain commons, set out public highways over the land, & directed that they should be maintained by the inhabitants & occupiers of the township in which they were situated, & that it should be lawful for all persons to use the same. The Act reserved to the lord of the manor, his successors & assigns, in the widest terms, all rights belonging to the manor, & all mines, minerals, & quarries under the commons, with power to do every act necessary for the draining, winning, & working such mines, minerals, & quarries as fully & freely as he or they could have had, held, used, or enjoyed the same in case the Act had not been made, without paying any damages or making any satisfaction for so doing. The assignees of the lord of the manor worked the mines so as to injure one of the roads set out by the comrs. In an action against them by the local board, on whom the duty of repairing the road fell, to recover the expense of doing so:—Held: the reservation to the lord of the manor must be taken to be subject to the public right created by the statute, & did not protect defts. from liability.—

908. ——— Right of support not taken away — House built on land—Measure of damages.—By an inclosure Act, in 1777, certain waste lands in the manor of B. were inclosed & allotted by the comrs. to the commoners & to the lord of the manor, & there was a clause in the Act providing that the lord of the manor, his heirs & assigns, should have the right to work the minerals under the lands just as he or they might have done if the Act had not been passed. There was a clause providing that if any person should suffer any loss or injury in his allotment by reason of the working of the minerals the person working such minerals should make full compensation for the damage caused thereby. In 1837, the then lord of the manor agreed to grant a lease to deft.'s predecessor in title of all the seam of coal known as the B. Bed, being under the lands allotted by the inclosure Act, for ninety-five years, & the lessee agreed to make compensation to the owners of the allotments according to the provisions of the Act. In 1861 & 1864, pltf. purchased the land allotted under the Act to the lord of the manor, & had built houses upon it. By reason of the working of the subjacent & adjacent coal by deft., pltf.'s land subsided, & he brought an action for damages. Deft. worked the mines in a skilful & proper manner, & according to the custom of the district: Held: (1) there was nothing in the Act or in the purchase deeds to interfere with pltf.'s common law right, as owner of the surface, to support by the subjacent & adjacent minerals, & he was entitled to recover damages; (2) as the injury was caused by a violation of pltf.'s common law right of support the damages were not necessarily nominal merely because if there had been no buildings on the land the damage would have been inappreciable.—CHAPMAN v. DAY (1883), 47 L. T. 705; subsequent proceedings, 48 L. T. 907, D. C.; 49 L. T. 436, C. A.

909. ——— Subject to satisfaction for surface damage—Right to support not taken away.—An inclosure Act enacted that allotments should be made to the persons having a right of common upon the waste of the manor, that is, to the owners of every separate ancient dwelling-house within the manor, that all right of common should be extinguished, & that the allotments should be held & enjoyed by the allottees by the same tenure & estates as the respective dwelling-houses: provided that nothing should prejudice, lessen or defeat the title & interest of the lords of the manor to & in the royalties, but that the lords & their successors as owners of the royalties should for ever hold & enjoy all rents, etc., perquisites, profits, mines, power of using or granting wayleave, waifs, estrays, & all other royalties & jurisdictions whatsoever to the owners of the manor appertaining in as full, ample, & beneficial manner to all intents & purposes as they could or might have held & enjoyed the same in case the Act had not been made. The Act provided further, that in case the lords or any persons claiming under them should work any mines lying under any allotment, or should lay, make, or use any way or ways over any allotment, such persons so working the mines, or laying, making, or using such way or ways, should make satisfaction for the damages & spoil of ground occasioned thereby to the person or persons who should be in possession of such ground at the time or times of such damage or spoil, such satisfaction to be settled by arbitration & not to exceed the sum of £5 yearly during the time of working such mines or continuing or using such way or ways for every acre of ground so damaged or spoiled. At the time of passing the Act there were no customs which enlarged or cut down the common law rights of the lords to work the minerals under the wastes of the manor. Under the Act an allotment was made in 1772 to a commoner in respect of an ancient freehold dwelling-house. At that time no house had been built upon the allotment. More than twenty years after a house had been built upon it, the minerals underlying it were worked by lessees of the lords of the manor so as to cause the surface of the land to subside, whereby the house was damaged to an amount exceeding the sum recoverable under the proviso. The land would have subsided if there had been no house. An action for damages having been brought against the lessees by the allottee's successor in title and by his tenant in possession:—Held: (1) the proviso for satisfaction did not apply to damage from subsidence; (2) there was nothing in the Act giving the lords the right to let down the surface; (3) *pltf.*s. were entitled to have the house & land supported by the minerals, & to recover damages for the subsidence.—LOVE v. BELL (1884), 9 App. Cas. 286; 53 L. J. Q. B. 257; 51 L. T. 1; 48 J. P. 516; 32 W. R. 725, H. L.; affg. S. C. sub nom. BELL v. LOVE (1883), 10 Q. B. D. 547, C. A.

911. ———. No provision for compensation—Subsidence unavoidable—Right to let down surface implied.—An inclosure Act of 1791 reserved the rights of the owners of the coal under the commons & gave them full powers of getting & carrying it away without making satisfaction “in as full large ample & beneficial a manner to all intents & purposes whatsoever, as if this Act had not been passed.” There was no compensation clause. In 1791 & long previously, the coal was worked by the long wall system, which inevitably caused subsidence of the commons, but did not interfere with the commoners' grazing rights. These facts were notorious at the date of the Act. In 1918 defts., who were coalowners, proposed to work a shallow seam, under pltf.'s allotment by the long wall system, with the inevitable result of letting down her allotment & buildings. In addition to proving that the long wall system with its inevitable subsidence was to the knowledge of all parties in common practice at the date of the Act, & submitting that it was thereby authorised, they also proved the recently ascertained fact that the working of any seam, deep or shallow, by any system whatever necessarily caused subsidence, & that the long wall system did the least damage:—Held: (1) having regard to the common practice known to all parties at the date of the Act, the long wall system with its necessary results was thereby authorised; (2) apart from these special circumstances, that as the legislature had in any case given the coalowners a clear & unambiguous right to get the coal in some way or another they were entitled to get it, & as it was now proved that all systems caused subsidence, they were entitled to cause subsidence; the question whether the legislature knew the inevitable effect of exercising the right so clearly given being irrelevant.—WELLDON v. BUTTERLEY Co., [1920] 1 Ch. 130; 88 L. J. Ch. 496; 121 L. T. 535.

912. Extent of working limited—Right of support not taken away.—An inclosure Act vested the surface of the land in allottees & the mines in the lord of the manor, & prohibited the lord from working the mines within forty perpendicular yards of the foundation of buildings on the surface:—Held: this prohibition did not affect the common law right of the owner of the surface to support, & he might maintain an action against the lord for working the mines so as to cause the buildings on the surface, belonging to the owner of the surface, to give way, though the mines had been worked with ordinary care & not within forty perpendicular yards of the foundation of the buildings.—*HAINES v. 913. Reservation of right of wagon-ways—Whether right properly exercised—Question for jury.—A private Act of Parliament for inclosing the waste lands of a manor reserved to the lord & his assigns all mines, etc., together with all convenient & necessary ways, etc., then already made, or thereafter to be made, & liberty of laying wagon-ways, etc., at his & their free will & pleasure, & to do all such other works, acts & things as might be necessary or convenient for the full & complete enjoyment thereof, in as full, ample & beneficial a manner as if that Act had not been made. An action of trespass having been brought against the lord's assignee for laying a wagon-way over one of the allotments in an improper direction & manner:—Held: the real question to be decided by the jury was, whether the wagon-way had been laid in such a direction as a person of reasonable skill would have selected, & whether the mode adopted was such as a prudent person would have adopted if he had been making the road over his own land, & not over the land of another.—ABSON v. FENTON (1823), 1 B. & C. 195; 1 L. J. O. S. K. B. 94; 107 E. R. 73.

914. — For minerals gotten out of allotments or any other lands—Limited to mines owned by lord of manor—Mines not belonging to but worked by lord excluded.]—An Act of Parliament for inclosing the moors & commons within the manor of L., in the county of D., contained a saving of all the seigniorial rights of the Bishop of D. as lord of the manor, & also provided, that the bishop & his successors, & their lessees & assigns, should at all times thereafter work & enjoy all mines & quarries lying under the moors & commons, together with all convenient & necessary ways & wayleaves over same, & full & free liberty of making & using any new roads or wagon-ways over same, & for that purpose to remove obstructions, etc., & of winning & working the mines & quarries belonging to the see & bishopric of D., wheresoever same should be, & of leading & carrying away all the coals, minerals, etc., to be gotten thereout, or out of any other lands & grounds whatsoever, etc.:—Held: this clause entitled the bishop to carry over the lands inclosed under the Act, not only coals & minerals got within or under those lands, but also those got out of any other mines belonging to the see of D., but not to carry coals, etc., got out of other mines worked by the bishop but not belonging to the see.—MIDGLEY v. RICHARDSON (1845), 11 M. & W. 595; 15 L. J. Ex. 257; 153 E. R. 613.

915. — Mines within manor not belonging to lord excluded.]—By an inclosure Act for inclosing the moors & commons within the manor of L., in the county of D., the seigniorial rights of the bishop of D., as lord of the manor, & his successors, or his or their lessees or assigns, were saved; & it was enacted (inter alia) that the bishop & his successors, & his & their lessees & assigns, should, at all times thereafter, hold, work & enjoy all mines, minerals & quarries lying under the moors or commons, together with all convenient & necessary ways & wayleaves over the same moors, etc., & full & free liberty of making & using any new roads or wagon-ways over same, & for that purpose to remove hedges & other obstructions, etc., & of winning & working the mines & quarries, & also of all other mines & quarries belonging to the see & bishopric of D., wheresoever same should be; & of leading & carrying away all the coals, minerals, etc., to be gotten thereout, or out of any other lands or grounds whatsoever, & that without paying any damages or making any satisfaction for so doing. By s. 38, compensation was provided for damage done by the bishop & his successors, & his & their lessees & assigns, to owners of allotments, by winning or working the mines & quarries under the allotments, or leading or carrying away coals, etc., gotten thereout, or out of any other mines or quarries belonging to the bishop & his successors, or by making or using wagon-ways or other ways, etc., or using any other of the powers hereby reserved to the bishop & his successors & his & their lessees & assigns. In trespass for leading goods, gotten by defts., out of a mine worked by them within the manor of L., but not belonging to the see of D., across the close of pl'ts., being an allotment under the inclosure Act, defts. pleaded that from all time to the passing of the Act the bishop of D., being, as lord of the manor, seised in fee of & in the commons, etc., & the mines, etc., lying & being within & under same, had been used, by himself, his servants & licensees, to enter upon the commons, etc., at all times at his & their will & pleasure, for the purpose of carrying across same coals gotten, not only from mines, etc., of which the bishop was so seised, but also from any other adjacent mines, etc., within the manor, of which the bishop was not seised, & which he, his servants, & licensees, might be lawfully entitled to work & carry away coal from; & that before the committing, etc., & while defts. were tenants & occupiers of, & lawfully entitled to work & carry away coal from, certain mines, adjacent to the mines in the manor, & of which the bishop was not seised, the bishop by deed, after the passing of the Act, granted to defts. full licence, etc., to carry coals won by them from the mines of which they were tenants, etc., over the close of pl'ts. Averment, that the trespasses complained of were the carrying of coals, etc., in pursuance of such licence:—Held: (1) the view taken in the case of Igley v. Richardson (No. 914, ante) was right, & that s. 45 of the Inclosure Act was not to be construed as giving the right to the bishop of D. to grant wayleaves in respect of mines not belonging to the see, wherever such mines might be situated; (2) the compensation for damage incurred by carrying coal, etc., given by s. 48, was expressly confined by that sect. to the mines of the bishop & his successors.—HEDLEY v. FENWICK (1861), 3 H. & C. 349; 11 L. T. 571; 159 E. R. 566, Ex. Ch.

916. — For “coals & produce of any other mine”—Includes coke.]—An inclosure Act reserved to the lord of the manor his rights to mines & minerals in certain lands, & also liberty to make ways along certain commons, & to do every act then or thereafter in use for working & carrying away the mines & minerals & quarries within & under the commons, & also for carrying the coals & produce of any other mines & minerals from or under any other lands:—Held: this gave the lord power to convey coke along a railway which he had made on the commons, coke being a produce of a mine, & the word “other” meaning not other than coals, but other than the mines & minerals mentioned in the former clause.—BOWES v. RAVENSWORTH (LORD) (1855), 15 C. B. 512; 24 L. J. C. P. 73; 24 L. T. O. S. 257; 3 W. R. 241; 139 E. R. 523.

917. Reservation of right to dig gravel—Includes right to destroy surface—By enlarging pit—In ordinary mode of working.]—By a private Act of Parliament, passed in 1764, for the purpose of extinguishing the right of common over certain commonable lands in the parish of B., it was enacted that it should be lawful for the surveyors of highways of the parish at all times thereafter to cut, dig, gather, take & carry away any quantity of gravel, or other materials for repairing roads, out of & from any pit or pits then in the possession of the lessee of the lands subject to the rights of common, to be made use of for & towards the making, laying out or repairing any highway or road lying & being within the parish, without paying anything for the same, & the surveyors were thereby required to fence in the pits, & to repair the fences as occasion should require. One of the pits mentioned in the Act was situated in a field containing upwards of nine acres. This field had become vested in pl'tf., who filed a bill to restrain the local board, in whom the powers of the surveyors had become vested, from extending the area of the pit in a lateral direction, & from digging gravel so as to injure the surface of the field. There was no evidence as to the condition of the pit at the date of the passing of the Act, but it was proved that in 1826 the extent of the pit was one & a half acres, that it had been enlarged to two acres in 1862, & that since that time it had been further enlarged, such enlargement being made by destroying the surface & digging out the gravel:—Held: the Act gave power to get the gravel in the ordinary mode of working a gravel pit, & as the evidence showed that this gravel pit had been usually worked by extending its area, depths. were entitled to continue working the pit in that way, although the surface was thereby destroyed.—ELLIS v. BROMLEY LOCAL BOARD (1876), 45 L. J. Ch. 763; 35 L. T. 182; 24 W. R. 716, C. A.

919. Reservation of royalties subject to compensation for damage by mining—Includes right to sink shafts & put up buildings—But not to use or destroy existing buildings of surface owner.]—An inclosure Act enacted that “nothing in this Act contained shall prejudice lessen or defeat the right title & interest” of the owner of the royalties “of in or to the royalties incident or belonging to the common but the owner, his heirs & assigns & all & every person or persons claiming under or in trust for him or them & all succeeding owners thereof shall & may at all times for ever hereafter hold & enjoy all rents, perquisites, profits, mines, quarries, waifs, estrays & other royalties & jurisdictions whatever to the owner of the royalties incident appendant & belonging or appertaining in as full, ample & beneficial manner to all intents & purposes as he or they could or might have held & enjoyed same in case this Act had not been made, provided always that in case the owner or owners for the time being of the royalties or any person or persons claiming under him or them shall after the inclosure work any mine or mines lying within or under any of the allotments or inclosures then such person or persons so working same shall make reasonable satisfaction for the damage & spoil of ground occasioned thereby to the person or persons who shall be in possession of such ground at the time or times of such damage or spoil”:—Held: on the true construction of the Act, the owner of the royalties was entitled to use the surface of any particular allotment, so far as was reasonably necessary, for the purpose of winning the minerals lying under not only that allotment but also any other allotment, & accordingly to sink pits & use existing pits & put up machinery on the particular allotment, but not to use existing engine-houses, engines or shops which were the property of the surface-owner.—*HAYLES v. 920. Waste allotted to certain commoners—For pasture, turf & fuel—Fee of soil remains in the lord.]—By a private inclosure Act certain portions of the waste of a manor were allotted to the commoners, but 300 acres were by the Act directed to be set out & allotted for the purpose of pasture & of cutting turf & fuel of & by certain commoners. By the same Act one-sixteenth of the lands, not included in the 300 acres, was to be allotted to the lord of the manor in lieu of all claims, right, title or interest as such lord. Proceedings having subsequently been taken under 1845 Act to obtain the inclosure of the 300 acres, the lord of the manor, pursuant to 1845 Act, s. 27, refused his consent:—Held: notwithstanding the provisions of the private Act, the fee of the soil in the 300 acres was still in the lord of the manor, & his consent to their inclosure was necessary under 1845 Act.—*R. v. 923. two witnesses, to sell such portions of the waste lands as should be necessary to defray the expenses of carrying the Act into execution, before award made. In ejectment by a party claiming under a conveyance from the comr. in pursuance of such power, it appeared that the lessor of pltf. purchased the land with the view of exchanging it with deft., that he never took possession of it, & that deft., some years after the conveyance, fenced it in, & had occupied it by his tenants ever since, a period of less than 20 years. It did not appear that any award had been made under the Inclosure Act:—Held: pltf. was not bound, in order to recover in the ejectment, to prove that the comr. had duly qualified, & given the notice, etc. required by the General Inclosure Act, before the execution of the conveyance.—*DOE d. 926. Exchange of land—Power to award exchange for land & money.]—Where an inclosure Act gave the comrs. power to award lands in exchange for others in an adjoining parish, & also to award lands to those who bought them of persons entitled to allotments:—Held: (1) they might award lands given in exchange partly for other lands & partly for money; & (2) the award need not have an ad valorem stamp upon the money consideration.—DOE d. THARP (1830), 10 B. & C. 785; 5 Man. & Ry. K. B. 745; 8 L. J. O. S. K. B. 318; 109 E. R. 641.

928. — Partition not provided by special Act.]—Inclosure (Consolidation) Act, 1801 (c. 109), s. 16, authorised the comrs. to make partition of land held in common upon the request in writing of the tenants in common, or any or either of them. A local Act for inclosing land within the parish of

M., enabled comrs. to make exchanges of land with the consent of the owners, whether tenants in fee simple or for life, & s. 32 provided for the costs of partition, but there was no clause in terms authorising partitions. The local Act received the Royal assent on May 19, 1819, at which time C. was seised of an undivided moiety of certain land in M. for the life of K., the other moiety being vested in S. in fee. On Aug. 2, 1819, C. & S. made a claim in writing under the Act of 1801 in respect of the land so held by them as tenants in common; & on Sept. 13, 1819, S. died intestate, leaving E. his heir. On Aug. 11, 1826, the comrs. made their award, & thereby made three allotments to C. & S., in respect of their interests in the open lands to be allotted & divided; & they also, under the “exchanges,” allotted to E. an undivided moiety of certain land sought to be recovered in this action, as also of the three allotments, the other moiety being therein stated to be already vested in E. in exchange for, as well the undivided moiety of E. in certain other old inclosed lands, which the comrs. thereby allotted to C., the other moiety thereof being therein stated to be then already vested in him, as also the entirety of a close belonging solely to E.:—Held: (1) the local Act having contemplated partitions, but containing no authority for that purpose, the legislature must have intended that they should be effected under the Act of 1801, s. 16; (2) this allotment could not have been supported as a partition under that Act, because, (a) C. was only tenant pur autre vie, & as such, had no authority to consent to a partition, (b) one of the tenants in common was to take as his share in severalty a close which, before the partition, formed no part of the land held in common, but was the separate property of the other tenant in common; (3) the words “tenants for life” in s. 31 of the local Act included “tenants pur autre vie,” & the allotment was good under that Act as an exchange; (4) the allotments made to C. & S. were not void by reason of their having been made after the death of S., & when E., his heir, was entitled.—*DOE d. 929. Power to allot to occupiers of commonable messuages—Limited to occupiers entitled before Act.]—By an Act for inclosing common lands in G., after reciting that the corpn. of G. claimed the right of soil as lords of the manor, & that certain individuals were proprietors of the common lands intended to be inclosed, it was enacted, that the comrs. might set out & allot plots of ground out of the E. & W. commons, in G., as a compensation for the rights of common of all the owners & proprietors of commonable messuages or cottages, for such messuages or cottages only, as well on the said commons as on certain other lands named; such plots of ground to be used & enjoyed as the comrs. should by their award direct. Parties dissatisfied with the award might bring an action against the persons in whose favour the determination should be, within three months, or might appeal within six months to the justices in Quarter Sessions, who were to determine the matter, & award costs & damages. In default of such action or appeal, the determination of the comrs. was to be final. The comrs. by their award, allotted a plot of land on the W. common as common pasture, to the owners & proprietors of commonable messuages or cottages, & their respective tenants or occupiers of the messuages & cottages only having right of common on the W. common; & they limited the use of the pastures as the Act empowered them. Before the passing of the Act, the rights attached to the commonable messuages could only be exercised by such occupiers as were freemen of the borough of G. Subsequently to the Act, one of the messuages on W. common being in the hands of a person not a freeman, the corpn. brought trespass against him, for turning his cattle on the allotment:—Held: (1) the Act, though general in its words, did not authorise the comrs. to extend the benefit of their allotments in lieu of common, to occupiers who were not freemen, & the award itself did not purport to do so, nor could it have done so unless the Act had given power to the comrs. to ascertain who should be entitled to the newly granted rights; (2) the present action was maintainable, though brought more than six months after the award.—*GOD-MANCHESTER CORPN. v. The comrs. & two justices made an order stopping up a public footpath in the parish of T. which was continued as a footpath into the parish of S., whereby the part in the latter parish became useless as a public way:—Held: the comrs. had power to stop up the part of the footpath in the parish of T., & that if any injury was thereby done, the remedy was by appeal.

936. — — —.]—On indictment for encroaching on a public highway, it appeared that in 1771, comrs. under an inclosure Act had been empowered to set out public & private roads, the former to be repaired by the township, the latter by such persons as the comrs. should direct. The public roads were to be sixty feet wide between the fences. The comrs. in their award described a road as private, & eight yards wide, but in setting it out a space of sixty feet was left between the fences, & they directed both the public & private roads to be repaired by the township. The centre only of the sixty feet was ordinarily used as a carriage road, & the township repaired it. The space said to be encroached upon was at the side of this road, & there was a diversity of evidence as to the use made of this space by the public, & its condition, since the time of the award:—Held: the comrs. had exceeded their authority in awarding that private roads should be repaired by the township.—R. v. WRIGHT (1832), 3 B. & Ad. 681; 1 L. J. M. C. 74; 110 E. R. 248; subsequent proceedings (1834), 1 Ad. & El. 434, Ex. Ch.

937. — Discretion as to formation & completion—Accommodation footways.]—(1) A valuer, who makes an award under 1845 Act, has a discretion in each case as to the amount of formation & completion of private or occupation roads & ways set out by him in his award.

(2) The valuer may, where it is necessary, set out footways to accommodate inclosed lands or adjoining owners.—REYNOLDS v. BARNES (1909), 2 Ch. 361; 78 L. J. Ch. 641; 101 L. T. 71; 73 J. P. 330.

938. As to drains & watercourses—Not to alter drains—So as to obstruct drainage in another township.]—An Act of Parliament, empowering comrs. to inclose the common lands in a certain township, enacted that it should be lawful for the comrs. to set out & make such ditches, watercourses & bridges, of such extent & form, & in such situations, as they should deem necessary in the lands to be inclosed; & also to enlarge, cleanse or alter the course of & improve any of the existing ditches, watercourses or bridges, as well in & on the lands, as also in any ancient inclosures or other lands in the township, as they should deem necessary:—Held: the Act did not empower the comrs. to alter the drains in the common lands, so as to overload an ancient drain which flowed through the common lands from another township, & thereby to obstruct the drainage of the lands in such other township, to the damage & injury of the owners of such lands.—DAWSON v. PAVER (1847), 5 Hare, 415; 16 L. J. Ch. 274; 8 L. T. O. S. 493; 11 Jur. 766; 67 E. R. 974.

939. — Power to make repairable by surveyor of highways—& to raise expenses by rate.—An inclosure Act provided that the comr. should set out such watercourses as he should think proper, & should order & direct by whom & at whose expense such watercourses should be repaired & cleansed. The Act further provided that the comr. should assign land for the getting of materials for repairing public roads. The comr., in pursuance of such Act, by his award appointed certain roads to be set out, & awarded to the surveyor of highways land for the getting of materials for the repair of public roads. He further ordered that a watercourse should be made, & directed that such watercourse should for ever thereafter be repaired & cleansed by the surveyor of highways for the time being, the expenses attendant upon such repairing & cleansing to be paid out of a rate to be made for the repair of highways in the township:—Held: it was within the jurisdiction of the comr. to order the surveyor of highways to repair & cleanse the watercourse & to raise the expenses of so doing by means of a rate.—A.-G. v. TAMWORTH RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL (1901), 85 L. T. 190.

940. Allotment of common & rentcharge in lieu of tithe—Incumbent at date of award holding two preferments—Allotment of common to one preferment but rentcharge apportioned—Within jurisdiction of commissioners.—By an inclosure Act comrs. were empowered to divide & inclose common lands, & to allot to H., who was then both rector of B. & perpetual curate of U. & his successors, rectors of B. & curates of U., lands of a stated yearly value, & a rentcharge to be payable out of other portions of the lands to be inclosed, which allotments were to be in lieu & satisfaction of all tithes, etc. belonging to H. & his successors. At this time the patron of the rectory was the same person as the patron of the curacy. The award gave certain lands to H. & his successors, simply as "rectors of B."; but awarded the rentcharge in certain proportions between the rectory & the curacy. The preferments were separated in 1829, & in 1864 this bill was filed by plff., who was both the patron & incumbent of the curacy, against the patron & rector of B., but not against the proprietors of the lands on which the rent was charged, for a declaration that the lands allotted should have been allotted to H. both as rector & as curate, & that his successors were entitled to the lands in the same proportions as they were entitled to the tithes, etc. before the award; that a new commission for partitioning the lands might be issued, & for necessary consequential directions:—Held: (1) the comrs. had power to apportion the lands & rentcharge between the rectory & curacy, & the apportionment made was not made per incuriam or mistake; (2) in no view of this case would the ct. be competent to adjust the rights between the rector & the curate in this or any other suit. (3) Seem: the ct. cannot be made subsidiary to a tribunal created by Parliament for adjusting such rights on the ground that that tribunal has miscarried (TURNER, L.J.)—*BATEMAN v. 942. Sporting rights—Power to sever from ownership of soil.—The Inclosure Comrs., under 1848 Act, s. 1, are authorised to make it a condition of the inclosure of a waste that the right of sporting shall be severed from the soil, & the tencement thus created shall remain in the lord, whilst the soil is allotted to others. The intention to impose such a condition is sufficiently manifested by a clause in the provisional order, that one-sixteenth part in value of the lands be allotted to the lords of the manor in lieu of their right & interest in the soil of the lands, exclusively of their right & interest in the game, & in all mines, minerals, stone, & other substrata under the lands.—*MUSGRAVE v. SECT. 3.—WHAT LANDS MAY BE ALLOTTED.

943. Encroachment or ancient inclosure—Not after twenty years.—1852 Act, s. 13, empowers the valuer acting in the matter of an inclosure to apply to justices to recover possession of any encroachment or inclosure which, under 1845 Act, shall be deemed to be parcel of the land subject to be inclosed, possession of which the actual occupier neglects or refuses to deliver up, after the determination of claims under 1845 Act:—Held: (1) the justices have jurisdiction to inquire into the circumstances attending the encroachment or inclosure in question, notwithstanding that the occupier has made no claim before the valuer or the Inclosure Comrs., & has not appealed against the award of the comrs., which includes the land in dispute; (2) the justices were right in refusing to order possession to be given to the valuer of a piece of land proved to them to have been first inclosed more than twenty years before the first meeting of the comrs. for the examination of claims, such land being, under 1845 Act, s. 52, an ancient inclosure, & that sect., taken with s. 50, showing that inclosures, only, of less than such twenty years standing are, under that Act, to be deemed to be parcel of the land subject to be inclosed.—CHILCOTE v. YOULDON (1860), 3 E. & E. 7; 29 L. J. M. C. 197; 2 L. T. 370; 24 J. P. 758; 6 Jur. N. S. 1054; 8 W. R. 559; 121 E. R. 347.

Sect. 7.—Under inclosure Acts: Sub-sects. 3 & 4, A. & B.; sub-sect. 5, A.]

944. — Adverse possession interrupted by award.]—The rector of a parish brought an action in 1913 to recover possession of a piece of land which had, in 1866, been allotted to a former rector by an inclosure award made by a valuer & confirmed by the Inclosure Comrs. under the provisions of the Inclosure Acts. Deft. set up the defence that he & his predecessors in title had been in possession of the land for sixty years. The effect of the evidence was that deft.'s father had encroached upon the land in question & inclosed it, & that acts of ownership had been exercised thereon by deft.'s father & deft. for more than sixty years before the commencement of the action:—Held: (1) deft. failed to establish a sixty years' possessory title, because the sixty years' possession required by s. 29 of Real Property Limitation Act, 1833 (c. 27) would not begin to run against pltf. as an ecclesiastical corpn. sole until 1866, the date of the award; (2) it was not open to deft. to say by way of defence to the action that the encroachment was at the date of the award an ancient inclosure under 1845 Act, s. 52, because by ss. 49, 50, 105, of that Act the question whether an encroachment was an ancient inclosure was a question for the determination of the valuer & the comrs., & the award itself must be taken to be a decision binding & conclusive on all persons that the encroachment was not an ancient inclosure.—BLACKETT v. RIDOUT, [1915] 2 K. B. 415; 84 L. J. K. B. 1535; 113 L. T. 267, C. A.

945. Not bed of river—Over which no rights of common exercised.]—By a private inclosure Act, passed in 1796, an allotment was directed of certain waste lands in a manor, the mines etc., being reserved to the lord, & the allotments were declared freehold of the allottees to all intents & purposes. There was a saving clause providing that nothing in the Act should affect the title of the lord to the mines or to the seigniories & royalties, franchises & liberties incident to the manors, but that the lord, his heirs & assigns, should enjoy, inter alia, all piscaries, fishing, etc., which could or might be claimed by him or them as owner or owners of the soil of the moors, commons & waste grounds, in as full, ample & beneficial a manner to all intents & purposes as if the Act had not been passed. The waste lands were bounded on one side by the river E., & the soil of half the bed belonged to the lord. There was no evidence that any of the tenants had ever enjoyed any rights of fishing, or any other commonable rights, over any part of the bed of the river; but there was evidence that at the time of the passing of the Act the lord exercised & let to tenants the right of fishing over half the bed. The comrs. allotted to L. a part of the waste called S., described as bounded on the west by the river, & gave an acreage which was correct for the land if the half-bed was not included. In 1890 the successor of the lord granted to pltf. the right of fishing in half the river between two points lying above & below S. Pltf. brought his action to establish his right of fishing in front of S., & a right of landing on S. for fishing purposes. The L. family insisted that the allotment to L. passed the soil of the bed ad medium filum, & that they had the exclusive right of fishing over so much as adjoined S., & by counterclaim asked an injunction to restrain pltf. from fishing opposite S., & from landing on S. for fishing purposes:—Held: (1) as the half-bed of the river had been enjoyed & let by the lord as a separate tenement up to the passing of the Act, & the commoners had never exercised any rights of common over it, it did not form part of the waste lands which the comrs. were authorised to allot, & that even if they had expressly included half the bed in the allotment to L., he would have taken no interest in the bed, & that he had no right of fishing; (2) according to Duke of Devonshire v. O'Connor (No. 883, ante) the saving clause in the Act did not reserve to the lord any merely territorial right, & as it did not appear that he had any franchise of fishing, his right to land upon S. for fishing purposes was a merely territorial right incident to his ownership of the soil, & was extinguished by the allotment.—ECROYD v. COULTHARD, [1898] 2 Ch. 358; 67 L. J. Ch. 458; 78 L. T. 702; 14 T. L. R. 462, C. A.

SUB-SECT. 4.—WHO ENTITLED TO ALLOTMENTS. A. Lord of Manor.

946. In respect of demesne lands — In addition to rights as owner of soil.]—Held: a lord of the manor was entitled to an allotment under an inclosure Act, in respect of his demesnes of the manor, over & above the allotment awarded to him by the Act in respect of his right as lord of the manor.—*ARUNDELL v. 947. — Commoner acquiring lordship of manor.]—A., being the owner & in possession of a farm from 1833 to 1850, exercised the right of turning out on the waste of the manor the sheep levant & couchant upon that farm. In 1818 A. became lord of the manor. Upon an inclosure of the wastes of the manor, under 1845 Act, A., who received an allotment in respect of his manorial rights, claimed besides to be compensated for common of pasture or feeding or right of pasturage in respect of the farm, & an issue was framed in those terms:—Held: assuming that a right of common of pasture appurtenant to the farm existed previously to A. becoming lord of the manor, he would after that have an interest in respect of which he ought to be compensated, & which might be described in popular language in the terms of the issue.—LLOYD v. POWIS (1855), 4 E. & B. 485; 24 L. J. Q. B. 145; 24 L. T. O. S. 212; 1 Jur. N. S. 230; 119 E. R. 177.

Commoner having two rights of common—In respect of same tenement—Entitled to allotment in respect of both rights.]—The owner of a tenement may have two distinct rights of common for his cattle, levant, & couchant, upon such tenement, upon different wastes in different manors under several lords; & therefore an allotment under one inclosure Act, in lieu of his right of common upon one of such wastes, will not do away with or lessen his claim for an equal allotment with other commoners, under a subsequent Act for inclosing the other waste. Semble: if the different wastes had appeared to have been originally holden under the same lord, it would have been otherwise.—*HOLLINSHEAD v. SUB-SECT. 5.—PROCEEDINGS BEFORE AWARD.

A. In General.

952. Time for lodging claims—Effect of not lodging claim within time limit—Subsequent dispute as to allotment.]—In 1813, the comrs. for the inclosure of a parish, the tithes of which were vested in several lay impropiators, appointed meetings for receiving claims, & various claims were put in, but none in respect of tithes, within the time limited by Inclosure (Consolidation) Act, 1801 (c. 109), notwithstanding this, the comrs. in 1817, made J. an allotment in respect of the impropriate tithes of certain land occupied by him, which tithes, as well as the land, J. claimed under the will of P. In 1820 W., who claimed these tithes under the heir of P., on the ground that they did not pass by P.'s will, brought an ejectment for the allotment made in respect of them:—Held: having omitted to make his claim before the comrs. within the time limited by the Act, he could not recover.—DOE d. WATSON v. JEFFERSON (1824), 2 Bing. 118; 9 Moore, C. P. 260; 2 L. J. O. S. C. P. 138; 130 E. R. 250.

953. How consents & dissents to inclosure calculated—Interest of lord of manor in subsoil to be considered.]—The ct. granted a prohibition against the Inclosure Comrs., to prohibit them from proceeding with an inclosure under 1845 Act, where the assistant-comr. had, in taking the consents & dissents under s. 27, excluded from his estimate of the interest of the owner of the soil of the land to be inclosed, & over which rights of common existed or were claimed, the value of the brick-earth thereunder, which would have more than sufficed to overtop the consents to the inclosure, notwithstanding the provisional order contained the following so-called exception, "that all mines, minerals, stone & other substrata be reserved to C., with a right to enter the lands when inclosed, for the purpose of opening, working, or winning such mines, minerals, stone & other substrata, making compensation for any damage to the surface which may thereby be done."—*CHURCH v. The comrs. made a general order prohibiting all persons from committing waste upon a piece of land described, until the final report or until further order; all persons affected to be at liberty to apply to them as there might be occasion. Deft. applied to the comrs. by counsel as a person affected, but they refused to enter into the question raised. Deft. was convicted upon an indictment moved by certiorari for breach of this order:—Held: the order & the indictment were good.—R. v. WALKER (1875), L. R. 10 Q. B. 355; 44 L. J. M. 956. Grounds for restraining commissioners from signing award—Not mere dissatisfaction of allottees—Apart from misfeasance by commissioners.]—Comrs. were empowered to make allotments by their award to the several proprietors of the lands within a manor, & it was by the Act provided that the award of the comrs. should be final & conclusive upon all parties. The proprietors of lands within the manor were only four persons—the Corpn. of D., M., S., & P. The comrs. made an allotment which was complained of as unfair by S., the portion of land allotted to him being, as he insisted, much less than he ought to have. The comrs. then proceeded to make another allotment, which was complained of by P., as being unequal & unfair with respect to him. The comrs. then proceeded to make a third allotment, which the Corpn. of D. insisted was unfair & greatly injurious to them, & accordingly they complained to the comrs., but the comrs. paid no attention to their complaint & declared that they would, on April 10, sign their award:—Held: (1) the ct. would not by injunction restrain the comrs. from signing their award, as the arbitrators had done nothing yet, & the ct. would not presume that they meant to do wrong; (2) if the ct. did not interpose then it could interpose later.

Semble: the ct. could interpose after the award was made.—DONCASTER CORPN. v. MILBOURNE (1785), Rom. 106, L. C.

957. — — — — — Lands allotted alleged not to be commonable.]—The Inclosure Comrs. under 1845 Act, having made provisional orders & being about to confirm the valuer's report, pursuant to a local Act a bill was filed by parties alleging certain particular lands in the report to be lands not subject to inclosure & praying an injunction. Upon the evidence it appeared that the lands were

960. — Construction of special Act.]—By Inclosure (Consolidation) Act, 1801 (c. 109), the legal title to an allotment is not acquired until the execution & proclamation of the comrs.' award. A local Act directed that the comrs. by notice might cause all rights of common to be extinguished, & might then allot the waste land amongst the proprietors, & that the owners might fence their allotments after they had been marked, staked out & confirmed, & before the signing of the award, & might also, within three months before the execution of the award, sell & convey their interests in the allotments, the comrs. being thereby authorised to allot to the purchasers, & the latter, after the execution of the award, to hold the allotted lands in such manner as the vendor would have done if there had been no sale; provided that, where the allotments were copyhold, the deed should be enrolled in the ct. rolls, of the manor, & that the purchaser should be admitted tenant thereto at the same time as the other allottees of copyhold lands, namely, after the execution of the award:—Held: this authority to inclose & so to enjoy in severalty, & the power to sell & convey, might well, considering the language in which that power was given, be enjoyed & exercised without the legal seisin of the land, & these provisions, not sufficiently counter-vailing those of the public Act, the legal freehold did not pass to the allottee till after the execution & proclamation of the award.—FARRER v. BILLING (1818), 2 B. & Ald. 171; 106 E. R. 329.

961. — — —.]—Where comrs., under an inclosure, had made an allotment in respect of R.'s land in 1824:—Held: the allotment passed by a subsequent conveyance of the land in 1824, although the comrs.' award was not executed till 1827.—DOE d. DIXON v. WILLIS (1829), 5 Bing. 441; 3 Moo. & P. 24; 7 L. J. O. S. C. P. 170; 130 E. R. 1131.

962. — — — Right to mortgage.]—A local inclosure Act provided that the several lands, etc., to be allotted & awarded in pursuance thereof, immediately after such allotments were made, should be, remain & enure to the several persons to whom same should be respectively allotted, who should from thenceforth stand & be seised & possessed thereof to the same uses, estates, trusts & purposes, & subject to the same settlements, etc., charges & incumbrances, as the several & respective lands, etc., in lieu of which such allotments should be respectively made, were then held under, subject to, etc., or might or would have been held under, etc., if the Act had not been made. The comrs., in 1812, marked out an allotment, in lieu of lands belonging to S., & put him in possession, but their award, in which they made same allotment to S. in lieu of same lands, was not executed till 1825. In 1818, S. mortgaged the allotment:—Held: S. had legal seisin of the allotment from the time of his being put into possession, & might mortgage before execution of the award.—DOE d. HARRIS v. SAUNDER (1836), 5 Ad. & El. 664; 2 Har. & W. 350; 1 Nev. & P. K. B. 119; 6 L. J. K. B. 53; 111 E. R. 1316.

963. — — — Purchaser let into possession.]—Under an inclosure Act, an allotment had been made, to the impropiator, in lieu of tithes; & by the Act, the tithes were to cease on the allotment being made; but the Act did not authorise the sale of allotments before the execution of the award. In the interim, the impropiator agreed to sell his allotment for £700, to be paid on Mar. 25 then next, on a good & valid title being made & executed. The award was not made until several years after the agreement, but the purchaser had been, all along, in possession of the allotment:—Held: the purchaser must pay four per cent. interest on his purchase-money from Mar. 25 next after the date of agreement, although a good title could not be made until the award was executed.—A.-G. v. CHRIST CHURCH, OXFORD (DEAN), Ex p. MADDOX (1842), 13 Sim. 214; 12 L. J. Ch. 28; 6 Jur. 1007; 60 E. R. 83.

964. Rights of purchaser—In possession.]—An inclosure Act directed that a vendee let into possession of any of the allotments, should have the same rights as the vendor:—Held: this was only applicable to the relative rights of the vendor & vendee.—*DOE d. 966. Right of valuer—To enter upon lands allotted—Not liable for trespass.]—If, upon preliminary proceedings being taken for an inclosure, the comrs. state, in their provisional order, that certain lands shall be allotted to a particular person, this is only a direction to those who have to make the allotment, & the land in question remains subject to the powers contained in the Inclosure Acts, & the valuer is justified in entering upon it, & valuing it, in same manner as any other portion of the land to be enclosed & is not liable in an action of trespass.—*GRUBB v. 967. Private road may be granted over allotment—Though not mentioned in provisional order—Unless expressly exempted.]—Held: it is competent to the Inclosure Comrs., under 1845 Act, to order the valuer to set a private or occupation-road over land directed by the provisional order to be allotted to an individual in lieu of his rights in the lands to be inclosed, unless the provisional order expressly declares that his allotment shall be exempt from such a burden.—*GRUBB v. SUB-SECT. 7.—THE AWARD—IN GENERAL.

969. Form of award—No technical form necessary—Closing old way.]—No technical form is necessary in the awards of comrs. of inclosure, but if they substantially pursue their powers in shutting up old roads, those roads effectually cease.—PICK v. CLARKSON (1779), 2 Wm. Bl. 1318; 96 E. R. 773.

970. Construction of award—Admissibility of evidence.]—To explain an ambiguous award of a road under an inclosure Act, evidence of contemporaneous acts of the occupiers of the land may be received.—WADLEY v. BAYLISS (1814), 5 Taunt. 752; 128 E. R. 887.

971. Custody of.]—In an Act of Parliament for inclosing a parish, no direction was given as to the place in which the award was to be deposited. The comrs. gave it to their clerk & solr., who, on resigning business, delivered it to his son & successor, who permitted every person to inspect it who thought proper. The churchwardens & overseers applied to the ct. to have the award given up & deposited in the parish chest, but the rule was discharged with costs.—WARTNABY'S CASE (1823), 2 L. J. O. S. K. B. 3.

973. Admissibility as evidence—Of estate in respect of which allotments claimed.]—(1) An award, allotting land under an inclosure Act, coupled with the terms of the original claim to such allotment, is admissible in evidence to show that the claimant's interest in the lands in respect of the possession of which he claimed the allotment was less than the fee.

(2) By an inclosure Act, the expenses attending the inclosure were to be raised by sale of part of the commonable lands, the balance, if any, of the proceeds to be repaid to the landowners. Accordingly, sales were made, & the surplus proceeds divided among the landowners according to a "return rate" divided into two proportions, one calculated according to the possessioners' interest for life or years, the other the reversioners' proportion, calculated according to the time likely to elapse before their interest accrued into possession. A landowner in possession, aged seventy, received a sum calculated on the assumption that his estate was held for his life; but it did not appear that the party had any knowledge of the paper containing the rate, or of the data by which the sum he had received was fixed:—Held: the return rate was not evidence to cut down his interest to less than a fee.

(3) By an inclosure Act, claims to allotments were to be made in writing, & sent to the comrs. The claims made were entered by their clerk in a book, though not required by the Act to be so kept. The claims allowed by the comrs. were marked in the book "allowed," & attested by their initials affixed thereto. The entries were made in the course of business, & at the time they purported to bear date. Scmble: they were admissible in evidence, on proof of the clerk's death, & of a negative search for the original claims in the proper repository.—*DOE d. SUB-SECT. 8.—EFFECT OF AWARD.

A. In General.

974. Whether operating as conveyance—Allotment to surveyor of highways.]—An inclosure Act having directed that the allotments made by the comrs. should for ever remain for the benefit of the appointees:—Held: (1) an award & assignment of the herbage of a certain close to the surveyors of the highways & their successors, for the benefit of the parish of B., though bad as a common law conveyance, the appointees not being a corp., was good as a parliamentary declaration of the persons entitled to take same, as if the terms of the award had been specially enacted; (2) the lord of the manor, in whom the fee of the soil remained, was a trustee for the surveyors of the highways for the time being.—JOHNSON v. HODGSON (1806), 8 East, 38; 103 E. R. 258.

975. — Allotment to churchwardens & overseers—In trust for occupiers of cottages.]—An allotment of land made in pursuance of 1845 Act, ss. 34, 73, to the churchwardens & overseers of a parish in trust to allow the occupiers of certain ancient cottages in the parish to get turf therefrom vests the legal estate in the land in the churchwardens & overseers.—*SIMCOE v. of an award under Inclosure (Consolidation) Act, 1801 (c. 109), extinguishes, per se, all rights of common intended to be extinguished thereby, & it is not necessary for the party relying upon the award to prove that the notices required by the Act have been previously given.—TAYLOR v. THWAITE (1843), 1 L. T. O. S. 34, N. P.

See, also, No. 1000, post.

977. Effect of omission from award—Determination of township for rating—Place of rating omitted—Award invalid.]—An inclosure Act gave power to the comrs. to award in what townships the allotments should be assessed to the rates & taxes. They awarded that certain allotments which before were within the district of H. were within the township of C.:—Held: they did not thereby become ratable in C.—FENTON v. BOYLE (1808), 1 Taunt. 344; 127 E. R. 866.

978. — Waste lands—Remain vested in the lord.]—By an inclosure Act certain waste lands of a manor were to be allotted in certain proportions. A part of the waste lands was not portioned out in the award of the Inclosure Comrs.:—Held: the freehold of such land remained in the lord of the manor.—PACKE v. MEE (1861), 9 W. R. 335.

979. — — Remain waste of manor.]—(1) In 1873, a particular common was not dealt with by an inclosure award as part of the waste of a manor, nor allotted to anyone:—Held: no inference could be drawn that it had ceased to be waste.

(2) Acts of ownership by persons who have successfully encroached upon small portions of a common do not give rise to the inference that such persons can make a title to the waste surrounding their encroachments.—SMITH v. LISTER (1895), 64 L. J. Q. B. 154.

980. Award in respect of right not mentioned in Act—Purchaser not compelled to accept title of allotment.]—(1) The provision in Inclosure (Consolidation) Act, 1801 (c. 109), that the comrs.' oath, & the appointment of any new comr., shall be annexed to & enrolled with the award is merely directory.

(2) An inclosure Act, reciting that S. was entitled, as lord of a manor, to the soil & royalties, & as lay rector, to all tithes within the manor, & that he claimed right of common on the waste in respect of the soil & royalties, directed certain allotments to be made to him in compensation for his right to the soil of the waste, & to the tithes, & that the residue of the waste should be divided among S. & the other persons having right of common upon such waste, in proportion to their respective claims; & it reserved to the lord the seignior & royalties. The Act made no mention of any right of warren existing in the lord; but there was some evidence that S. had used part of the waste as a rabbit warren. The award gave an allotment to S. for his right of warren, & also three other allotments, which purported to be made for his right to the soil, his right to the tithes, & his right of common & other rights & interests in the waste, respectively; which allotments were declared to be a full compensation for all his right & interest in the lands directed to be inclosed:—Held: S.'s title to the warren allotment was not such as a purchaser could be compelled to take.—CASAMAJOR v. STRODE (1834), 2 My. & K. 706; Coop. temp. Brough. 418, 510; 39 E. R. 1114, L. C. Annotations:—As to (2) Refd. Holliday v. Lockwood, [1917] 2 Ch. 47. Generally, Mentd. McConnel v. 981. Allotment passes under executory devise—

Of land in respect of which allotted.]—The lord of a manor being seised of it in fee, subject to an executory devise over, purchased an estate, partly freehold & partly copyhold of the manor, & afterwards, under an inclosure Act, carried in two claims, one in respect of the devised & the other in respect of the purchased estate, & obtained two allotments accordingly. He afterwards died, & the executory devise took effect:—Held: the copyhold part of the purchased estate, being extinguished in the manor, passed with it to the executory devisee, who was also entitled to so much of the allotment obtained in respect of the purchased estate as was proportionate to the value of the copyhold part.—KING v. MOODY (1826), 2 Sim. & St. 579; 4 L. J. O. S. Ch. 227; 57 E. R. 467.

982. Allotment for stone for roads & use of inhabitants—User limited to repair of roads.]—Where an inclosure Act directed that the comrs. should set out & allot a certain portion of the common lands for the getting of stone, gravel & other materials, for the repairs of the highways & other roads to be set out under the Act, & for the use of the inhabitants within the parish:—Held: this did not authorise the inhabitants to take such materials for their private purposes, but only for the repairs of the roads.—RYLATT v. MARFLEET (1815), 14 M. & W. 233; 14 L. J. Ex. 305; 153 E. R. 462.

983. Prescriptive right of way—May be gained over lands allotted—After inclosure.]—In an action for trespass it was pleaded that, by custom, the inhabitants of a township had a right to take water for domestic purposes from a well in the close; that plff. choked it up, & justifying the acts complained of as done by inhabitants of the township to clear out the well. On the trial it appeared that the inhabitants had, from time immemorial, taken the water from the well. About fifty years before the action the locus in quo was inclosed under a special inclosure Act, incorporating Inclosure Act, 1801 (c. 109). Neither in the special Act, nor in the award of the comrs., was any mention made of this well, or of any access to it:—Held: (1) the right to take water from the well was not extinguished by the inclosure; (2) whether the ancient right of access to the well for that purpose was or was not extinguished, the inhabitants might in other modes legally get access to the well, so that the fifty years enjoyment de facto since the inclosure might have a legal origin. (3) Seem: the ancient right of access was not extinguished.—RACE v. WARD (1857), 7 E. & B. 381; 26 L. J. Q. B. 133; 28 L. T. O. S. 288; 21 J. P. 678; 3 Jur. N. S. 512; 5 W. R. 288; 119 E. 985. As to exoneration of land from tithe.]—Debt for not setting out tithes. Pltf. was originally lay impropiator of the tithes of certain fen lands in the parish of M., which were from 1816 down to the time of the action occupied by deft. An Act for inclosing lands in the parish of M. gave an option to the Inclosure Comrs. to make an allotment to the impropiator in lieu of these tithes. By their award, made in 1812, they stated that they had procured to be made an accurate survey & plan of the waste lands to be inclosed, & of the ancient inclosed lands, except the fen lands, & then proceeded to allot to the impropiator certain allotments in lieu of & as a compensation for all the tithes growing & renewing within M. & due to him. A schedule & also a map or plan were annexed to the award, but neither comprised deft.'s lands or the fen lands. From 1816 to 1828 deft. had paid no tithes to pltf. in respect of his land, but for a period of twenty years from 1828, deft. had either paid tithes in kind or compounded for them to pltf. In 1841, on an Assistant Tithe Comr. being sent down with a view of awarding a sum to be paid as a commutation of the tithes of the parish of M., deft. claimed that his lands were exempt from tithes by virtue of the inclosure Act & award; but the Tithe Comr. decided that his lands were not thereby exempted:—Held: (1) the decision of the Assistant Tithe Comr. was not conclusive against the exemption, since Tithe Act, 1836 (c. 71), s. 90, took away his jurisdiction if the tithes had been extinguished by virtue of the inclosure Act, & he could not give himself jurisdiction by deciding that they were not so extinguished; (2) though the award professed to give the allotment in lieu of all the tithes in M., yet as the comrs. had an option whether they would extinguish all the tithes, & as there was evidence on the face of the award, maps & survey, that the fen lands were not taken into consideration, it was a question for the jury whether the award in reality awarded any compensation to pltf. for the tithes on deft.'s land.—BUNBURY v. Pltf. claimed to be owner under an award made in 1808 by comrs. under a local inclosure Act of 1801. Such award purported to allot the part of the broad so claimed to one of his predecessors in title. Deft. impeached the validity of the award, & challenged the claim to ownership on various grounds, alleging (inter alia) that the award was ultra vires, as the inclosure Act gave the comrs. no power to allot any part of the broad itself:—Held: after the lapse of so many years without any dispute as to the propriety of the award, the ct. would not now consider whether the award was ultra vires or not.—MICKLETHWAITE v. 989. In respect of copyholds—Statute for enfranchisement not complied with.]—(1) In 1766 an Act was passed for allotting, dividing, inclosing & draining fens within the manor & parish of B. S. 10 provided, that in case any of the proprietors of allotments, to be made by virtue of the Act in the common fens, in lieu of copyhold estates, should desire to have their allotments enfranchised, it should be lawful for the comrs. to allot a quantity of land, equal to two-thirteenth parts of such allotments respectively, to the lord of the manor; & that such allotments, in lieu of copyhold interest, should for ever, after the executing the award, be deemed freehold. The Act contained a saving of the rights of the lords of the manor. The comrs. in pursuance of the Act allotted to the lords certain lands as a compensation for their brovage & right to the wastes & soil in the fens. They also allotted certain lands to the owners of commonable houses, etc., & of enclosures being copyholds within the manor. The comrs. allotted these lands as copyhold, & from the time of the passing of the Act fines had constantly been paid to the lord on the admission of tenants to such allotments:—Held: allotments so made in respect of copyhold tenements within the manor, not having been enfranchised under s. 10, were of copyhold tenure.

(2) By an inclosure Act, passed in 1766, the comrs. were to allot a cowpasture, to be enjoyed by the owners of commonable houses, & to be used as a cowpasture only from May Day to Martinmas, & from Martinmas to Lady Day, & it was provided the same should for ever thereafter remain, go along with & be of the same tenure with such houses, etc., but should not be subject or liable to any fee or fine whatsoever to the lord. The comrs. made their award & set out the cowpasture. By an Act passed in 1772, for the purpose of dividing the cowpasture, it was enacted, that the comrs., after making certain other allotments, should set out the residue of the cowpasture unto & amongst all & every the proprietors of commonable houses, etc.; & that all the allotments which should be made of the cowpasture, should for ever thereafter remain & be of same tenure with such houses, etc. The cowpasture was divided & allotted under the Act of 1772, to the owners of commonable houses:—Held: the provision in the Act of 1766, that such parts of the cowpasture as were copyhold should be held without payment of fines to the lord, exempted the owners of the copyhold tenements in the cowpasture, when divided & held in severalty, from payment of fines to the lord.—POCHIN v. DUNCOMBE (1857), 1 H. & N. 842; 28 L. T. O. S. 320; 5 W. R. 354; 156 E. R. 1440.

991. Claim by expectant life tenant—Allottee takes life estate only.]—An Act of Parliament was passed for inclosing the waste lands within the manor of W. The comrs., by their award, allotted to T. for & in respect of an ancient auster tenement, certain portions of the waste:—Held: though T. was the only person named in the award, yet the allotment being made to him in respect of the copyhold estate, & in lieu of right of common incident to that estate, the effect of it was, to vest the legal estate in the allotment in the several persons entitled in succession to the copyhold estate, & the legal estate in that allotment vested, on the death of T. in J., & he might maintain ejectment.—DOE d. SWEETING v. HELLARD (1829), 9 B. & C. 789; 4 Man. & Ry. K. B. 736; 8 L. J. O. S. K. B. 79; 109 E. R. 293.

992. In respect of land subject to modus in lieu of tithe—Modus extends to allotments.]—An inclosure Act recited, that the Duke of N. was lord of a barony & of manors in which certain wastes were situate, & as such lord, was entitled to the soil & royalties belonging to the manors; & that he & other owners of lands within the barony were also entitled to right of common on the wastes. It then directed the comrs. to set out to the duke an allotment in respect of his right of soil, & afterwards to allot the residue of the wastes to him & the other persons entitled to common, in certain proportions, according to a rate already charged upon the lands in respect of which such common was claimed. Allotments were made to the duke accordingly. The lands in respect of which in part his allotments were given were exempted from all tithe by a modus. In an action brought for tithes of corn grown upon the allotment given in lieu of the duke's right in the waste, it was left to the jury whether the modus had extended to that right; & they found that it had:—Held: (1) the question was properly left, for the duke's right upon the waste, though it could not strictly be a right of common appurtenant or appendant to land which was the duke's own, was yet treated by the Act as a quasi-right of common annexed to the land, & it might, as such, be legally comprehended within the same modus; (2) the modus, as it covered all tithes both on the demesne land & common before the inclosure, covered likewise the tithe of any crop, as grain, raised afterwards upon the allotment given in lieu of common.—ASKEW v. WILKINSON (1832), 3 B. & Ad. 152; 1 L. J. K. B. 141; 110 E. R. 56.

993. In respect of land subject to mortgage—Legal estate vests in allottee—Not mortgagee.]—A man mortgaged an estate in fee without noticing rights of common. Afterwards allotments were made to him in respect of his rights of common by virtue of an inclosure Act, which enacted that the allotted land should be subject to same uses as the lands in respect of which they were allotted:—Semble: the legal estate in the allotments passed to the mtgor. & not to the mtgee.—LLOYD v. DOUGLAS (1811), 4 Y. & C. Ex. 448; 10 L. J. Ex. Eq. 34; 160 E. R. 1082.

994. In respect of lands subject to outstanding term—Allotments subject to same term.]—Where an inclosure Act provides that every proprietor shall stand & be seised of the lands to be allotted to him, to such & same uses, & for such & same estates, as the lands in respect of which such allotments shall be made, would have been subject to in case the Act had not been made, the allotments made under it are held subject to an outstanding term to which the original lands were subject.—*GARRARD v. D. As to Roads and Rights of Way.

(a) Old Public Roads.

Form of award.]—See No. 989, ante.

996. Where statutory requirements not complied with—Inoperative.]—A local inclosure Act empowered the comrs., with the concurrence & order of two justices of the peace, to stop up & discontinue any of the roads or ways, in, through, over or on the sides of the inclosed lands. The comrs. published in the newspaper the roads set out, & advertised the required meeting also in the newspaper, announcing therein, that any person injured or aggrieved by the setting out such roads, or by the omission of any other, might attend, & they would be heard. After the meeting, the comrs. & two magistrates made & signed an order confirming the map, & the roads & footways therein described, excepting three which were specified, & the map was annexed to the award. A proprietor of one of the new inclosures brought an action of trespass for breaking his close, etc.; deft. justified under an alleged right of way, & proved an ancient footpath over the locus in quo. On a special case, stating that such old footpath had been omitted by the comrs. in preparing the map of roads, etc., set out:—Held: the old way was not stopped up & extinguished, according to a true construction of the local Act & Inclosure (Consolidation) Act, 1801 (c. 109), ss. 8, 10, 11, by what had been done by the comrs. & magistrates, for that purpose, & with that intention, the positive concurrence & order of two magistrates being indispensably necessary to the stopping up of roads, whether they be public carriage roads or private or bridle & footroads. Nothing short of an order of the magistrates expressly stopping up the road would satisfy the statute; merely not setting out a road, is not sufficient to extinguish it, even in the case of a private road, bridle or foot way.—HARBER v. RAND (1821), 9 Price, 58; 117 E. R. 20.

997. — Roads over waste.—A public footway passed over a common into & across a farm-yard, to a public road on the other side of the farm-yard. A local Act for inclosing the common, giving power to divert & stop up roads over it, provided, that the comrs. should not divert, or turn, or stop up any old road leading over parts, not to be inclosed, without the concurrence & order of two justices. The comrs. awarded the public footway over both closes to be a private footway:—Held: the old right of public footway remained over both closes, for the concurrence & order of two justices was necessary under Inclosure (Consolidation) Act, 1801 (c. 109), s. 8, in order to extinguish the public right over the allotment of common, as well as that over the farm-yard.—LOGAN v. BURTON (1826), 5 B. & C. 513; 8 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 299; 4 Dow. & Ry. M. C. 50; 4 L. J. O. S. K. B. 217; 108 E. R. 191.

998. — Road running into old road.—By a local Act inclosure comrs. were empowered to divide, alter, turn or stop up roads, & all roads which were not set out or finally ordered & directed to be set out & continued were to be forever stopped up & extinguished, & were to be deemed & taken as part of the lands & grounds to be divided & allotted, provided, that no roads passing or leading through any of the old inclosures were to be stopped up, diverted, turned or in any other way altered, without an order for that purpose under the hands & seals of two justices:—Held: (1) a footway & a highway passing through old inclosures were not stopped up by the operation of the award, in which they were not set out & continued, there being no order of justices for the purpose; (2) highways passing over waste land & running into the highway mentioned, were also not stopped up by the effect of the award.—R. v. DOWNSHIRE (MARQUIS) (1836), 4 Ad. & El. 698; 1 Har. & W. 673; 6 Nev. & M. K. B. 92; 3 Nev. & M. M. C. 539; 5 L. J. M. C. 72; 111 E. R. 950.

999. ——Some common uninclosed lands, over every part of which there was an ancient bridle-way, were inclosed by comrs. under a local Act. The comrs. set out a road over part of the lands which by their award they directed should be a private carriage-way for particular persons interested in parts of the inclosure, & a public bridle-way; & they directed that the road should be kept in repair by the parish as a bridle-way, & by the particular persons interested, as a private carriage-way. No certificate of justices was ever obtained in respect of the road thus set out:—Held: the award did not operate as a diversion of the old road & setting out of a new road, & the parish was bound to keep the road in repair as a bridle-way.—R. v. CRICKLADE (INHABITANTS) (1850), 14 Q. B. 735; 4 New Mag. Cas. 112; 19 L. J. M. C. 169; 15 L. T. O. S. 296; 14 J. P. 401; 14 Jur. 690; 117 E. R. 283.

1000. — Compliance presumed.—By Inclosure (Consolidation) Act, 1801 (c. 109), s. 8, in case the comr. should be empowered to stop up any old or accustomed road passing through any part of the old inclosures, etc., same should in no case be done without the concurrence or order of two justices. Flint Inclosure Act, 1813, s. 1, appointed a comr. to carry the Act into execution, subject to such of the regulations, restrictions & provisions, etc., in the Act of 1801 as were not altered, varied, controlled by or repugnant to, the provisions of the local Act. S. 19 enacted that it should be lawful for the comrs. to stop up any old or accustomed public road or roads over the marshes, commons & waste lands, subject nevertheless to the concurrence of two justices, & under such regulations as were contained in the Act of 1801, & provided that the old roads should not be discontinued till the new roads were properly formed. The marshes were allotted in 1819, when a gate, which had since been kept locked, was put up across an old road, but the road had since been used by foot passengers occasionally. The award of the comrs., executed in 1830, set out the new roads, & directed the old roads to be stopped up. A certificate of two justices, that the new roads had been formed & completed, under the Act of 1801, s. 9, was put in & proved; but no order of two justices for stopping the old road was produced:—Held: it might be presumed that an order of two justices for stopping up the old road had been duly made.—*WILLIAMS v. 1001. Inclosure of waste—Does not stop up way—Unless mentioned in award.—An old footway passed from a public highway over wastes to old inclosures into another public highway. By an award of the comrs. under a local Act for inclosing the wastes, the part of the waste over which the footway ran was allotted, but the footway was not mentioned in the award, nor was any new way set out therein. No power to stop up ways over old inclosures was given by the particular inclosure Act:—Held: the old footway was not extinguished by the allotment.—THACKRAH v. SEYMOUR (1832), 1 Cr. & M. 18; 1 Nev. & M. M. C. 258; 3 Tyr. 87; 2 L. J. Ex. 10; 149 E. R. 296.

1002. Change of township by award—Township of allotments adjoining road changed—Township of road not changed.—By an Act for inclosing lands in several parishes & townships, it was directed that the allotments to be made in respect of certain messuages, etc., should be deemed part & parcel of the townships respectively in which the messuages, etc., were situate. The comrs. under the Act were directed, in their award, to make such orders as they should think necessary & proper concerning all public roads, & in what township & parish same were situated & by whom they ought to be repaired. The comrs. by their award directed that there should be certain roads. One of these, called the S. road, passed between new allotments. The road was ancient. The part of the common over which it ran was, before the award, in the township of H., & the road was still in that township unless its situation was changed by the local Act & the award. The new allotments on each side were declared by the award to be in other townships than H. The award did not say in what townships the road was situate, nor by whom it was repairable:—Held: (1) the Act, by changing the local situation of the allotments, did not, as a consequence, change that of the adjoining portions of road, & the road in question continued to be in H.; (2) where the herbage of a road becomes vested, by Inclosure (Consolidation) Act, 1801 (c. 109), s. 11, in the proprietors of allotments on each side, no presumption arises that the soil itself belongs to such proprietors.—*R. v. 1003. Presumption as to ownership of soil of road—Ownership of adjoining land.—Ownership of land adjoining either side of a road is prima facie evidence of a right to the soil extending to the centre of the road. A recent right founded on an inclosure under an Act of Parliament, does not make a distinction with regard to the general law.—COOKE v. GREEN (1823), 11 Price, 736; 147 E. R. 621.

1006. — — Road omitted from award.—Pltf., having an allotment made to him by a comr., under an inclosure Act, of land, over which defts. had a private right of way before the passing of the Act, but which way was not noticed or described amongst those set out by the comr. appointed for executing that Act, the operation of which, as to the powers of setting out or stopping up roads, was left to Inclosure (Consolidation) Act, 1801 (c. 109), may, under s. 11 of the latter Act, justify the stopping up of such way, without any directions from the comr. for that purpose in the award, or any other road being set out or appointed in lieu of it.—WHITE v. REEVES (1818), 2 Moore,

1007. Old right of way over lands allotted expressly reserved—Allottee has no power to substitute another way.—By an inclosure Act, W. field was inclosed & allotted to deft., & all then existing ways over it were to be extinguished after a certain date, provided that nothing in the Act should deprive pltf. of the right of ingress & egress to & from a certain watercourse there. Deft. stopped up the old path by which pltf. had approached the watercourse & substituted another & more circuitous one:—Held: pltf. was entitled to his old right of way.—ADEANE v. MORTLOCK (1839), 5 Bing. N. C. 236; 1 Arn. 488; 7 Scott, 189; 8 L. J. C. P. 138; 3 Jur. 105; 132 E. R. 1095.

1008. Interrupts enjoyment—Under Prescription Act, 1832 (c. 71).—To a declaration in trespass deft. pleaded a right of way from time immemorial, & a user for forty years & twenty years respectively. A user in fact for more than forty years was proved. In 1839, all ways not set out in a certain award were extinguished by an Act of Parliament, & this way was not set out:—Held: it could not be presumed from the user that the award was otherwise than properly made; & (2) less than twenty years having elapsed since the award no right had been gained under the above Act, s. 2.—HOLDEN v. TILLEY (1859), 1 F. & F. 650.

1009. Sale by allottee of original holding with all ways, etc.—Allotment to allottee of waste crossed by ways of necessity—Right of way extinguished—Allottee not bound to grant new rights of way.—The words of 1845 Act, s. 68, are positive that all roads & ways not set out by the valuer on making his award “shall be for ever stopped up & extinguished.”

H. was possessed of lands in a neighbourhood where the Act was about to be applied. He sold some of these lands to T., expressly reserving to himself the allotments that might afterwards be made. The conveyance to T. contained the usual words, “together with all ways, paths, passages, easements, privileges, advantages & appurtenances to the land appertaining, or held, used, or occupied therewith.” Between the lands purchased by T. & the high road there were certain wastes over which the former holders of T.’s land had, for above forty years, enjoyed the use of certain paths & trackways, which were paths & trackways of convenience, but not of necessity. The wastes were allotted to H.; the valuer, to whom T. had not referred any claim of right to the paths & trackways, made his award, in which other paths & ways were set out, but not those from T.’s lands to the high road. Before the award was made H. had sold his interest in the allotment to C., who, after the making of the award, refused to allow T. the use of the ways in question:—Held: by the effect of the award they had been stopped up & extinguished, & the conveyance by H. did not bind him to grant new easements over any land he might acquire by the allotment.—TURNER v. CRUSH (1879), 4 App. Cas. 221; 48 L. J. Q. B. 481; 40 L. T. 661; 43 J. P. 540; 27 W. R. 553, H. L.; affg. S. C. sub nom. CRUSH v. TURNER (1878), 3 Ex. D. 303, C. A.

1010. 1012. — Includes ownership of trees growing on roadside waste—Though subject to public rights of way.]—In 1811 a public road was set out across L. common by the R. Inclosure Comrs. of a width of fifty feet, & allotments of the land on either side of the road were at same time made. About twenty-five feet only of the fifty feet allotted by the comrs. had been used as the actual road; the sides which were left uninclosed had become covered with furze & heath, & fir trees had been allowed during the last twenty-five years to come up through the furze. In 1868 the highway board commenced cutting down, & advertised a sale of some of these fir trees growing within the fifty feet allotted by the comrs. in 1811 for the public highway. On a bill by the owner of the adjoining land to restrain such cutting:—Held: (1) the right of the public was to have the whole width of the road, & not merely that part which had been used as a via trita, preserved free from obstructions, & such right had not become extinguished by the fact that the trees had been allowed to grow up within the fifty feet for the period of twenty-five years.

(2) Semble: the highway board were only entitled to remove the trees which were an obstruction to the road, & not as against the owner of the soil to sell the timber of the trees when cut.—TURNER v. RINGWOOD HIGHWAY BOARD (1870), L. R. 9 Eq. 418; 21 L. T. 745; 18 W. R. 424.

1013. — Presumption as to—Long continued exercise of acts of ownership.]—By an award made under an inclosure Act passed in 1774 certain lands were allotted & certain roads were set out as public highways. From a short time after the passing of the Act the pasturage of one of the roads set out was let annually by the inhabitants of the parish in vestry assembled. The money received from the tenants was devoted to different parochial purposes, & there had been no interference or claim by the lords of the manor until the present action, in which pltf., as lord of the manor, claimed damages from deft., who was tenant to the vestry, for trespass in pasturing his sheep in the road. There was no evidence in whom the soil of the road was vested before the passing of the Act. No grant of the road was produced, & there was no evidence of the enrolment of any such grant:—Held: (1) a lawful origin must be presumed from the long usage; (2) the presumption was that the road was vested in some person or persons as trustees for the parishioners; (3) a presumption might be made either that the grant of the road had been enrolled, or that the grant had been made for some purpose which had since been lost sight of, but which did not require that the deed should be enrolled; (4) the churchwardens & overseers, as trustees under Poor Relief Act, 1819 (c. 12), s. 17, of the lands belonging to the parish, had gained a title to the road under Stat. Limitations, subject 1015. Allottee may enlarge user—Change of user of adjoining allotments.]—By an award under an inclosure Act, it was directed that certain of the allottees & the owners for the time being of their allotments should for ever thereafter have a way-right & liberty of passage for themselves, their respective tenants & farmers, as well on foot as on horseback, & with their carts & carriages, & to lead & drive their horses, oxen & other cattle from the common highway over the east end of the allotments to their respective allotments, doing as little damage to the soil or the corn, grass, or herbage, as might be, & in case the allottees should "street out" the way, that same should always remain eleven yards wide, but the road was not to be a way of right for any other persons whomsoever than as aforesaid. The owner of one of the allotments commenced building houses upon it, & began to lay down a metalled road where there had only been an ordinary cart-track over the adjoining allotments:—Held: the allottees were not confined to the use of the road for agricultural purposes only, but were entitled to construct a substantial roadway suitable for the purposes to which the land was now in course of being applied.—*NEWCOMEN v. 1017. Surveyor authorised to let herbage—For pasturing of sheep—No power to pasture other stock—Legal origin not presumed for usage contrary to statute.]—NEAVERSON v. PETERBOROUGH RURAL COUNCIL, No. 1016, ante.

1018. — Right of action for trespass to herbage—In parish council not district council—Under Local Government Act, 1894 (c. 73), s. 6 (1).]—By an inclosure award made under an inclosure Act the comrs. awarded that the grass & herbage growing upon a certain private drove or road in the parish should be let annually in Easter week by public auction by the surveyor of highways in the parish, or by such other persons & under such restrictions & regulations as the occupiers of hereditaments in the parish should appoint, & that the money arising from such letting should be expended for the repairs of the public & private roads in the parish. The herbage on this drove had been annually let by auction before 1894 by the vestry of the parish, & since the above Act by the parish council, & the proceeds handed over to the district council, as being the authority liable for the repair of the roads, & applied by them in reduction of the amount required from the parish for road repairs. Deft., a farmer, occupied some land abutting on this private drove, & he had the right to drive his cattle along the drove to & from his land, but, under the pretence of driving his cattle to water at the further end of the drove, he took them twice a day along the drove, & his cattle ate the herbage on the drove & diminished the letting value of the same. In an action by the A.-G. & the district council, claiming damages & an injunction in respect of the damage to the herbage:—Held: (1) the district council could not maintain the action; the property in the herbage being in the parishioners, it was the parish council who under the above sect. were the beneficial owners, as trustees for the parish, of the herbage, & it was the parish council, & not the district council, who were the proper parties to sue; (2) as the rights involved were the rights, not of the community in general, but only of a limited portion of the public, namely, the parishioners of the parish, & the A.-G. was not a necessary party to the action even with the proper plffs. as relators, the A.-G. was not entitled to sue for an injunction either alone or with the parish council as relators. —A.-G. & SPALDING RURAL COUNCIL v. GARNER, [1907] 2 K. 1019. Liability to maintain—Extent of liability—Drainage arising from ordinary course of husbandry—Not increased flow arising from alteration in system of drainage.]—By an award made in 1795, under an inclosure Act, the owners or occupiers of the lands over which the drains, directed to be made, should pass, were to make & for ever thereafter cleanse & keep same of sufficient depth to carry off the water intended to run down same:—Held: the award must be taken to have meant only such water as would be drained off the respective closes according to the course of good husbandry then in use, & no obligation to repair the drain was imposed, so as to render it capable of carrying off water accumulated by a system of under-draining adopted long after the making of the award.—SHARPE v. HANCOCK (1844), 7 Man. & G. 354; 8 Scott, N. R. 46; 13 L. J. C. P. 138; 3 L. T. O. S. 57; 135 E. R. 148; sub nom. SHARPE v. HISCOCK, 8 Jur. 382.

1020. — Limited by ordinary law.]—By a private inclosure Act, certain comrs. were required to make, appoint & stake out all the public bridges, roads & highways within a certain township, & also set out or appoint such private ways or roads, hedges, fences, ditches, bridges, causeways, banks, sluices, drains, sewers, cloughs, etc., within the township as they should think convenient, the Act providing that all such public roads, bridges, sewers & drains should be made, repaired, & kept in repair in such manner as the other public highways, bridges, sewers & drains within the township were by law to be repaired & kept in repair. The Act went on to provide that all such private ways, etc., should be supported & repaired by all or any of the proprietors of lands within the township in such manner as the comrs. should by their award appoint, & required the comrs. by their award to describe all manner of public highways, bridges, sewers & drains & all private ways, cloughs, banks, bridges, sewers & drains, within the inclosed lands. The comrs., by their award, appointed, amongst others, two public sewers, & directed that they should be kept in repair & preserved of a certain width & depth by the owners & proprietors of the inclosed lands according to an acreage rate. The owners & proprietors contributed to the repair of these two sewers during eighty years after the Act:—Held: a presentment that one of these sewers ought to be made of an increased gauge & repaired by the proprietors of the inclosed lands according to an acreage rate, without disclosing any liability upon the part of these owners ratione tenuræ, or by reason of benefit, was illegal, as the Act did not alter the law regulating the repair of public sewers, & the award, if it purported to do so, was ultra vires, & any one distrained upon in pursuance of the presentment might maintain trespass without appealing from the order of the comrs.—BIGLIN v. WYLIE (1867), 36 L. 1021. — Allottees receiving benefit—Sea wall.]—Prior to 1853 a sea wall had been constructed to protect the C. Level against incursions of the tide, but the sea wall did not extend along the entire front of the level. There was a gap about half a mile wide in front of the C. & R. Moors. The sea wall for the protection of the land lying to the east & west of these two moors was turned round inland northward. The tide came over the two moors, & was kept from the two parts of the level which lay to the east & west of the moors by these side or wing walls. The moors were waste land subject to certain rights of pasture. In 1853 the moors were inclosed under the provisions of 1845 Act, & by the award they were apportioned among the persons entitled to rights of common on them, & it was thereby provided that the owners should, amongst other things, construct & maintain a sea wall in the gap. The owners of the inclosures constructed a sea wall accordingly, & thenceforth there was a continuous defence against the incursions of the tide throughout the whole length of the C. Level. In 1903, there occurred an extraordinary flood & tempest which seriously damaged large portions of the old wall lying to the west of the new wall constructed under the inclosure award. The comrs. of sewers made a rate to cover the costs of the repair of the sea wall so damaged :—Held : the owners of the inclosures were liable to the rate, inasmuch as at the time when the damage was done the inclosed land received benefit from the old walls, & it was immaterial that those walls as originally constructed were of no benefit to that land :—BAKER v. PARRY (1905), 3 L. G. R. 684.

1022. Common of pasture awarded exclusively to commoners—Rights of lord to take stone not affected—Extent of right.]—Where comrs. under an inclosure Act awarded, that certain persons, entitled to a right of common in certain commonable lands, should for ever thereafter use & enjoy the commonable place as a common pasture, exclusive of all others whatsoever :—Held : (1) the right of the commoners was still subservient to the right of the lord to take stone, it appearing that, both before & since the award, the lord had exercised that right, & an action was not maintainable against his lessee, although the soil had latterly been subverted to an unusual extent.

(2) Semble : if the lord wantonly & unnecessarily exercises his manorial rights to the injury of the commoners of pasture, he is liable to an action.—PLACE v. JACKSON (1824), 4 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 318 ; 2 L. J. O. S. K. B. 156.

1023. Common law right of support—Modified by award—Agreement between surface owners.]—In 1770 a private Act was passed to provide for the allotment of commons & commonable lands, etc. These lands were described as having mines under the surface. Comrs. were appointed to allot, having due regard to the mines, according to the rights of the various persons interested in the lands, some of which were divided into small parcels. The comrs., by their award, allotted the lands, so that some of the mines allotted to A. were situated under portions of the land allotted to B. The persons interested executed this award, which contained a clause declaring that the proprietors agreed with each other & their heirs, that the lands so allotted should be lawfully held & enjoyed by the allottees without molestation, & without any mine owner being subject to any action for damages on account of working & getting the mines, or by reason that the lands might be rendered uneven & less commodious to the occupiers thereof, or by sinking in hollows, & being otherwise defaced & injured where such mines should be worked, the several proprietors having agreed with each other, & being willing & desirous to accept their respective allotments in their several situations, subject to any inconvenience or incumbrance which might arise from that cause. The mines were worked by A. & his assignee, & the surface of the land thereby, but without negligence, injured :—Held : (1) whatever is the general right in the surface to support, the clause in the award operated as a grant of a right to disturb the surface of the land, & B. could not maintain an action for damage on that account.

(2) Qu. : whether the clause could operate as a release of the right to support.

Held : (3) the circumstance that, some years after the award, but many more than twenty years before the injury complained of, houses were erected on the land did not make any difference with regard to the relative rights of the parties under the award.—ROWBOTHAM v. WILSON (1860), 8 H. L. Cas. 348 ; 30 L. J. Q. B. 49 ; 2 L. T. 642 ; 24 J. P. 579 ; 6 Jur. N. S. 965 ; 11 E. R. 463, II. L. ; affg. (1857), 8 E. & B. 123, Ex. Ch.

1024. Allotment of stone to highway surveyors & herbage to commoner—Gives commoner no right to soil—Though surveyors cease to take stone.]—An inclosure Act, directed the comrs. to set out land for getting stone, etc., for repairing the parish roads, which should be vested in the surveyors of highways & their successors, & enacted that all the grass & herbage growing, arising & renewing on the roads & on the land to be set out & appointed for getting stone, etc., should belong to & be the property of the persons to whom the comrs. should allot the same, exclusive of all other persons whomsoever, or should be applied to some parochial or other use or purpose. The comrs., in pursuance of the Act, awarded, set out, allotted & appointed to the surveyors of highways & their successors an allotment No. 158, containing 1 acre, save & except the grass & herbage thereof, upon trust & for the purpose of getting stone, etc., for repairing the roads, & they awarded, set out, allowed & assigned to P. & his heirs contiguous allotments, No. 157 & No. 159, together with the grass & herbage of No. 158 ; they also ordered & directed that the grass & herbage growing, arising, & renewing on the public roads & ways should be let from year to year, & the moneys arising thereby be applied to the repair of the highway, etc. The surveyors obtained gravel for the highways from No. 158 down to the year 1813, when they discontinued to do so, & purchased gravel from pits in the neighbouring parishes, & thenceforth until 1858 they never entered upon or exercised in No. 158 any right under the award. In 1813, P. built a cottage & barn, & other buildings, on part of No. 158, & inclosed part of it with a fence ; he also cut off a corner of it, which had ever since formed part of the adjoining arable field, & cleared out the old pit, & converted it into a pond :—Held : the award of the comrs. did not vest in P. any right to the soil, but only the right of taking the grass upon its surface.—*THEW v. (2) The comrs., instead of laying their accounts before a justice annually, had done so only twice in fourteen years, & had not done so for several years before the rate was made, but there never was any appeal against the accounts or the rate:—Held: the comrs. had power to make such rate, notwithstanding their neglect in passing their accounts.—*DOE d. Comrs. under the Act levied by distress a sum of money, part of which was due for their own trouble & expense during several preceding years, & had not been accounted for annually, nor until a short time before the issuing of the distress warrant:—Held: the accounting was not a condition precedent to the levy, & the distress was legal.—*SMITH v. The comrs. directed by their award that the expenses of the works should be paid by a rate to be levied & recovered by certain surveyors in the same manner as parish rates were by law recoverable in the parish:—Held: the rate must be recovered by distress & not by action.—*DANBY v. 1043. ——— Grounds for granting stay.]—Where an action at law upon a feigned issue has been brought under 1845 Act, s. 56, the ct. will not grant an injunction to stay such action upon the mere grounds of alleged miscarriage at law, & that the ct. of law is not at the time sitting in banco.—PORTSMOUTH (EARL) v. PARTRIDGE (1860), 3 L. T. 12; 8 W. R. 658.

1044. ——— Grounds for setting aside.]—At the instigation of A. an inclosure was commenced by the comrs. appointed under 1845 Act, & the assistant comr. having heard the evidence of A. & others, decided that A. was lord of the manor of the lands to be inclosed; B. put in a claim as being lord of the manor over a part of the lands, & framed a feigned issue, according to s. 56 of the Act; A. then moved for a prohibition to prevent the comrs. from proceeding in the inclosure, & also to set aside the feigned issue:—Held: (1) the prohibition could not issue, & the comrs. would not only be right in proceeding with the inclosure, but were bound to do so; (2) the feigned issue could not be set aside, as the comr. had not exceeded the powers given him by s. 56, & as A. might have become a party to the issue if he had chosen to do so.—Re PORTSMOUTH (LORD) & PARTRIDGE v. INCLOSURE COMRS. (1861), 3 L. T. 779; 9 W. R. 336.

1045. ——— Discovery.]—A feigned issue was brought under 1845 Act, the question being whether pltf., as lord of the manor of L., was interested in the soil of certain lands proposed to be inclosed, in right of the manor, so as to be entitled to dissent from the inclosure. Defts.' case was, that by an agreement made in 1800, between A., the then lord of the manor, & all the persons entitled to rights of common, & an award made thereunder, 146 acres were allotted to the lord in lieu of his manorial rights, & that certain leases & agreements for leases of part of the land so allotted had been subsequently granted by the lords of the manor:—Held: under Evidence Act 1851 (c. 99), s. 6, defts. were entitled to have inspection of the following documents: (a) certain deeds of conveyance of the manor to A., & by A. to pltf.; these, although title deeds, being capable of being used for the purpose of substantiating defts.' case, & not merely of negating that of pltf. (b) the leases, & agreements for leases alleged to have been made under the agreement of 1800, which was not in the possession of pltf., as these might be material to show that the lords of the manor had acted as owners in severalty of the lands in question, & not in virtue of their ordinary manorial rights.—RICCARD v. INCLOSURE COMRS. (1854), 24 L. J. Q. B. 49; 24 L. T. O. S. 129; 1 Jur. N. S. 495; 3 C. L. R. 119.

1046. ——— Costs—Unsuccessful plaintiff liable.]—Where the ct. has granted an application for a feigned issue, under 1845 Act, s. 44, to try whether a certain close is part of a particular manor, & appet., pltf. in the feigned issue, fails on the trial, the ct. will order him to pay the costs of it to deft. in the feigned issue.—R. v. KELSEY (1851), 20 L. J. Q. B. 283.

1047. ——— ——— New trial.]—Under 1845 Act, s. 56, the successful party to an issue is only entitled to the ordinary costs allowed in other cases, so that where, in a rule for a new trial, no mention is made of the costs of the first, he is not entitled to them, although successful on the second.—ROMNEY (EARL) v. INCLOSURE COMRS. (1854), 2 C. L. R. 1651; 23 L. T. O. S. 190.

1048. ——— ——— Plaintiff partly successful.]—Deft. had rights of pasture awarded to him by the valuer, under 1845 Act, in respect of 198 acres of land, & this award was confirmed by the assistant comr. Pltf. appealed against this decision, under s. 56, & brought an action on an issue, in which pltf. affirmed & deft. denied that the decision of the comr. was erroneous, so far as it confirmed the allowance of the claims of deft. to rights of pasturage in respect of the 198 acres. At the trial of the issue, pltf. called witnesses to disprove that deft. had rights of common in respect of any of the 198 acres; deft. gave evidence that he was entitled to rights of common in respect of the whole of the 198 acres. A verdict was returned for pltf. in respect of part of the 198 acres, & for deft. in respect of the residue; the value of the rights thus disallowed & allowed being about equal. By 1845 Act, s. 56, after verdict & final judgment, "the comrs. shall act in conformity thereto, & allow or disallow the claim thereby determined according to the event of such trial; & the costs attending such trial shall abide the event of the trial": Held: "event of the trial" did not mean "event" as if it were an ordinary action, & pltf. was not entitled to the general costs of the cause, but each party was entitled to the costs of that part of the issue on which he had succeeded.—HARDY v. FETHERSTONAUGH (1869), L. R. 4 Q. B. 725; 10 B. & S. 628; 38 L. J. Q. B. 337.

appeal to the quarter sessions within four months after the cause of complaint shall have arisen, to the party aggrieved by any thing done in pursuance of that Act or of Inclosure (Consolidation) Act, 1801 (c. 109), other than & except such determinations as are by those Acts declared to be binding, final & conclusive, does not give any appeal to a party complaining that the comrs. have omitted to set out a particular road as a public road, against their determination; & supposing it did, yet he must appeal within four months, & cannot after that time when the comrs. set out the road as a private road appeal against that determination, his cause of complaint being that it is not set out as a public road, & not that it is set out as a private road. It seems that an indictment against the comrs. for not obeying an order of sessions directing them to set out the road as a public road, would not be such a remedy to the party, supposing him entitled to have the road so set out, as would make the ct. refuse to interfere by mandamus.—*R. v. 1050. — Against allowance by justice—Of commissioners' account—Private Act.]—A clause in a private inclosure Act, declaring that no item or charge in the accounts of the comrs. shall be binding on the parties concerned, or valid in law, unless same shall have been duly allowed by a justice of peace in the manner therein pointed out, does not take away an appeal given by a subsequent clause to the party aggrieved by any thing done in pursuance of that Act or Inclosure (Consolidation) Act, 1801 (c. 109), other than & except such determinations as were by those Acts declared to be binding, final & conclusive, the allowance of the accounts by a justice not falling within the exception.—R. v. CUMBERLAND JJ. (1822), 1 B. & C. 64; 2 Dow. & Ry. M. C. 61; 107 E. R. 25.

1051. — Order of commissioner & justice disallowing new private road—Order not final—Inclosure (Consolidation) Act, 1801 (c. 109) ss. 8, 10.]—By the above Act, s. 8, when complaints were made against public roads set out by a comr., he & a justice were to hear them, & finally direct what was to be done; & by s. 10, private roads were to be set out, subject to the same provisions as were contained in s. 8 respecting public roads. A private inclosure Act, in which the above Act was recited, gave an appeal in all cases, except as to such acts, determinations, & proceedings of the comr. as were by either Act directed to be final, binding, & conclusive. The comr. under the Act of 1801 having set out a private road which was objected to, he & a justice, upon hearing the complaint, ordered that the road should be disallowed:—Held: the appeal against such order was not taken away, because it was not an order of the comr. alone, but of him & a justice together; & because s. 10 of the Act of 1801 did not expressly say that the order of the comr. should be final respecting private roads.—R. v. WEST RIDING OF YORKSHIRE JJ. (1823), 2 B. & C. 228; 3 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 306; 2 Dow. & Ry. M. C. 10; 107 E. R. 368.

1052. Notice of appeal—How time for giving calculated—From time allotment staked out—Not from final award.]—Though a statute, giving an appeal to the sessions within four months after the cause of complaint shall arise, directs the justices at the sessions to hear & determine the matter of such appeal, etc., yet it seems that they have an incidental power of adjourning it to another sessions, upon lawful cause, such as the absence of a material witness, of the sufficiency of which they are to judge.

Where an appeal was brought against the sufficiency of an allotment under an inclosure Act, & it appeared that the ground was staked out in Mar., when applt. took possession of & cropped it, though no final award was made of it by the comrs. till long afterwards:—Held: an appeal lodged at the Oct. sessions was out of time, though a small part of the allotment was, with the applt.'s consent, exchanged so late as July.—R. v. WILTS. JJ. (1811), 13 East, 352; 104 E. R. 406.

1053. — From notice exonerating land from tithe—Not from provisional allotment by map.]—By an inclosure Act the party aggrieved by any thing done in pursuance of the Act might appeal to the quarter sessions within six calendar months after the cause of complaint. The comrs. in 1812 made an allotment upon the map to the vicar in lieu of his tithes, which the vicar inspected at a meeting held in Nov. 1812, & appointed an agent, who attended a subsequent meeting, when an alteration was made in the map, which the agent approved, & it was understood that all objections to the vicar's allotments were reconciled. In Nov. 1813 the comrs. gave notice that they had ordered all tithes, etc., to cease from Sept. 29 then last:—Held: the vicar was not out of time to appeal to the next quarter sessions after that notice.—R. v. GLOUCESTERSHIRE JJ. (1814), 3 M. & S. 127; 105 E. R. 558.

1054. — From conclusive allotment—Not from preparation of maps & plans.]—The preparation of plans & maps for the purpose of carrying an inclosure into effect is no evidence of an allotment under an Act which required an appeal against an allotment to be made within six months after the cause of complaint had arisen. It is sufficient to appeal within six months from the time when the conclusive allotment has been made.—R. v. MIDDLESEX JJ. (1819), 1 Chit. 366.

1055. — From date of award—Though statutory formalities not complied with.]—By a clause in an inclosure Act, a comr. was authorised to stop up any way, provided it be done by the order, & with the concurrence of two justices, & that order was to be subject to an appeal in like manner, & under such form & restrictions as if the same had been originally made by such justices. By a subsequent clause, any party aggrieved was to be at liberty to appeal at any time within six months after the cause of complaint. Under this Act, the comr., with the concurrence & order of two justices, stopped up a road without giving the public notices required by Highways Act, 1815 (c. 68):—Held: a party aggrieved might, in the circumstances, appeal at any time within six months.—R. v. TOWNSEND (1822), 5 B. & Ald. 420; 106 E. R. 1244.

1056. — Given within statutory period—Good though appeal cannot be heard within period.]—1845 Act, s. 63, enacted that any person within four months after the first Sunday on which a notice of an intention to stop up a way had been given on the church-door, might make his complaint by appeal to the justices at the quarter sessions on giving the valuer fourteen days' notice in writing of such appeal, together with a statement in writing of the grounds thereof:—Held: notice of intention to appeal, given to the valuer within the four months, against the stopping up of a highway under the powers of the Act, was good, although the sessions were not held nor the appeal heard until after the four months had expired.—R. v. ESSEX JJ. (1864), 34 L. J. M. C. 41; 11 L. T. 486; 28 J. P. 776; 13 W. R. 186.

1058. Extension of time for hearing—Whether justices must grant—On application by appellant—Private Act.]—By an inclosure Act an appeal was given to the next sessions within six months after the cause of complaint. Applt. moved the ct. of sessions in due time to receive & respite his appeal to the next sessions, which was refused:—Held: the Ct. of K. 1061. Commons Act, 1876 (c. 56)—Power of surveyor of highways to take gravel—Justices may restrain absolutely.]—By Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 51, power is given to a surveyor of highways to get & carry away gravel, etc., in any waste land or common ground. By Commons Act, 1876, s. 20, such right is not to be exercised, as regards certain classes of commons, without the consent of the person or persons having the regulation or management of same, or in default of such consent without an order of two or more justices in petty sessions assembled who may in their order prescribe such conditions as to mode of working & restitution of the surface as to them shall seem expedient. Applts. having refused leave to resps. to take gravel from a common, the latter applied to justices, who made an order under Commons Act, 1876, s. 20, on the express ground that the sect. only gave them power to prescribe the conditions under which the right given by Highway Act, 1835, s. 35, was to be exercised, & that they had no discretion to refuse altogether to make an order:—Held: the decision of the justices was wrong, & they had absolute discretion, under Commons Act, 1876, s. 20, to make or refuse to make an order.—HAYES COMMON CONSERVATORS v. BROMLEY RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL, [1897] 1 Q. B. 321; 66 L. J. Q. B. 155; 76 L. T. 51; 61 J. P. 104; 45 W. R. 207; 13 T. L. R. 136; 41 Sol. Jo. 160, D. C.

centre line of these hedges. There was evidence that the universal rule & practice on the common was & had been, where there was now no ditch or trace of one, to allow a ditch-width to the owners of the commonable animals & otherwise. Deft. contended that, either by presumption of law or by inference from the evidence, he was entitled to a ditch-width on the common side of the hedges, & that, allowing for this ditch-width, the fences complained of did not constitute any encroachment. He also contended that the conservators were not entitled to sue, & that the action was barred by the Stat. Limitations:—Held: the conservators had a right to sue.—*COLLIS v. SUB-SECT. 1.—BY BYE-LAWS AND REGULATIONS.

1077. Validity of bye-law—Power to make bye-laws for prevention of nuisance & preservation of order—Bye-law forbidding public speeches without permission—Valid.]—By a scheme under Metropolitan Commons Act, 1866 (c. 122), & confirmed by Metropolitan Commons Supplemental Act, 1877 (c. cci.), it was provided that a common should be dedicated to the use & recreation of the public as an open & uninclosed space for ever, & the Metropolitan Board of Works were empowered to frame bye-laws & regulations for the prevention of nuisances & the preservation of order on the common. The Metropolitan Board of Works made a bye-law prohibiting the delivery of any public speech, lecture, sermon or address of any kind, except with the written permission of the board first obtained, & upon such portions of the common & at such times as might be by such written permission directed & sanctioned by the board:—Held: such bye-law was valid.—DE MORGAN v. METROPOLITAN BOARD OF WORKS (1880), 5 Q. B. D. 155; 49 L. J. M. C. 51; 42 L. T. 238; 44 J. P. 296; 28 W. R. 489, D. C.

1078. Validity of regulations under bye-law—Player on golf course to be accompanied by licensed caddie—Valid.]—By a scheme made under the Metropolitan Commons Acts, 1866 (c. 122), & 1869 (c. 107), & confirmed by the Metropolitan Commons (Mitcham) Supplemental Act, 1891 (c. xxvi.), conservators were directed to set apart such portions of a common as they should consider expedient for games & to form grounds for cricket & other games, & to frame bye-laws & regulations for, among other purposes, the regulation of games to be played & other means of recreation on the common & generally for the prevention of any act tending to interfere with the use thereof by the public for the purposes of exercise & recreation. No bye-laws were to have effect unless & until confirmed by the Local Govt. Board. The scheme saved to the lords of certain manors their rights in the soil of the commons, but the conservators were empowered upon payment of compensation to restrict, diminish or extinguish those rights if they should interfere with the control, preservation or improvement of the common. With the consent of the conservators a golf club was formed which acquired the rights of the lords of the manors & laid out & maintained on the common two golf courses, the P. golf course and the P. ladies' golf course. The golf club conveyed to the conservators all their rights over the soil of the common, in return for which the conservators by deed granted to the golf club a licence to play golf upon both the golf courses. By this deed the conservators covenanted that they would not make any such bye-laws or regulations as would unreasonably interfere with the club playing golf on the courses & would not permit persons other than those authorised by the club or residents in the parish of M. to play golf or any other game on the courses. In pursuance of the scheme the conservators made a bye-law that no person should play cricket or any other game upon the parts of the common set apart or appropriated for cricket, football, golf, etc., except at such times & under such regulations as the conservators should prescribe, & that no person should obstruct or interfere with or annoy any persons playing at cricket or any other lawful game. They also made the following regulations:—(a) that golf should not be played upon any part of the common except the P. golf course and the P. ladies' golf course; (b) that for the safety of the public & the preservation of the turf, no one should play golf on either of the courses unless accompanied by a caddie duly authorised & licensed by the conservators or the golf club; (c) that no one who was not a member of the golf club should play on the P. golf course on Saturdays, but that persons holding permits might play on the P. ladies' golf course on Saturdays, but must be accompanied by caddies; (d) that no person should play golf on either of the courses unless he or she were a member of the golf club or an inhabitant of M. holding a permit from the conservators. The bye-law was confirmed by the Local Govt. Board, but the regulations were not submitted for confirmation:—Held: (1) regulation (b) was valid; (2) regulation (d) was unequal & void in excluding all but inhabitants of M. & members of the golf club from playing golf on the courses; (3) regulation (d) & semble, regulation (c) also were ultra vires & void in giving a permanent preference to the members of the golf club, for the conveyance of their rights in the soil was not a good consideration for such a preference; (4) whether or not the making & maintaining of the golf courses were a good consideration, the preference was not authorised by the bye-law & could not be given by mere regulation.—MITCHAM COMMON CONSERVATORS v.

1080. — Non-members of club not to play before certain time on certain days—Valid.]—Under a scheme confirmed by statute the M. Common Conservators were required to set apart portions of the commons for games, & to make bye-laws & regulations for the playing of games on the commons. They made a bye-law that no person should play at any games on the parts so set apart except under such regulations as they might prescribe, & that no person should obstruct, interfere with or annoy any persons who were playing or who had made preparations to play at games on the parts so set apart; & penalties were imposed for breach of the bye-laws. Under this bye-law the conservators made regulations for playing golf on the commons; regulation 1, after reciting that the P. Golf Club had made & kept up two golf courses on the common, provided that a person who was not a member of the club should not on any Wednesday or Saturday commence to play golf on the courses between the hours of 9.30 & 11 in the morning or between 12.30 & 2.30 in the afternoon; & other regulations provided that no person should play golf unless accompanied by a caddie licensed by the conservators or by the club, & that caddies were to be obtained by all players through the caddie master of the club or a caddie master appointed by the conservators. The conservators had not appointed any caddie master or licensed any caddies. Resp., who was not a member of the club, but who had a permit from the conservators, went on a Saturday to the golf course to play golf, & had made preparations to play. He applied to applt., who was the caddie master of the club, for a caddie between 10 & 11 o'clock in the morning, but applt. by reason of regulation 1 refused to supply him with a caddie before 11 o'clock, & at 11 o'clock he supplied him with a caddie. Applt. having been summoned under the bye-law for obstructing & interfering with resp. by refusing to supply him with a caddie, & having been convicted because the justices found that regulation 1 was ultra vires as it showed preferential treatment to a class, namely, the members of the club:—Held: (1) as applt. was only the servant of the club & was merely obeying the orders of the club in enforcing the regulation, he could not be said to be obstructing resp. & the conviction was wrong upon that ground; (2) regulation 1 was not ultra vires but was a valid regulation.—HARRIS v. HARRISON (1914), 111 L. 1081. Construction of bye-law—Forbidding erection of posts—Replacement of posts in respect of which easement acquired—Not included.]—Metropolitan Commons Act, 1866 (c. 122), s. 15, enacted that no estate, interest or right of a profitable or beneficial nature in, over or affecting a common, should, except with the consent of the person entitled thereto, be taken away or injuriously affected by any scheme under the Act without compensation being made or provided for the same. A common within the meaning of the Act was placed under the management of the Metropolitan Board of Works by a scheme confirmed by the Metropolitan Commons Supplemental Act, 1871 (c. lvii). Paragraph 5 of the scheme gave the Board power to make bye-laws. Paragraph 13 of the scheme secured to all persons such estates, interest or right as they had before the confirmation of the scheme. The Board made a bye-law forbidding the erection on the common of any posts or poles, or any building of any kind. There was a public house adjoining the common, & near to it upon the common had stood for forty years a post bearing the sign of the public house. The signpost having been blown down, applt. the mtgee. of the public house, at the request of the occupier, erected a new one. Applt. was convicted under the bye-law of unlawfully erecting the new signpost:—Held: a signpost having stood for forty years, an easement had been gained in respect of the public house, & as an incident to the easement the right existed of repairing the signpost whenever it was broken, & the easement was a beneficial right preserved by Metropolitan Commons Act, 1866, s. 15, & paragraph 13 of the scheme relating to the common, & the conviction could not be upheld.—HOARE v. METROPOLITAN BOARD OF WORKS (1874), L. 1082. — Forbidding chasing game—Flying falcon after tame pigeon—Included.]—A bye-law relating to a common said, "No person shall shoot or chase game or other birds or animals on the common." M. carried a tame pigeon & a falcon, & let both off, & ran after them for half a mile watching the chase:—Held: this was an offence within the meaning of the bye-law.—HARPER v. MICHELL (1879), 44 J. 1084. — Jurisdiction of justices ousted—By bonâ fide claim of right.]—Applt. was summoned, under bye-laws made by the Conservators of B. Commons by virtue of Metropolitan Commons (Banstead) Supplemental Act, 1893, for cutting turf from & digging for loam upon B. Commons. It was proved upon behalf of applt. that he was authorised by the bailiff of the owners of the soil of the commons. In the year 1889, in the action of Robertson v. Harlopp (No. 580, ante), brought on behalf of all the tenants of the manor against the then lord of the manor & owner of the soil of the commons & his mtgees., judgment was given declaring that the cutting & digging by the defts. of the turf or loam in or upon the waste lands of the manor constituted an injury to the rights of common of pltfis. over the waste lands. The justices were of opinion that the claim of right of applt., though bonâ fide, was not reasonable, & they convicted applt.:—Held: (1) it was impossible, without inquiring into the circumstances as they existed at present, to say that the claim of the applt. was absurd & impossible in law, & the justices had no jurisdiction to hear such evidence; (2) as the claim was bonâ fide, the jurisdiction of the justices was ousted.—SCOTT v. BARING (1895), 64 L. paid by other joint tenant.]—By Wimbledon & Putney Commons Act, 1871, provisions were made for the election every three years of a body of conservators, themselves to be persons who were electors under the Act; & it was provided that any person who was tenant or occupier of a dwelling-house of the annual ratable value of £35 or upwards should be qualified as an elector. The Act empowered the conservators to make bye-laws. One of the bye-laws made by them provided that no person, not being an elector named & described in the list of voters, should vote at any election of conservators under the Act. A house within the limits of the Act was let to R. & his sister-in-law, as joint tenants, at an annual rent of £300. The house was occupied by both, but the rates & taxes were always paid by the lady, whose name alone appeared on the parish rate-books as ratepayer in respect of the house, R. contributing half the amount paid. The triennial meeting for the election of conservators was to be held, & in the list of electors, which was prepared by the overseers from the rate-books, the lady's name alone appeared in respect of the house in question. R. had been nominated as one of the candidates for election at the meeting, but the returning officer had refused to accept his nomination on the ground that his name was not upon the list of electors:—Held: (1) R. was a tenant or occupier of a dwelling-house within the meaning of the Act; (2) payment of rates was not required by the Act as a qualification as an elector, & R. was qualified as an elector, & eligible as a candidate for the office of conservator; (3) nothing done by the conservators could diminish R.'s right to vote as tenant or occupier unless a power to do so was conferred upon them by an Act of equal authority with the present Act; (4) if the bye-law had a contrary effect it was void & must be disregarded.—*PURVES v. Scheme—Conclusive as to extent of common—After confirmation.]—Where a scheme for the regulation of a common has been framed & confirmed under Metropolitan Commons Act, 1866 (c. 122), it is conclusive as to the limits & extent of the common. The owner of any land which is included in the plan embodied in the scheme cannot, after the passing of the Act confirming the scheme, successfully assert his title thereto.—COOK v. MITCHAM COMMON CONSERVATORS, [1901] 1 Ch. 387; 70 L. J. Ch. 223; 83 L. T. 519; 49 W. R. 201; 17 T. L. R. 63.

1090. Common vested in London County Council—Expenses of paving new street abutting on common—London County Council not liable as "owners"—Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 250.]—By virtue of a scheme certified by the Inclosure Comrs. pursuant to Metropolitan Commons Act, 1886 (c. 122), & afterwards confirmed by Metropolitan Commons Supplemental Act, 1873 (c. 86), a common was vested in the Metropolitan Board of Works, whose successors are the London County Council, for the purpose of being dedicated to the public as a recreation ground. By the scheme it was provided that the common should be regulated & managed by the board, & that no house or other buildings should be erected on it, except such lodges or other buildings as might be necessary for the maintenance & management of the common or recreation ground. The county council derived small annual profits from the herbage on the common & from certain buildings erected thereon for purposes subsidiary to its use as a public recreation ground, but the expenses annually incurred by the county council in the management & regulation of the common far exceeded the amount of any profits so received by them. The W. Borough Council claimed from the London County Council as owners of the common, a sum of £319, as their proportion of the estimated expenses of paving a new street, on which the common abutted to the extent of 474 feet, under Act of 1855, s. 105, & the Act of 1862, s. 77:—Held: the London County Council were not owners of the common within the definition of the word "owner" contained in Metropolis Management Act, 1855, s. 250, & they were not liable to pay the amount claimed.—*LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL v. Part Compulsory Powers over Land.

SECT. 1.—GRANT OF POWERS BY PARLIAMENT.

See, generally, STATUTES.

1. Permissive powers not obligatory.]—(1) Acts of Parliament authorising cos. to make railways are now regarded as but enabling statutes, which give powers, but do not render compulsory or obligatory the exercise of those powers.

It was at one time supposed in England, as it seems to have been thought in Scotland, that permissive powers given by an Act of Parliament, to a co. were obligatory upon them. The cases, however, so deciding, have been reversed (LORD WENSLEYDALE).

(2) A co., after getting their Act, determined to abstain from executing the line which it sanctioned:—Held: they could not be compelled specifically to perform an agreement for the purchase of land which they had contracted to purchase for the purposes of the line, but which, as they had relinquished the undertaking, they no longer required.

Where the time limited for making the line had expired, & where consequently the powers of the co. under their Act had expired:—Held: (3) the co. could not be called upon to enter into an arbn. under a contract which had assumed them to be in full possession of their authority; (4) an action might lie for damages, though a bill could not be sustained for specific performance.—SCOTTISH NORTH-EASTERN RY. CO. v. STEWART (1859), 33 L. T. O. S. 307; 5 Jur. N. S. 607; 7 W. R. 458; 3 Macq. 382, II. L.

Annotations:—As to (1) Reid. R. v. G. W. Ry. (1893), 62 L. J. Q. B. 572; Darlaston L. B. v. L. & N. W. Ry., [1894] 2 Q. B. 694. Generally, Consd. Taylor v. Chichester & Midhurst Ry. (1867), L. R. 2 Exch. 356.

2. Act of Parliament essential.—To confer compulsory powers.]—DUNBALI v. WALTERS (1865), 35 Beav. 565; 12 L. T. 759; 55 E. R. 1016.

3. On ground of general public good.]—GRAY v. LIVERPOOL & BURY RY. CO. (1846), 9 Beav. 391; 4 Ry. & Can. Cas. 235; 7 L. T. O. S. 201; 10 Jur. 361; 50 E. R. 394, L. C.

4. — Power of promoters to contract not to use powers.]—Where the Legislature confers powers on any body, whether one which is seeking to make a profit for shareholders, or one acting solely for the public good, to take lands compulsorily for a particular purpose, it is on the ground that the using of that land for that purpose will be for the public good; & a contract purporting to bind such a body & their successors not to use those powers is void.

Harbour trustees, constituted for the management & improvement of a public harbour by a special Act, which incorporated Lands (Scotland) Act, 1845, were empowered to take lands scheduled, which included that part of O.'s land having an unrestricted frontage to the harbour, for the undertaking. While the question of compensation to O. for his land was before the arbiter the trustees lodged a minute agreeing that the conveyance should restrict their use of the ground taken so as not to interfere with the access from the remaining property of O. to the harbour.

To this minute O. did not assent. The arbiter found £4,900 payable by the trustees as compensation for an unrestricted use, or £2,786 if it were competent for the trustees to bind themselves & their successors by the minute. O. raised an action for declarator of an absolute purchase & unrestricted right in the subject & for payment of the larger sum:—Held: (1) the trustees had power under their special Act, then or at any future time, to make erections on the piece of ground taken, which would effectually destroy the frontage of O.'s remaining property to the harbour; (2) it was not competent to the trustees to dispense with future exercise of their powers by themselves & their successors.

(3) If the trustees could bind themselves & their successors by the agreement, & that agreement would prevent O.'s land from being injuriously affected, O., by refusing his assent, could not get compensation for the injury he might have prevented (LORD BLACKBURN).—AYR HARBOUR TRUSTEES v. OSWALD (1883), 8 App. Cas. 623, II. L. Annotations:—As to (1) Reid. R. v. S. E. Ry. & Wiffin's Contract, [1907] 2 Ch. 366. As to (2) Apld. Croyke v. Hatfield Chase Corpn. (1896), 12 T. L. Sutton, Southcoates, & Drypool Gas Co. (1899), 68 L. J. Ch. 457. Apld. R. v. S. E. Ry. & Wiffin's Contract, [1907] 2 Ch. 366. Distd. Stourcliffe Estates Co. v. Talbot, [1902] 2 Ch. 759. Generally, Mentd. Tiverton & North Devon Ry. v. Loosemore (1884), 9 App. Cas. 480.

5. — Where the promoters of a public undertaking have authority from Parliament to interfere with private property on certain terms, any person whose property is interfered with by virtue of that authority has a right to require that the promoters shall comply with the letter of the enactment so far as it makes provision on his behalf. Nor can any ct. remodel arrangements sanctioned, or relax conditions imposed, by Act of Parliament.

It may be stated generally, that Parliament in passing a private Act looks to the public advantage & security, & also looks to the interference with private rights. Where a work of any kind has to be constructed, Parliament has made an elaborate set of provisions intended to secure to the public the advantages which the promoters propose as the reason for legislation, & as the consideration for the rights of the persons affected, or sought to be affected, by the intended legislation. In dealing with the latter class of questions it has been said that the particular provisions may rather be regarded as words of contract to which the Legislature has given its sanction than the words of the Legislature itself (LORD HALSBURY, C.).—HERRON v. RATHMINES & RATHGAR IMPROVEMENT COMRS., [1892] A. C. 498; 67 L. T. 658, H. L.

PART I. SECT. 1.

a. Effect of expropriation.]—Expropriation under statute is a compulsory sale, & the ordinary results of transfer of ownership follow as in the case of a voluntary sale.—GRIMBECK v. COLONIAL GOVERNMENT (1900), 17 S. C. 200.—S. AF.

b. Rights of landowners — Whether

c. — —.]—Lands cannot be expropriated under statute without payment of compensation.—SMART (PUBLIC WORKS COMR.) v. LOGAN (1903), 88 L. T. 779, P. C.—S. AF.

d. Construction of Act granting powers—Whether retrospective—48 Vict. c. 23.]—The above Act enabling the govt. to expropriate land for public purposes, is not retrospective.—

Sect. 1.—Grant of powers by Parliament. Sects. 2 & 3. Part II. Sect. 1: Sub-sect. 1, A., B. & C.; sub-sect. 2.]

6. Rights of landowners—In general.]—Acts of Parliament for making canals, railroads, etc., are powers given by Parliament over the land of the different proprietors through whose estates the works are to proceed. Each proprietor, therefore, has a right to have the power strictly & literally carried into effect as regards his own lands, & also a right to require that no variation shall be made to his prejudice. But where the Act of Parliament is faithfully carried into execution as regards his lands, he cannot, on the mere ground of a variation which is not injurious to himself, & which was made with the consent of others, obtain from a ct. of equity an injunction to stay the proceedings.—LEE v. MILNER (1837), 2 Y. & C. Ex. 611; 160 E. R. 540.

—Specific rights.]—See* particular Parts, passim.

7. Jurisdiction of court—Over promoters—In general.]—Principles upon which the ct. will exercise its jurisdiction over bodies to whom Parliament has given powers of making compulsory purchases of land:—Semble: (1) the ct. will not allow such bodies to avail themselves of their Parliamentary powers by taking land which they do not require for a bonâ fide purpose sanctioned by their Act of Parliament; (2) although an attempt to obtain possession of land has been, in the first instance, made under colour of the powers of the Act of Parliament, when not really required for the bonâ fide purposes of the Act, yet if the land afterwards becomes really necessary or desirable for such bonâ fide purposes, the ct. will not interfere to prevent its being taken.

(3) Ambiguous words in an Act of Parliament, authorising a public co. to take land by compulsory process, are to be construed against the co. & in favour of private property.—WEBB v. MANCHESTER & LEEDS RY. CO. (1839), 4 My. & Cr. 116; 1 Ry. & Can. Cas. 576; 41 E. R. 46, L. C.

Annotations:—As to (1) Consd. Gray v. Liverpool & Bury Ry. (1846), 4 Ry. & Can. Cas. 235; Dowling v. Pontypool Caerleon & Newport Ry. (1874), L. R. 18 Eq. 714. Refd. Tawney v. Lynn & Ely Ry. 8. ———.]—The ct. in exercising its jurisdiction to prevent cos., entrusted by the Legislature with large powers, from acting in a manner prejudicial to the rights of individuals on the one hand, will, on the other, be careful not to assist persons in availing themselves of any omission in such powers, for the purpose of giving effect to exorbitant claims against the cos.—BELL v. HULL & SELBY RY. CO. (1840), 1 Ry. & Can. Cas. 616, L. C.; subsequent proceedings, 6 M. & W. 699.

SECT. 1.—BY LANDS CLAUSES ACTS.

SUB-SECT. 1.—INCORPORATION OF ACTS.

A. Application to Special Acts before 1845 Act.

21. Application of incorporated Acts—Amendment of special Act by later Act.]—(1) In 1845 a landowner received, under an arbn., compensation for the land, & “in respect of damages which might be sustained by reason of making a railway” :—Held: he was not precluded from insisting on a further compensation for future unforeseen damages subsequently sustained.

(2) A railway Act was passed in 1844, under which certain lands were taken. Afterwards, in 1845, Lands Act, 1845, was passed, & in 1847 a second railway Act was passed extending the first :—Held: Lands Act, 1845, applied to the whole undertaking, became consolidated with the Acts of 1844 & 1847, & the owner of lands taken under the Act of 1844 became entitled to the benefit of its provisions.

(3) There is no equity arising from the provisions of Lands Act, 1845, s. 68, to restrain a party alleging himself to be injuriously affected from recovering compensation by an arbn. or a jury, in the manner thereby prescribed.

(4) In 1848 a landowner gave a railway co. notice for a jury to assess damages which he alleged he had suffered. In 1849 he made a claim for further subsequent damages, & in 1850 gave notice for an arbitrator to assess the whole damages :—Held: this was not irregular, & the first notice had not exhausted all the statutory powers.—*LANCASHIRE & YORKSHIRE RY. SUB-SECT. 2.—CONSTRUCTION OF ACTS.

See Lands Act, 1845, ss. 2, 3.

25. General rule.]—Where the special Act of a railway co. incorporates Lands Act, 1845, but the general scope of the special Act shows the other to be clearly inapplicable to it, the public Act is to be considered as expressly varied by the special Act. It need not be varied in terms; but, if substantially inconsistent, it will be so regarded, & the provisions of the special Act will prevail.—WELD v. SOUTH WESTERN RY. CO. (1863), 32 Beav. 340; 1 New Rep. 415; 33 L. J. Ch. 142; 8 L. T. 13; 9 Jur. N. S. 510; 11 W. R. 448; 55 E. R. 133.

26. ———.]—(1) A waterworks co. were by their special Act, with which was incorporated Waterworks Act, 1847, authorised to make & maintain the reservoirs, aqueducts & other works therein described in the line & situation, & on the levels, & upon the lands delineated on the deposited plans & described in the books of reference & defined on the sections, & to enter upon, take, purchase & use such of the lands, etc. mentioned in the plans & books of reference as they might deem necessary for all or any of those purposes. The works authorised, so far as they related to a particular field which was situate within marked limits of deviation, were described as “an aqueduct, constructed in tunnel or otherwise, as shown on the original plans,” which plans indicated no surface works upon the field, but merely showed that it was intended to construct, at a depth of at least forty feet under same, an aqueduct in tunnel. After the special Act was passed, the co. served the owners of the field with a notice to treat for the purchase of it, with the view of sinking shafts in order to obtain an additional supply of water, & also of erecting thereon permanent pumping engines for raising water from beneath its surface. Upon a bill filed by the owners of the field against the co. for an injunction to restrain the co. from proceeding to summon a jury to assess the value of the field, & from using it for any other purpose than the construction of an aqueduct :—Held: the co. were not authorised to take or use the field permanently for any other purpose than that indicated upon the deposited plans.

(2) A public co. claiming statutory powers must prove clearly & distinctly from their Act of Parliament, the existence of those powers, & if there is any doubt as to their extent, that doubt must operate for the benefit of the landowner.—SIMPSON

29. (1) Lands Act, 1845, was divided into different subjects by headings, which were accompanied by corresponding words in the margin. Thus there was a division marked by the words "intersected lands" in the margin. In the body of the statute was a line containing these words as a heading, "With respect to small portions of intersected land, be it enacted, as follows." Then came two sects., the first of which, s. 93, began thus, "If any lands not being situate in a town, etc." The second sect., s. 94, began,

"If any such land shall be so cut through & divided":—Held: the word "such" in s. 94 was not confined to "lands not being situate in a town," as described in s. 93, but applied to the words in the general heading, "small portions of intersected land."

(2) An action was brought against a railway co. for not making a communication between small portions of intersected lands as required by s. 93. The co. pleaded & claimed the benefit of s. 94 & in the course of the plea averred that the lands were not situate in a town. This averment was found against the co.:—Held: it was an immaterial averment, & notwithstanding this finding, the co. was entitled to the benefit of s. 94.—EASTERN COUNTIES & LONDON & BLACKWALL RY. 36. ———.]—By a special Act the S. Co. were authorised to make a railway & to carry it across the railway of the G. Co., at one point by a bridge over & at another by an archway under that railway, the archway to remain the property of the G. Co. S. 8 of the Act, which was inserted at the instance of the G. Co. for their protection, provided that the S. Co. should not purchase & take any land of the G. Co. which the S. Co. were authorised to use, enter upon or interfere with, but that the S. Co. might purchase & take, & the G. Co. should sell & grant accordingly, an easement or right of using same in perpetuity for the purposes of the Act; & s. 9 of the Act provided that if any dispute should arise respecting the matters aforesaid it should be settled by an arbitrator to be appointed under the Act. Lands Act, 1845, except where expressly varied by the special Act, was incorporated therewith, & it was enacted that the words & expressions to which meanings were assigned by Lands Act should have the same respective meanings unless there was something in the subject or context repugnant to such construction. The S. Co. gave the G. Co. a notice to treat for the purchase of an easement or right in or over lands of the G. Co. for the purposes of the crossings, & shortly afterwards a notice of their desire to enter upon & use the lands for those purposes, & of their intention to apply to the Board of Trade to appoint a surveyor to determine the value of such easement or right. The valuation was made, & the S. Co. deposited the amount & entered into a bond under Lands Act, 1845, s. 85. The G. Co. having brought an action for an injunction to restrain the S. Co. from entering or continuing upon the lands mentioned in the notice to treat, or from putting in force any of the powers of the special Act or of Lands Act in relation to the compulsory purchase of land, on the ground that the capital of the S. Co. had not been duly subscribed as required by Lands Act, 1845, s. 16:—Held: (1) the S. Co. could not be restrained on that ground.

(2) The assertion of the rights conferred by s. 8 of the special Act was not a "putting in force of the powers of Lands Act, 1845, or of the special Act in relation to the compulsory taking of land"; (3) even if the perpetual easements created by s. 8 of the special Act would constitute "land" within Lands Act, 1845, s. 16, yet the case had been taken out of the compulsory powers of Lands Act by s. 8 of the special Act (LORD FITZGERALD).—*GREAT WESTERN RY. 39. — Mines and Minerals.]—(1) A railway co., having the usual power to purchase lands under its special Act, has, by virtue of Lands Act, 1845, s. 6, power also to purchase the minerals under those lands compulsorily at any time before the expiration of the time limited for the exercise of its compulsory powers, if it should deem it advisable. That power is not taken away by Railways Act, 1845, ss. 77 et seq., which are for the benefit not of the mine owner but of the co., & only exempt the co. from the obligation of buying the minerals at once together with the surface lands.

(2) The words "expressly purchased" in s. 77 are not to be confined to "purchased by agreement."

(3) There is no distinction between the severance of ownership vertically, that is, of the surface lands from the mines beneath, & the severance of ownership laterally by the taking by successive purchases of surface lands from the same landowner. So a railway co. having already acquired surface lands may subsequently purchase compulsorily the minerals under those lands.

(4) The opinion of the co.'s engineer, if bonded, is the only evidence required by the ct. as to the necessity or propriety of any purchase, & the burden of proving want of bona fides rests upon the party opposing the purchase.—ERRINGTON v. METROPOLITAN DISTRICT RY. CO. (1882), 19 Ch. D. 559; 51 L. J. Ch. 305; 46 L. T. 443; 30 W. R. 663, C. A.

48. — Completion of part of works.]—East London Ry. Act, 1865, authorised the making of several small railways, & the taking possession of lands for that purpose. Each of these railways passed through more than one parish. By s. 128 it was provided that "if & while the co. are possessed under this Act of any lands assessed or liable to be assessed, to any sewers rate, consolidated rate, poor rate, police rate, main drainage rate, church rate or other parochial or ward rate, they shall, from time to time, until the railway or the works thereof are completed & assessed, or liable to be assessed, be liable to make good the deficiency in the assessment for such rates, by reason of those lands being taken or used for the purposes of the railway or works; & the deficiency shall be computed according to the rental at which those lands with any buildings thereon are now rated." A portion of one of these railways was completely constructed in one parish, & was worked there. Till its completion there, the directors had paid in that parish the deficiency rate as provided in this clause. On its completion there, they claimed that they should be relieved from the deficiency rate:—Held: the rate was properly a parochial rate, & on the completion of that portion of the railway in that parish, the title of the parish officers to claim the deficiency rate there had ceased.—EAST LONDON RY. 50. — Separate undertakings.] —(1) By Lands Act, 1845, s. 133, the promoters of undertakings who become possessed under statutory authority of lands liable to be assessed to the poor rate, are liable to make good the deficiency caused thereby "until the works shall be completed & assessed to the poor rate." An urban sanitary authority, acting under statutory authority, took for the purposes of improvements lands situate in a number of parishes & liable to be assessed to the poor rate. In some cases all the land so taken was used in the construction of the roadways of new streets, but in some cases more land was taken than was required for that purpose, so that the sanitary authority became possessed of surplus land which was vacant, unoccupied & unassessed. Such land was to be disposed of either by sale in fee simple or by the creation of rent-charges which were to be sold within a specified time, which had not expired when the rating authority brought an action to recover from the sanitary authority the amount of the deficiency in the assessment to the poor rate caused by the lands having been taken:—Held: (1) the works were completed within the above Act, s. 133, so as to relieve the undertakers from the liability to make good the deficiency so caused, when the streets were fully made, & such of the lands taken as might be liable to assessment had become assessable; (2) the deficiency was to be computed from time to time by comparing the assessed value at the time of the special Act of the lands taken with the assessed value at the time of computation of such of the lands taken as might have again become assessable.

(2) The authority to put in force the compulsory powers of Lands Clauses Consolidation Acts was conferred by a provisional order confirmed by a statute which described in one schedule, but under headings separately numbered, the several improvement schemes promoted by the sanitary authority:—Held: each scheme described in the schedule constituted a separate undertaking, & the deficiency in the assessment ought to be calculated on each separate undertaking within the rating area affected by it.—BRISTOL GUARDIANS v. BRISTOL CORPN. (1887), 18 Q. B. D. 549; 56 L. J. Q. B. 320; 56 L. T. 641; 51 J. P. 676; 35 W. R. 619; 3 T. L. R. 446, C. A.

51. When deficiency ascertained—Part of land unoccupied.]—The promoters of a railway co. purchased houses beyond the limits of deviation from the line of the railway, in order to obtain the withdrawal of the opposition of the owners of such houses to the passing of the special Act. Some of the houses were unoccupied when acquired by the promoters:—Held: (1) as the promoters could only hold land under the powers given them by 45 i. Deficiency in poor rate—Until completion of work—How deficiency computed.]—In regard to lands taken by a ry. co. under powers in a special Act subsequent to that by which they were incorporated, the works are not completed until the lands by conversion have become part of the undertaking, & as such liable to assessment; & the deficiency in assessment for poor-rates is to be computed according to the rental at which such lands & buildings thereon were valued at the time of passing of the special Act, under deduction of the value of those portions converted to the purposes of the undertaking, & also of those on which the buildings were still standing.—HALL (COLLECTOR OF POOR RATES FOR CITY PARISH OF GLASGOW) v. 45 ii. — Over portion of land taken but not over whole.]—In a claim for deficiency in assessments for poor-rates against a ry. co. by reason of lands having been taken for the ry.'s undertaking:—Held: (1) all lands taken must be considered in order to ascertain whether or not any deficiency actually existed; (2) where the assessment for all lands showed no deficiency no claim could be made against the co. although portions of the land were deficient.—HALL v. CITY OF GLASGOW UNION RY. CO. (1881), 8 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 687; 18 Sc. L. R. 433.—SCOT.

statute, they could not be heard to say that they had become possessed of the houses otherwise than by virtue of their Acts, & they were liable to make good the deficiency in the assessments for poor rate; (2) as Lands Act, 1845, s. 133, directed that the deficiency should be computed according to the rental at which the houses were valued or rated at the time of the passing of the special Act, the fact that some of them were then unoccupied was immaterial in estimating the amount of the deficiency.—PUTNEY OVERSEERS v. 52. — Rates compounded under Poor Rate Assessment & Collection Act, 1869 (c. 41), s. 3.—The owners of houses on land taken by the promoters of an undertaking for the purpose of their works had made agreements under s. 3 of the above Act with the rating authority of the district to pay the rates instead of the occupiers, subject to being allowed a deduction of 25 per cent. from the amount of such rates, & those agreements were in force when the promoters took the land:—Held: on the true construction of Lands Act, 1845, s. 133, the deficiency which the promoters were liable to make good must be computed having regard to the ratable value at the time the special Act was passed, & they were not entitled to claim the deduction of 25 per cent. from the amount of the rates levied according to that value.—ST. Pursuant to the powers contained in the Act the railway co. acquired land separated from the road by a small stream, & certain bridges had been thrown across the stream connecting the land acquired by the railway co. with the road:—Held: the ct. was bound to attach to the word “abut” the only meaning which could give real effect to the intention of the parties, & the existence of the bridges connecting the railway co.’s land with ptfs.’ road was sufficient to satisfy the use of the word “abut.”—R. in depth. Pltf., relying on the plans & sections, did not oppose the bill in Parliament, which passed into an Act. The railway co. afterwards gave notice of their intention to deviate from the original plans, & to make their cutting sixty-one feet nearer pltf.'s house, & to make a bridge over his avenue seventeen feet high :—Held : (1) parties are bound by what is represented on the deposited plans & sections, so far only as such plans & sections are incorporated in or specially referred to by the Act ; (2) the ct. will not regard what is done under the Standing Orders of Parliament, but will only look at the Act itself ; (3) the plans are binding to determine the level of the railway with reference to the datum line, but not to the surface level of the land over or through which the railway passes ; (4) a vertical deviation of the level of a railway, not exceeding five feet, calculated with reference to the datum line shown on the plans & sections deposited in pursuance of the Standing Orders of Parliament, was within the powers of deviation conferred by Railways (Scotland) Act, 1845, s. 11, although the deviation might exceed five feet, calculated with reference to the surface line shown on the plans & sections.

(5) If a contract, or an Act of Parliament, refers to a plan, to the extent that the Act refers to the plan & for the purpose for which the Act or contract refers to the plan, it is part of the contract or part of the Act.

(6) An Act of Parliament of this sort has, by all the judges who have considered the subject, been considered as a contract. The Act of Parliament must be considered as overruling & doing away with everything that had taken place prior to the time when the Act of Parliament was passed, & renders the representation or proposal of the co., pending the Act of Parliament, of no avail (LORD CAMPBELL).—*NORTH BRITISH RY. Pltf.'s premises would not have been reached by the incline, as exhibited in the deposited plans ; but, by the alteration, an embankment five feet in height passed by two sides of that part of pltf.'s premises which faced the street, partially obstructing the access & the supply of light & air :—Held : (1) except where the plans & sections form part of the Act, they are referred to for the purposes of determining the datum line only ; (2) the plans & sections, although referred to, were not so incorporated into the special Act, & did not so form part of it, as to preclude the co. from availing themselves of the powers conferred by Railways Act, 1845, s. 16.—*BEARDMER v. A railway co. deposited with the clerk of the peace plans & sections of a railway & station which they intended to obtain power to make, showing that they proposed to stop up certain streets, but proposed to cross S. street on an arch. The Act which the co. obtained referred to the plans & sections, but gave the co. power to stop up all the streets within a certain defined area, which included S. street :—Held : (1) the co. had power to stop up S. street ; (2) Railways Act, 1845, ss. 13, 14, were controlled by the sect. in the special Act which gave power to stop up the streets within the defined area.—*A.-G. v. 68. — Extent of incorporation.]—By Cardiff Railway Act, 1906, which incorporated Railways Clauses Acts, so far as they were applicable to & not varied by or inconsistent therewith, the C. Co. was empowered to make a short line joining its railway with that of the T. Co. "in the line & according to the levels shown on the deposited plans." The deposited plans indicated that the junction line would be carried on an embankment in order to bring it up to the level of the two railways which were to be connected. Alongside the T. railway was a narrow strip of land which that co. had acquired for the purpose of sidings not yet constructed. The C. co. originally proposed to purchase so much of this strip as was necessary to enable them to carry their embankment over it, but the special Act as passed provided that the C. co. should not purchase any portion of the strip, but should acquire an easement or right of using same for the purpose of the junction authorised. The C. co. served upon the T. co. a notice to treat for the purchase of an easement or right over the portion of the strip in question for the purpose of making a solid embankment across it in order to effect the junction. The T. co. brought an action to restrain the C. co. from proceeding upon their notice to treat on the ground that they were not authorised by their Act to construct a solid embankment & that the notice was consequently invalid. The T. co. contended that an embankment would prevent their using the strip for the purpose of sidings & that the junction line ought to be carried over the strip upon a bridge. The C. co. contended that the deposited plans indicated an embankment, & that under Railways Act, 1845, s. 14, & Railways Act, 1863, ss. 9, 10, 11, they were bound to make the connection in that way :—(1) the deposited plans were obligatory on the co. only so far as they were expressly or by implication made so by the special Act, whereas in that Act the only matters expressly referred to were the "line" & "levels." The plans dealt with land which the co. proposed to purchase & indicated what should be done on that land when purchased. The conditions were changed when purchase was prohibited, & the qualified incorporation of the general Acts applied to land which the C. co. could not acquire; (2) there being two practicable modes whereby the co. might cross the strip, namely, an embankment & a bridge, & Parliament not having prescribed the mode by which the crossing was to be effected, the C. co. were not entitled to select that mode which was the more burdensome to the T. co., & that co. ought not to be required to grant an easement more extensive than the purposes of the junction demanded.—*TAFF VALE RY. 71. — Works confined to those authorised by special Act.]—Defts. constructed, under an Act of Parliament, a railway which crossed a carriage highway on a level at two places, thereby cutting off on the west a bend in the highway thirty chains in length from the rest of the highway, & made a new road on the east side of the line parallel to it, connecting the two ends of the highway from which the bend was cut off. Under their Act they had no special authority to cross this highway on a level, nor to divert it, but on the deposited plan "Proposed diversion of road" was shown in the direction in which the new road was made, & they had power by their Act to make the railway on the line delineated upon the plan:—Held: neither the delineation on the plan, without special power in their Act, nor Railways Act, 1845, s. 16, authorised defts. to divert permanently the road, & they were bound by s. 46 to carry the road over the railway, or the railway over the road, by means of a bridge, in order to connect the bend with the rest of the highway.—R. v.

82. — Meaning of “delineated.”]—A railway Act empowered the co. to take lands delineated on the deposited plans & described in the book of reference:—Held: (1) where the boundary of a plot was left unclosed outside the limits of deviation, the co. might at any rate take up to the limits of deviation; (2) the word “delineated” could not be limited to mean surrounded on every side by lines, but it meant sketched, or represented, or so shown that landowners would have notice that the land might be taken.

Evidence, not before the Committee of Parliament, was admitted to prove boundaries beyond those shown on the deposited plans, & was used in determining the extent of the “lands delineated.” Evidence of engineers, as experts, on the construction of the plans & of the Act was not admitted.

The co. in order to avoid the necessity of completely blocking up pltf.’s entrance, took land of theirs to divert a road so as to diminish the obstruction:—Held: such land was necessary for the purposes of the Act, though the pltf. did not desire the diversion of the road, & objected to their land being taken for the purpose.

The deposited plans & book of reference showed a small plot, No. 38, nearly surrounded by a large plot, No. 37. The schedule to the notice to treat mentioned 37 but not 38, & the accompanying plan omitted both the number & the boundary of 38. The painted area on the notice plan in fact covered the site of No. 38, & this fact was known to the pltf. long before they pointed out the objection:—Held: the notice was sufficient under the circumstances to entitle the co. to take 38.

Where a railway co. was bound by its Act to make a good & sufficient siding on a specified field of an owner who had opposed the bill:—Held: the obligation was not broken, though the co. took for other purposes so much of the specified field as not to leave any to furnish access from the siding to an adjoining road without passing over the land taken, or out of the specified field.

Where a railway co. took land in excess of its powers:—Semble: the ct. would not grant relief by injunction if the quantity & value of the land were extremely small.—DOWLING v. PONTYPOOL, CAERLEON & NEWPORT RY. CO. (1874), L. R. 18 Eq. 714; 43 L. J. Ch. 761.

83. — — — — —.]—Pltf. were tenants of a nursery ground, through the S.W. part of which ran the central line of an intended railway, as shown on the deposited plans. Only the S.W. boundary & part of the S.E. boundary of the nursery ground were delineated on the plans, the latter being carried to a point a little to the N.E. of the N.E. limit of deviation, & the paths in the ground were carefully delineated & carried on to short unequal distances beyond the same limit. The co. gave pltf. notice to treat for a strip of land bounded on the N.E. by an imaginary line beyond, & distant about a chain & a half from, the N.E. limit of deviation. If this line had been traced on the plan, the tracings of the outer boundary of the nursery ground, & those of nearly all the paths, would have stopped short of it. Pltf. applied for an injunction to restrain the co. from taking any ground to the N.E. of the N.E. limit of deviation, as not being delineated on the plans:—Held: nothing to the N.E. of the limit of deviation could be considered to be “delineated” on the plan, & the co. could not take compulsorily anything beyond that limit.

When a co. seek to obtain power to acquire a limited portion only of a piece of land of great extent which is not broken up into closes, they must frame their deposited plans in such a way as to show how much of it they mean to acquire power to take.—*PROTHEROE v. 84. — Land reasonably required for construction of line—Houses partly within and partly without limits.]—By a special Act a railway co. were authorised to widen their existing railway, & on the parliamentary plans the existing line of railway was delineated, & there were dotted lines on either side indicating the limits of the deviation. The co. constructed a portion of their widening outside the limits shown by one of the dotted lines & upon land taken by them from pltf., who brought this action against them for an injunction, but did not show that he had sustained any special damage by reason of their acts. To effect the desired extension it was sought to expropriate lands which were not marked or referred to on the map or plan filed under the statute:—Held: (1) the statutory provision that land required for a railway should be indicated on a map or plan filed in the department of railways, before it could be expropriated, applied as well to a deviation from the original line as to the line itself; (2) the co. having failed to show any statutory authority therefor, would be restrained from taking the land against the owners’ consent.—*KINGSTON & PEMBROKE RY. taken by the co. was comprised in the parliamentary plans & books of reference. It consisted of two dwelling-houses & their curtilages. The co. first gave notice to take such parts of them as were within the limits of deviation, but after receiving a notice from the tenants under Lands Act, 1845, s. 92, requiring them to take the whole of the tenements, & also a letter from the landlord refusing to give up any part which he was not compelled to sell, they gave a fresh notice to take the remainder of the two tenements:—Held: (1) as the land taken was included in the parliamentary plans & no special damage to pltf. had been proved, the action could not be maintained; (2) as the two houses & curtilages were included in the parliamentary plans, & were reasonably necessary to be taken for the completion of the co.'s works, the co. had the power to take them, although they were outside the limits of deviation, & the notices were valid, notwithstanding the refusal of consent on the part of the landlord.—*FINCK v. In the margin of the schedule the property proposed to be taken was referred to as “Property in the line of the proposed work as at present laid out, including property any part of which is within eleven yards or thereabouts of the centre line of such proposed work as delineated upon the plan:—Held: (1) the corp'n. were not by this statement restricted from taking a greater total breadth than twenty-two yards, provided that what they took was within the limits of deviation prescribed by their Act; (2) if necessary, the words “or thereabouts” might be considered to extend the limit to an entire breadth of one-third more than the specified quantity of twice eleven yards; (3) after a reference to arbn. the landowner was bound to sell all that was comprised in the notice to treat, whether it was or was not within the compulsory powers of the corp'n.

87. Land described in plan—Likely to be wanted.]—A market co. obtained a special Act, which, after reciting that a convenient site might be obtained, between certain streets on the east & certain other streets on the west, enacted that Market & Fairs Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 14) was incorporated therewith. By s. 24 the erection of a market-house on land described in the deposited plans was authorised, & by s. 25 the co. were enabled to alter & widen streets in the way pointed out on the deposited plans, & by s. 30, to buy additional lands, not exceeding two acres. A. was the owner of land on the west side of one of the streets on the western boundary of the area spoken of in the preamble, & his land was described in the deposited plans, but it did not thereby appear that more was intended to be taken than enough to widen one of the streets named in s. 25. The co. proceeded to take the whole land of A. compulsorily, & to build upon it a covered building, in addition to the market-house authorised by s. 24, whereupon A. filed his bill for an injunction, which was granted. The co. appealed:—Held: (1) as the land of pltf. was described in the plan, & as it might be wanted, the co. were authorised to take it; (2) as by the general Act the singular might mean the plural, the co. were not restricted by the word market-house; (3) the enactments of the special Act did not require a reference to the preamble to explain them, & the injunction must be dissolved, the co. being the proper judges of what lands were necessary for the works.—*RICHARDS v. 93. — — — As to quantity of land required.]—A landowner agreed with a railway co. to sell them ten acres of land & one acre for a station, at a certain price, & that if the co. should require more land for the station, or for any purpose, they should pay for the same at the rate of £100 per acre, & the agreement was to be supplemental to the Lands Act, 1845. The ten acres were paid for & conveyed. Before the compulsory powers of the co. had expired they gave, apparently by mistake, notice to treat for three acres more, & before the time for completion had expired they took possession of these three acres, alleging that they required the land. They also took possession of some small pieces of land which were covered by earth slipped from the railway:—Held: the agreement was not waived, but the co. had power, until the expiration of the time limited for the completion of the railway, to take such land as they required for the purpose of a station or for slips of earth at £100 an acre.

The ct. will accept as conclusive the evidence of the engineer in the service of the co. as to the quantity of land required for the purposes of the railway, if the statement has a reasonable appearance of accuracy.—KEMP v. SOUTH EASTERN Ry. Co. (1872), 7 Ch. App. 364; 41 L. J. Ch. 404; 26 L. T. 110; 20 W. R. 306, L. C.

94. — Purpose also attainable without acquisition of land.]—A railway co. obtained an Act of Parliament in 1864 for extending their operations, containing compulsory powers to take additional lands in connection with their undertaking. Pltf.'s land was included in the deposited plans referred to in the Act. It was provided by the Act that a street called A. street should not be stopped up by the co. without the consent of the vestry of the parish of I. In 1865, the co., having been unable to obtain the consent of the I. vestry to the stopping up of A. street, obtained another Act for the improvement of their H. station & for other purposes, by which it was recited that it was expedient that the co. should be empowered to stop up A. street, & also to acquire, by compulsion or otherwise, additional lands in connection with their undertaking, & the co. was empowered to take the lands included in the deposited plans; & it was also enacted that they might stop up A. street, provided that they made another street in a prescribed direction. None of pltf.'s land was included in the plans referred to in this Act. The co., before the expiration of the compulsory powers of the Act of 1864, gave notice to pltf. to take some of his land included in the plans referred to in that Act; although it was admitted that the land was wanted to form the new street under the provisions of the Act of 1865. Pltf. filed his bill for an injunction:—Held: pltf. was entitled to an injunction, the stopping up of A. street not being one of the purposes of the Act of 1864.

The ct. will not construe the compulsory powers of a railway co. so as to extend them beyond the express words or absolutely necessary implication of the Act; it being the duty of the co. to take care that the public understand, before the Act is passed, the extent of the compulsory powers which they require.

Where a railway co. has given notice to take land for some object which is clearly within their compulsory powers, the ct. will not interfere to restrain them merely on the ground that they might obtain same object in some other way without taking the land.—LAMB v. 98. ——— "Necessary for making & maintaining railway"—Taking soil for embankment.]—A railway co. had compulsory powers to purchase soil for their works, & to purchase such of the lands delineated in the plans, & within the limits of deviation indicated in the plans & books of reference, & to enter upon, take & use such of the lands as should be necessary for such purposes. They entered upon a small piece of land belonging to A. situate within the limits of deviation, & made a contract with him for the purchase of the soil found thereon for the purpose of making an embankment, forming part of the railway works situate at some distance from the other lands of A. After this the co. determined on the purchase of this small piece of land in fee simple, & gave the required notices for the assessment of its value. It appeared that the co. did not want this small piece of land for any other purpose than that of taking the soil for the embankment:—Held: the fee simple of the land was not necessary for the making & maintaining the railway within the meaning of the parliamentary powers of the co., but the soil alone being wanted, which they might purchase elsewhere under their powers, a perpetual injunction must be granted.

109. General rule.]—(1) Where persons have special powers conferred on them by Parliament for effecting a particular purpose, they cannot be allowed to exercise those powers for any purpose of a collateral kind. Therefore, a co. authorised, on making due compensation, to take compulsorily the lands of any person for a definite object, may be restrained by injunction from any attempt to take them for another object.

(2) The Mayor & Commonalty of the City of London had been entrusted with powers to make certain public improvements in the city, & for that purpose had been authorised compulsorily to take land, to raise money on the credit of it, & to sell superfluous land to pay off the debts:—Held: the Act which gave them those powers, though only thus impliedly authorising them to take more land than might be absolutely necessary to effect the desired improvements, might be construed favourably to them, & lands so taken might be treated as lands taken "for the purposes of the Act."

(3) Before the royal assent was given to an Act of this description the mayor & commonalty entered into a contract with a railway co. to sell to the co. certain lands which the mayor & commonalty expected to be authorised by the Act to take. When the Act had been passed, notice to take the land was given, & the taking was resisted by the landowner. A subsequent Act recited the contract, & declared the co. entitled to the benefit of it. Notice to take the land under this later Act was given by the mayor & commonalty to the landowner, but the notice expressly reserved to them all their rights under the former Act:—Held: the original contract was valid, & this later Act was a parliamentary recognition of it.

(4) Acts giving to a corp'n. compulsory powers for the purpose of effecting public improvements are not to be construed in the same strict manner as Acts giving like powers to any body of adventurers, such for example as a railway co.—GALLOWAY v. 111. ——— Power to take whole—Part only required.]—(1) Two houses adjoining W. street, in L., having been destroyed by fire, the outer walls only being left standing, the Comrs. of Sewers adjudicated that it was desirable to widen W. street, & that the two houses, & the land on which they stood, projected into & prevented them from widening the street, & that the possession & purchase of those houses was necessary for that purpose, & they directed their solr. to treat for the purchase. Notice to treat was accordingly given for the whole of the houses. The owners brought their action for an injunction to restrain the comrs. from proceeding on this notice. It was admitted by the comrs. that they only meant to use a strip of 5½ feet in breadth for widening the street, & intended to sell the rest without giving ptfs. any option of pre-emption:—Held: ptfs. were entitled to an injunction, for that the adjudication was ultra vires, the comrs. having no power to adjudicate that the possession of the whole of a piece of land is necessary for the purpose of improvements when they only intend to use a small part of it for that purpose, though if they made such an adjudication in the belief that they should require the whole for the improvements, the correctness of the adjudication could not be questioned.

Whether land taken for statutory purpose—Land bona fide intended to be taken & suitable for such purpose—Interference by court.]—The Congested Districts Board for Ireland were empowered by the Irish Land Act, 1909 (c. 42), with the aid of the Estate Comrs., to purchase lands compulsorily in any congested districts county for the amalgamation or enlargement of small holdings. In purported exercise of their statutory powers, the Board took steps to acquire compulsorily from pltf. several large estates situated in a congested districts county. Pltf. claimed to set aside the proceedings as ultra vires on the grounds that the Board proposed to take the lands not for their statutory purposes but for the reinstatement of evicted tenants & that the lands were incapable of being used for such statutory purposes:—Held: the claim failed, as it had not been proved either that the Board were taking the land for some purpose which their statutory powers did not authorise, or that they were acting without inquiry as to the suitability of the land for their statutory purposes.—CLANRICARDE (MARQUESS) v. 129. Acquisition of land for authorised purpose amounting to nuisance—No negligence—Cattle station.]—A railway co. were by their Act authorised among other things to carry cattle, & also to purchase by agreement, in addition to the lands which they were empowered to purchase compulsorily, any lands not exceeding in the whole fifty acres, in such places as should be deemed eligible, for the purpose of providing additional stations, yards & other conveniences for receiving, loading or keeping any cattle, goods or things conveyed or intended to be conveyed by the railway, or for making convenient roads or ways thereto, or for any other purposes connected with the undertaking which the co. should judge requisite. The co. were also empowered to sell such additional lands & to purchase in lieu thereof other lands which they should deem more eligible for the said purposes, & so on from time to time. The Act contained no provision for compensation in respect of lands so purchased by agreement. Under this power the co. some years after the expiration of the compulsory powers bought land adjoining one of their stations & used it as a yard or dock for their cattle traffic. To the occupiers of houses near the station the noise of the cattle & drovers was a nuisance which, but for the Act, would have been actionable. There was no negligence in the mode in which the co. conducted the business:—Held: the purpose for which the land was acquired being expressly authorised by the Act & being incidental & necessary to the authorised use of the railway for the cattle traffic, the co. were authorised to do what they did, &

In 1875 the corp'n. determined to appropriate about a quarter of an acre at one extremity of this piece of land as a site for the erection of town buildings & of a museum, public library, & school of art & conservatory:—Held: the erection of a free library was also allowable, as being conducive to the better enjoyment of the public walks & grounds as such.—A.-G. v. (2) A local authority have no power to apply permanently land which they have acquired for one purpose to another purpose inconsistent with the original purpose, even though the land cannot possibly be required for that original purpose, & they will be restrained from so doing at the suit of the A.-G. & the landowner from whom the land not required was purchased.—A.-G. v. 136. Land acquired for erection of electricity generating station—Part not immediately required for purpose for which acquired—Used for erection of refuse destructor.]—The principles which govern the provisions of Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 175, also apply to similar provisions in clause 8 of the schedule to Electric Lighting (Clauses) Act, 1899 (c. 19). Where therefore a local authority, under the powers of Electric Lighting Acts & a provisional order confirmed by a special Act, acquire land for the purpose of erecting thereon a generating station for the supply of electricity to their district, they cannot use any part of the land, for the time being not required for those purposes, for any purpose, e.g. the erection of a refuse destructor, not authorised by the order or inconsistent with the purposes for which the land was acquired.—A.-G. v. 137. Prevention of acquisition of prescriptive rights—By railway company—Hoarding to prevent right of light.]—A railway co. purchasing land for the railway acquires an absolute fee simple, but such fee simple is acquired solely for the purposes of constructing & using the railway. A railway co. has no right to erect hoardings to prevent prescriptive rights being acquired for windows looking across the line of railway.—NORTON v. LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. CO. (1878), 9 Ch. 138. ———.]—Pltf. was owner of a house some of the windows of which overlooked a piece of land belonging to a railway co. & used as a goods yard of a station. When the house had been built sixteen years the co. put up a screen opposite pltf.'s windows to prevent his acquiring an easement of light & air. Pltf. brought an action for injunction to restrain the co. from interfering with his light & air:—Held: pltf. had no equity to restrain the co. from taking measures to prevent prescriptive rights from being acquired for windows looking upon their land.—*BONNER v. 139. Alienation of land—Or easement over same—For purposes outside special Act—Sale of right of way under railway arch.]—(1) A railway co. having the usual powers under their special Act to take & use land for the purpose of the railway & works, cannot, whether for valuable consideration or otherwise, alienate for any purpose except the purposes of the Act any portion of its land, not being superfluous land within Lands Act, 1845, s. 127, & not being land taken for extraordinary purposes within Railways Act, 1845, s. 45, nor any easement over same.

140. Premises used as stable—Until required for authorised purposes—Right to claim right of way—From highway to stables.]—A railway co. purchased under the powers of their Act, a piece of land on which was a stable. By the conveyance to the co. the premises were granted together with all rights, members & appurtenances to the hereditaments belonging or occupied or enjoyed as part parcel or member thereof. The vendor had many years previously made a private road from the highway to the stable over his own land for his own convenience & had used it ever since. The soil of this road was not conveyed to the co. & no express mention of it was made in the conveyance. Pltf. refused to allow the co. to use the road:—Held: (1) notwithstanding the unity of possession of the stables & the private road at the date of the conveyance to the co., a right of way passed to the co. under the general words in the conveyance; (2) the fact of the stable having been purchased by a railway co. for the purposes of their undertaking did not preclude them from claiming the right of way so long as they used the premises as a stable, which they might lawfully do till such time as they were required for the special purposes of the railway, or were sold as superfluous land.

146. Regrant of easement of tunnelling—By railway company.]—By an accommodation works agreement a ry. co., who were purchasing a strip of land for their line, agreed that the landowner, his heirs, appointees, or assigns, might at any time thereafter make a tunnel thereunder to join the lands severed thereby. The co. also agreed to make a certain defined level crossing; the landowner subsequently conveyed the strip to the ry. co., reserving to himself the defined level crossing & the right to make a tunnel at his own expense, the level crossing & the privilege of making a tunnel being accepted in lieu of all other accommodation works. The site of the tunnel was in no way defined:—Held: (1) the provision in the agreement as to the tunnel was a personal contract & was not obnoxious to the rule against perpetuities; (2) the benefit of the contract could be specially assigned to a lessee of part of the severed lands during the continuance of the lease; (3) as the agreement & reservation amounted to a regrant of an easement by the ry. co. to the landowner, & not to an exception out of the land granted by him to the co., the right to select the site of the tunnel was vested in the landowner, his heirs, appointees, & assigns, & the agreement & reservation were not void for uncertainty; (4) the grant of the easement was not ultra vires; (5) the agreement was also valid as an agreement for a further accommodation work under Railways Act, 1845, s. 71.—SOUTH EASTERN RY. Part III.—Principles of the Law of Compensation.

SECT. 1.—WHERE LAND PURCHASED OR TAKEN.

See Lands Act, 1845, ss. 16–68.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

See Lands Act, 1845, s. 68.

147. “Lands taken for the execution of works” —Not applicable when compensation is sought in respect of whole interest in land—Nor when taking wrongful.]—The compensation provided for lands “taken for the execution of works,” under Lands Act, 1845, s. 68, does not apply where compensation is sought in respect of the whole interest in the land; nor to a case where there has been a wrongful taking, i.e. a taking without lawful authority, though by mistake.

A railway co. agreed for the purchase of lands for £300 with C., the supposed agent of H., who was tenant for life of the property only, though believed by both contracting parties to be the absolute owner. The co. afterwards received notice that

H. was tenant for life only. Shares to the amount of £300 were forwarded to H. with his consent, & the co. shortly afterwards entered upon the lands without the leave of H., & not having made any payment or compensation other than the above, or deposited any sum in the bank. Some disagreement arose as to boundaries & a right of way, & H. five months afterwards having been informed of the alleged agreement, wrote to the co. repudiating it & denying the agency of C. It afterwards appeared that the lands were in mtge. It was also alleged that £300 was a grossly inadequate value for the fee simple in the land. A bill was filed by the mtgees. & the second tenant for life for an injunction to restrain continuation of possession until compensation had been made to every person having any interest in the lands. The co. alleged that plffs.’ remedy was at law, under the above sect., & not in equity:—Held: plffs. were entitled to an injunction.—PERKS v. WYCOMBE RY. CO. (1862), 3 Giff. 662; 7 L. A. Owners.

148. Owner not ascertained at date of entry—Purchase-money retained by promoters for twenty-five years—Immediate claim by owner when ascertained—Valid.]—By an Act of Parliament establishing a canal co., the committee of the co. had power, in case any person who should agree with the co. for sale of any commons or waste lands should not be able to make a good title to the satisfaction of the committee, or in case any person entitled to commons or waste lands to be purchased by the co. could not be known, to order the purchase-money to be paid into ct. In 1812, a contract for the purchase of certain lands on P. Common was entered into by the co. with S., a party whose title to sell was then doubtful. The co., however, took possession of the lands & never paid the purchase-money into ct. In 1827, an Act passed for the inclosure of P. Common, & in 1837, an award was made pursuant to that Act by which the arbitrator found that S. was the true owner of the lands:—Held: the co. were trustees of the purchase-money for S., & those claiming under him, & as the legislature had permitted a bargain with an unascertained person, S. & those claiming under him were guilty of no laches in not filing a bill against the co. for the recovery of the purchase-money before 1837, the period when the true ownership was ascertained. —*CATOR v. 152. Not entitled—Disused water pipes.]—(1) Defts. under their Act of Parliament took land under which pltfs.' water pipes were laid. The pipes were buried beneath defts.' embankment, & ceased to be used. Afterwards, in making a tunnel, defts. took up the pipes. Pltfs. claimed compensation for the value of the pipes under Lands Act 1845, s. 68:—Held: pltfs. had no interest in land, & were not entitled to compensation under that sect.

SUB-SECT. 3.—SUBJECTS AND MEASURE OF COMPENSATION—ASCERTAINMENT OF VALUE OF LAND PURCHASED OR TAKEN.

See Lands Act, 1845, s. 49.

A. In General.

156. Principles of valuation.]—(1) Where an owner of two contiguous pieces of land, forming an area suitable, & it may be best suited, for development & use as one building site, sells under compulsion a part of one piece & without any reference to his interest in the other piece, the purchase price for the land so contracted to be sold must be ascertained without reference to the vendor's interest in the other piece, & is not to be ascertained by deducting the value of what is left to the owner of the two pieces after the sale from their aggregate value immediately prior to the sale.

(2) From this it results that the matter resolves itself into an inquiry as to the mode in which the amount to be paid as purchase-money is to be ascertained. In answering such inquiry the following propositions may, I think, be treated as established by authorities binding on this Ct.: (1) the value to be ascertained is the value to the vendor, not its value to the purchaser; (2) in fixing the value to the vendor all restrictions imposed on the user & enjoyment of the land in his hands are to be taken into account, but the possibility of such restrictions being modified or removed for his benefit is not to be overlooked; (3) market price is not a conclusive test of real value; (4) increase in value consequent on the execution of the undertaking for or in connection with which the purchase is made must be disregarded; (5) the value to be ascertained is the price to be paid for the land with all its potentialities & with all the use made of it by the vendor; (6) the true contractual relation of the parties, that of purchaser & vendor, is not to be obscured by endeavouring to construe it as another contractual relation altogether, that of indemnifier & indemnified (EVE, J.).—*Re SOUTH EASTERN RY. current price of similar property in the neighbourhood, without special reference to the price which owners may previously have given for it. In accordance with this principle, the question for enquiry is, what is the market value of the property, not according to its present disposition, but laid out in the most lucrative way in which owners could dispose of it.—PREMIERAND BURRAL v. COLLECTOR OF CALCUTTA (1876), 1 L. R. 2 Calc. 103.—IND.

c. ———.]—Profit from the most advantageous disposition of land is one test for determining its market price. The probable use of land in the most advantageous way in accordance with the use already made of neighbouring lands leads to speculative advance in prices to which regard should be paid. The utility of land is an element for consideration in estimating its value, i.e. the utility which may be calculated by a prudent business man. The market value of the acquired lands is also to be ascertained from recent instances of sales in the same or in adjoining localities, & from the average rental of similar lands in the vicinity. If there is any dispute as to the relative value of interests, the judge should determine the total amount payable for the land leaving the question of apportionment to be decided in a separate proceeding. The general demand for land, and the consequent reflex action on the prices of all classes of lands, is a factor in the calculation of the market value of the lands under acquisition.—*FINK v. Premises were expropriated which the owner used as a hotel licensed to sell liquor. The license was an annual one, but could be renewed in favour of the then owner, or, in case of his death, of his widow; but no license could be granted to any other person for such premises:—Held: while this particular use of the property added nothing to its market or selling value, it enhanced its value to the owner at the time of the expropriation, & was an element to be considered in determining the amount of compensation to be paid to him for the premises taken.—*R. v. The ground in front of the warehouse, over which the flaps stretched when they were lowered, was the absolute property of the co. The co. gave notice to treat for a portion of certain property, & before the arbitrator appointed under the Lands Act to assess compensation, they undertook to provide access to the remainder of the property by means of a right of way over the portion taken. On a case stated by the arbitrator in his award:—Held: (1) the arbitrator was entitled, in determining whether there would be “material detriment” to the remainder of the property arising from the taking of a portion, to take into consideration all the circumstances of the case, including the sufficiency of the proposed access; (2) as the giving the proposed right of way over the lands of the co. was not inconsistent with the purposes for which the lands were taken, the co. had power to grant it.—*Re GONTY & MANCHESTER, SHEFFIELD & LINCOLNSHIRE RY. By Chelsea Improvement Act, 1845, s. 83, so much of the Lands Act, 1845, as was applicable, & was not modified or was not inconsistent with the provisions thereof, should apply to the improvements authorised by the Act to be made, & should be read as forming part of the Act. By s. 101 of the local Act the comrs. under the Act might, subject to the provisions of the Act, alter the level of the streets, nothing being said as to compensation. By ss. 124, 127, the comrs. might remove from houses projections into the street which were existing at the passing of the Act, & also, on the rebuilding of projecting houses, set them back to the line of the street, with a proviso that the comrs. should make compensation to the owner, etc., in either case. The comrs., by raising the level of a street under s. 104, impeded access to the house of which the prosecutor was lessee, & so injuriously affected it:—Held: (1) the lessee of the house was entitled to compensation under Lands Act, 1845, s. 68; (2) the fact of compensation being expressly given in cases under the local Act, ss. 124, 127, was not inconsistent with the intention that it should be given in cases within s. 104, by virtue of Lands Act, 1845, s. 68.—*R. v. 213. General rule—Actionable wrong immaterial—Danger of fire from passing trains.]—The rule for assessing compensation under Lands & Railways Acts, 1845, namely, that compensation is only given by such Acts where what would have been actionable but for the special Act of Parliament is permitted by it, & compensation allowed in lieu of such right of action being taken away, is inapplicable where part of the land is taken & compensation is given, not only for the value of the part taken but for the rest of the land being injuriously affected.

Where therefore claimant for compensation against the railway co. was the owner of premises consisting of a cotton-mill & land, some of which land was required by the co., & the usual warrant had issued for the jury to assess compensation for the land taken for severance & for the land being otherwise injuriously affected, & they found one sum for the value of the land, another for severance, & a third including injury to the premises by reason of the risk of fire being so much increased by the proximity of the railway as to render it less fit for the purposes of a cotton-mill & to make the mill not insurable, except at a greatly increased premium, & to render the property of less value to the purchaser:—Held: as the injury to claimant's property, by increased risk of fire, was caused by what was done by the co. upon the land taken by them, the jury had rightly included damages for such injury in their verdict &, as they had not exceeded their jurisdiction in so doing, there was no ground for granting a certiorari.—*Re STOCKPORT, TIMPERLEY & ALTRINCHAM RY. 216. "Lands held therewith or other lands"—Contiguity not essential—Unity of ownership.—Under statutory powers incorporating Lands Act, 1845, resps. gave the applt. notice to treat for the purchase of part of his land, which they required for sewage works. In an inquisition held under the Act evidence was given that the existence of sewage works, even if conducted so as not to create an actionable nuisance, depreciated the market value of applt.'s other lands for building purposes. The land taken was let on long building leases; of the other lands part was in hand, & part was let for short periods for brick-making. The land taken was separated from the other lands, in part by other property of applt.'s, & in part by a railway. The jury gave a verdict for the value of the land taken & a further sum for all damage sustained or to be sustained by reason of the injuriously affecting the other lands by the exercise of respts.' statutory powers:—Held, the jury had not exceeded their jurisdiction in awarding the further sum: because (a) part of applt.'s land having been taken for the sewage works, compensation might be awarded for damage to be sustained by reason of the injuriously affecting his other lands, not only by the construction of the sewage works but by their use; (b) the damage was not too remote to form the subject of compensation, even though no nuisance might be caused; (c) the lands taken & the lands injuriously affected being held by the same owner so that the unity of ownership conduced to the advantage of the property as one holding, the lands injuriously affected were "held with" the lands taken within Lands Act, 1845, s. 49. Where several pieces of land owned by the same person are, though not adjoining, so near to each other & so situated that the possession & control of each gives an enhanced value to all of them, they are lands held together within Lands Act, 1845, ss. 49, 63, so that if one piece is compulsorily taken & converted to uses which depreciate the value of the rest the owner

225. ———— ]—A railway co., in making their line, crossed & interfered with C.'s private railway. By Railways Act, 1845, they were bound to restore a substituted railway within a certain period under a penalty. C., calculating on the substituted railway being made within the time specified by the statute, granted a lease of his lands & railway to M., reciting that the co. were bound to restore his railway, & that C. would do so at his own expense if the co. failed or refused to do so. The co. failed to restore the railway, & M. sued C., & recovered £451 damages; whereon C. sued the railway co. for this sum on an implied indemnity & for special damage:—Held: (1) as the co. were bound by the statute to restore the railway, & neglected to do so, C. had a right of action ex delicto against them, & such right of action was not extinguished by the provision of the statute as to penalties, for the penalty was only a cumulative remedy; (2) C. was not entitled to recover against the co. the £451 paid as damages to M., for the latter action arose ex contractu, & the damages incurred by C. to M. were not the direct & immediate consequence of the co.'s disobedience of the statute, C. ought himself to have restored the railway, & sued the co. for the cost & any other special damages.

(3) The tribunal established by the Railways Act, 1845, only gives compensation for losses sustained in consequence of what the railway co. may do lawfully under their statutory powers, but for anything done in excess of these powers, or contrary to what the Legislature in conferring those powers has commanded, the proper remedy is a common law action in a common law court.—*CALEDONIAN RY. for acquiring land, streams & springs for their undertaking & powers to acquire by consent lands for constructing their compensation reservoir. The Act contained a reservation of the right of the owners & occupiers of any lands, mills or works to the use of the waters of the stream, except so far as provided & declared by the Act. Waterworks Act, 1847, was incorporated with this Act. The co. constructed a compensation reservoir & a subsequent Act of Parliament, which gave them further powers, including powers of emptying & cleansing the reservoir, recognised this reservoir as a sufficient compensation reservoir for the mill owners, & directed it to be maintained. The owner of some dye works situate on the river below the reservoir filed a bill against the co. complaining that the effect of the reservoir was to make the water of the river more muddy than it was before its construction, & to render it unfit for the process of dyeing, & praying for an injunction to restrain defts. from fouling the stream. These allegations being established:—Held: (1) the Acts gave defts. no power to foul the water; (2) the compensation clauses in the Waterworks Act did not apply, inasmuch as the injury was such as the co. were not authorised to commit; (3) pltf. was entitled to an injunction.

The co. had lowered a road in front of a piece of land & thereby injured its value, by impeding the access to it & causing the necessity of additional fences, etc., but they had not actually touched any part of the land:—Held: the co. were bound to issue their warrant to summon a jury to make compensation for damage to the land in question.

(2) Semble : it does not follow, because a party might have had a right of action before the statute, that he would, in respect of the same cause, have a title to claim compensation after it (LORD CHELMSFORD, C.).

(3) The words of Railways Act, "injuriously affected," do not mean wrongfully in the sense of unlawfully, but damnously, i.e. injuriously, affected in the ordinary sense of that word; (4) there is nothing in the two statutes to warrant the position that there shall be no compensation where at common law there would have been no right of action; (5) the trade carried on in particular premises is a thing appertaining to the premises, & as such, is included in the "interest" of the occupier, & that interest is part of the value of the property, & if injuriously affected, is to be compensated; (6) the meaning of "parties interested," in Railways Act, s. 16, is, parties sustaining a special & individual loss by reason of the works which the sect. empowers the co. to construct (LORD WESTBURY).—*RICKET v. Sect. 3.—Where land injuriously affected: Sub-sect. 1, B. (c) ii., iii. & iv.]

Lands Act, 1845, & Railways Act, 1845, he must show that he sustained a particular damage from the execution by the co. of the works authorised by the special Act, & that the damage is one for which he might have maintained an action if the work had not been authorised by Parliament, & further, that the injury of which he complains is an injury to his estate, & not a mere obstruction or inconvenience to him personally or to his trade, although it might have been the subject of an action if the works which occasioned it had not been executed under the sanction of Parliament. The damage must be one which is sustained in respect of the property itself & not in respect of any particular use to which it may from time to time be put.

Pltf. was possessed of a house fronting on a public highway. Defts., a railway co. under the powers conferred upon them by their special Act, erected an embankment on a portion of the highway opposite to pltf.'s house, thereby narrowing the road from fifty to thirty-three feet, & thus, according to the evidence, materially diminishing the value of the house for selling or letting, & obstructing the access of light & air to it:—Held: this was such a permanent injury to the estate of pltf. in the premises as to entitle him to compensation under Lands Act, 1845, & Railways Act, 1845.—BECKETT v. MIDLAND RY. CO. (1867), L. R. 3 C. P. 82; 37 L. J. C. P. 11; 17 L. T. 499; 16 W. R. 221.

271. Obstruction of water highway—Interference with landing stage of draw-dock.]—Claimants were lessees of premises about seventy yards from the river T. At these premises they carried on the business of potters, & required in the course of their business a regular supply of water & sand. It appeared that the public had enjoyed from time immemorial a right of way to a part of the bank of the river nearly opposite these premises for the purpose of dipping & taking water from the river. It also appeared that lower down the river there was a free public draw-lock, where the public had been in the habit of taking carts for the purpose of loading & unloading barges. This dock had a direct communication with claimant's premises by streets. The Metropolitan Board of Works, in the exercise of their statutory powers, constructed works in front of the spot where the public had the right of taking water, & thereby temporarily obstructed this right. The board also interfered with the hard or landing-place at the dock, so that it was not possible to unload so many barges there as before. No part of claimant's premises was touched or taken by the board. A jury, summoned under Lands Act, 1845, having assessed compensation to claimants for injury to their premises for (1) the obstruction to the right of taking water, & (2) the difficulty in unloading sand at the dock:—Held: neither injury was a subject for compensation, as it was not an injury to land or any interest therein, but a personal injury to claimants in the way of their trade.—R. v. METROPOLITAN BOARD OF WORKS (1869), L. R. 4 Q. B. 358; 10 B. & S. 391; 38 L. J. Q. B. 201; 33 J. P. 710; 17 W. R. 1094.

Annotation:—Generally, Consd. Metropolitan Board of Works v. McCarthy (1874), L. R. 7 H. L. 243.

272. — Destruction of draw-dock—Diminution in value of premises.]—(1) In order to found a claim to compensation under Lands Act, 1845, s. 68, for an interest in land injuriously affected, there must be an injury & damage, not temporary but permanent, peculiarly affecting the house or land itself in which the person claiming compensation has an interest. A mere personal inconvenience, obstruction or damage to a man's trade or the goodwill of his business will not be sufficient, although any one of them might, but for the Act of Parliament which authorises the doing of the thing occasioning the injury, have been the subject of an action against the person occasioning it.

(2) The Legislature in authorising works & taking away any rights of action which the owner of land would have had if the works had been constructed without such authority, intended to confer on such owner a right to compensation co-extensive with the rights of action of which the statute had deprived him, but no more; not to improve the position of the person injured by the passing of the Act; (3) the right to compensation will accrue whenever it can be established that a special value attached to the premises by reason of their proximity to or relative position with the highway obstructed, & that this special value has been permanently injured by the obstruction (LORD PENZANCE).

(4) The Legislature never intended that the community should profit at the expense of a few of its members (LORD O'HAGAN).—METROPOLITAN BOARD OF WORKS v. MCCARTHY (1874), L. R. 7 H. L. 243; 43 L. Access to wharf—From river—Filling up river in front of wharf.]—By Thames Embankment Act, 1862, the word lands was to be construed as including easements over & interests in land, & Lands Act, 1845, was incorporated therewith. Pltf. was the owner of a wharf on the T., with a right to free access from the river thereto, & also to load & unload barges in front thereof. Defts. were proceeding under the Act of 1862 to fill up the river in front of the wharf:—Held: defts. were not taking & using for the purposes of the undertaking any easement or interest in lands belonging to pltf., but were injuriously affecting his lands, & could not be restrained from proceeding with their works till they had made compensation to pltf. under Lands Act, 1845.

t. Diversion of highway—Subject

A house was divided into a front & a back block & plths. were lessces of three rooms on the first floor in the back block. The lease did not expressly grant any mode of access. Access to the rooms demised to plths. was gained from the street by passing through a hall or vestibule, & then up some stairs to plths.' rooms. Defts., in the exercise of compulsory powers under Railways Act, 1845, took down the front block of the house & removed the hall. The interference with the hall & the injury to the access to the rooms of which plths. were lessces, lessened their value. An arbitrator having awarded compensation to plths. under Lands & Railways Acts:—Held: the award was valid on the grounds, (a) that compensation may be obtained under Railways Act, 1845, for injury done to land by the execution of the works, if it is sufficient to lessen the value thereof; (b) that the access through the hall was not a way of necessity, but was in the nature of a continuous & apparent easement which passed under the demise of the rooms & that an interference with this quasi-easement was sufficient to give rise to a valid claim for compensation.—*FORD v. 281. Erection of railway bridge & footbridge—Loss of trade.]—A railway co., under the authority of their Act, constructed across a river, half a mile above an ancient ferry, a railway bridge & a foot-bridge, the foot-bridge being used by persons going to the railway station & also to other places. The traffic across the ferry fell off, & the ferry was given up. The owners of the ferry claimed compensation under Lands & Railways Acts, 1845:—Held: no compensation could be recovered on the grounds: (a) that an action could not have been maintained for disturbance of the ferry in respect of the traffic either by the railway or by the foot-bridge, if they had been erected without the authority of an Act; (b) that the injury to the ferry being occasioned not by the construction, but by the working of the railway, the ferry had not been injuriously affected within Lands Act or Railways Act.—*HOPKINS v. 286. ——— Loss of trade—Saleable value of premises not diminished.]—An easement is an interest in land for the invasion of which compensation may be claimed under Lands Act, 1845.

An umpire, to whom was referred a claim for compensation in respect of damage sustained by pltf. in consequence of his premises being injuriously affected by the erection of certain works by defts. under their Act of Parliament, found by his award that the co. had, by the erection of such works, occasioned a diminution of light to pltf.'s premises, whereby they were rendered less convenient & suitable for the requirements of his trade carried on therein, & assessed the amount of compensation due in respect of such damage at £656. He further found that, notwithstanding such diminution of light, the saleable value of pltf.'s interest in the premises was not diminished, the value of property in the neighbourhood generally having become greatly enhanced by reason of the co.'s work; that, except the damage in his trade or business, he had not sustained, & would not sustain, any damage in the premises; & that, except the compensation to which he was or might be by law entitled in respect of his trade or business, he was not entitled to any compensation in the premises. The declaration alleged the appointment of arbitrators by pltf. & defts. & of an umpire, & an agreement whereby the time for making the award was enlarged, but alleged no attempt to appoint a single arbitrator:—Held: (1) the diminution of light was an injurious affecting of pltf.'s interest in the premises, which entitled him to compensation under the statute, & it was no answer that, by reason of accidental circumstances, the saleable value of the premises was not diminished; (2) the appointment of a single arbitrator was unnecessary.—*EAGLE v. 289. Deterioration in value of property—Premises overlooked.]—Compensation cannot be claimed under Lands & Railways Acts, 1845, for deterioration in the value of property adjoining a railway, by reason of the premises being overlooked by persons on the railway & railway platform.

Actual injury to premises from the vibration caused by ballast trains, etc., on the railway, during the construction of the works, is a ground for compensation under these statutes, but not injury from that cause after the construction of the railway.

Where a jury, summoned under Lands Act, 1815, s. 68, have taken into consideration, in awarding compensation, one claim, among others, as to which they had no jurisdiction, a certiorari lies, although such excess of jurisdiction does not appear upon the face of the proceedings. A railway co. under the powers of a special Act incorporating Lands Act, 1845, purchased from the lessor five acres of the surface which was not demised, & occupied same by their railway & works:—Held: the mere fact that the railway co. had under their Act taken the five acres for the purposes of their railway was not a reasonable ground under the proviso in the lease for disapproval of the position of any pit proposed to be sunk therein, & the lessee had a substantial interest under the proviso which entitled him to compensation for being prevented by the railway co.'s taking the land from exercising therein the right of sinking a pit given to him by the lease.—Re MASTERS & GREAT WESTERN RY. This ct. has not the legitimate power finally to decide the legal right, Parliament having chosen to give a certain mode of proceeding for the purpose of trying that right, or to impede the individual & prevent his pursuing that right, even for the purpose to prevent expense, to prevent delay & generally for the benefit of the parties. 309. — Enlargement of ventilating shaft.]—Defts., a railway co., were authorised by statute to construct an underground railway. They accordingly constructed part of the railway in a tunnel, & having purchased a piece of ground at the back of a dwelling-house, carried the tunnel through such ground & made an aperture in the ground for the purpose of ventilating the tunnel. Afterwards pltf. became lessee of the house, & then defts. with a view to the better ventilation of their line, enlarged the aperture, the effect of which was that the quantity of smoke, steam & foul air coming from the railway to pltf.'s house was much increased, & the house materially depreciated in value:—Held: pltf. had no right to compensation, for the alteration would cause no damage to him if the line was not used, the damage arising, not from the construction, but from the working of the railway.—A.-G. & HARE v. 310. Injury to ferry—By erection & working of railway bridge & footbridge—Loss of traffic.]—A railway co. under the powers of their special Acts constructed a bridge & footway across a river at a distance of about six hundred yards from the landing-place of an ancient ferry, but without any physical interference with the passage of the ferry-boats. The bridge when completed was opened to foot-passengers on payment of tolls, & also used for conveyance of merchandise by the co.'s trains, causing a serious diminution in the profits of the ferry:—Held: (1) the ferry, as a franchise, was a hereditament within the definition of "lands" given by Lands Act, 1845, s. 3; (2) the ferry was directly & injuriously affected within Railways Act, 1845, ss. 6, 16, by the construction of the bridge.—R. v. A. made a claim before the arbitrator for compensation in respect of damage which he alleged he would sustain if the tramways were stopped up, & the umpire awarded that a certain sum should be paid by the co. to A. as & for purchase & compensation for & in respect of his interest in the lands & hereditaments, & for damage sustained & which might be sustained by him by reason of the execution of the works of the railway, or the exercise by the co. of the powers of the Act:—Held: it did not appear upon the face of the award that the umpire had exceeded his jurisdiction by awarding compensation in respect of a claim for damage not within the reference.

Objections being made to the award on various grounds:—Held: (1) the submission was a common law submission, incorporating the incidents of the statutory submission, & did not expire at the death of the landowner; (2) the provision in Lands Act, whereby the award must be made within three months from the date of the submission, was introduced for the benefit of the parties, & might be waived so as to extend the time to suit their convenience; (3) an arbitrator might employ an expert to assist him & in general might consult men of science if necessary; (4) the arbitrator might award prospective & contingent damages; (5) he might include damages likely to be caused to the landowner's tenants; (6) the right to compensation under Lands Act depends on cause & effect, & not on distance or proximity of the lands affected.—CALEDONIAN RY. 323. — — — Not existing at time of making claim.]—A railway co. commenced to build warehouses which were intended to be 100 feet in height. The lessee of a warehouse the light of which would be affected when the buildings were completed gave notice to the railway co. that he held on a lease for an unexpired term of fourteen years, which could be determined by six months' notice, to expire on Nov. 11 then next, & required the co. to determine whether they would take over the lease, or whether he should give the requisite notice. The co. declined to interfere, & the lessee on May 6 gave notice to determine his tenancy. There was no evidence that at that time the building had progressed so far as to affect the light to the warehouse. Afterwards the lessee gave notice to the co. of his claim for compensation for injuriously affecting his lands, & an inquiry was held before the sheriff & a jury:—Held: (1) the act of the lessee in giving notice to terminate his lease, not being the natural result of the acts of the railway co. but a free exercise of will on his part, he could not recover compensation on the footing that he was entitled to a fourteen years' lease; (2) claimant could not recover compensation in respect of an injury which was merely prospective & which did not exist at the time of making the claim.—R. v. (3) Anticipated damage from the noise & smoke of trains does not appear to be a proper subject of estimate for compensation under Railway Acts (LORD HATHERLEY, C.).

327. — But which might have been foreseen—No right to second award.]—A railway co. having power under an Act of Parliament to construct a tunnel under buildings & premises of which pltf. was owner in fee, the parties in 1848, by voluntary agreement, referred to arbn. the amount to be paid by defts. to pltf. for the right to construct & for ever maintain the tunnel under the premises, & for the purchase of the site of the tunnel, & in full compensation for all damage or injury to be sustained by him by reason of the construction of the tunnel underneath the premises; & the arbitrator awarded a certain sum to pltf. as compensation for the right to construct, etc. on the terms of the submission, & for all damage & injury sustained by him by reason of the construction of the tunnel. A deed was afterwards executed by pltf., by which, after reciting the submission & award, in consideration of the sum awarded, which he acknowledged to be in full for the purchase of the site of, & the right to construct, maintain & use the tunnel underneath the premises, he granted to defts. the site of, & full & free liberty power & authority to bore, dig, excavate, make & construct the tunnel underneath the premises, together with the full & exclusive & uninterrupted right at all times thereafter to use, maintain & repair the tunnel; to hold same for the purposes of their Act of Parliament, freed & discharged from all claims whatsoever of the pltf. The stratum through which the tunnel passed consisted of clay & loose earth; it was opened for traffic in 1849, & after 1853, serious injuries arose to the buildings over the tunnel, which were caused by the subsequent subsidence of the surface consequent upon the construction of the tunnel in such a soil & by the vibration resulting from the passing of trains, or by one of such causes. On a special case, raising the questions, whether pltf. could maintain an action for the damage, or recover compensation under Lands Act, 1845, s. 68:—Held: (1) the damage, which was likely to accrue from subsidence & vibration, & might have been foreseen, was matter which might & ought to have been taken into consideration by the arbitrator & assessed prospectively, & pltf. could not afterwards recover compensation for the damage by action or otherwise; (2) whether the question turned on the construction of the submission, award & deed of conveyance, or of the statute, pltf. was equally precluded from claiming any further compensation.—*CROFT v. Co., constituted under an Act, which excepted mines from land purchased, & allowed the landowners to work them, provided they did no damage to the railway, bought land for their railway. In 1836, the Y. Ry. Co. was constituted under an Act containing provisions as to mines similar to those of Railways Act, 1845. Afterwards the Y. co. purchased the L. railway under the powers of an Act of 1844, which provided, by s. 4, that on completion of the purchase, the L. Railway Act should be repealed, provided that the repeal should not affect anything done under the Act, but that all acts done under it should remain as valid as if there had been no repeal. S. 9 provided that all the provisions of the Y. Railway Act, so far as they were not repealed, altered or otherwise provided for by the Act of 1844, or by any Statute, should apply to the L. Railway:—Held: the provisions as to mines in the Y. Railway Act were not, by the Act of 1844, made applicable to the L. railway, so as to give the owners of the mines under the lands purchased by the L. co. a right to work them to the injury of the railway if the Y. Ry. Co. did not choose to purchase them, but that the unqualified right to support, which was incident to the grant of the lands for the purpose of the railway, remained unaffected.—NORTH EASTERN RY. 355. ——— Land allotted under Inclosure Act—Subject to right of lord of manor to minerals—Promoters not entitled to support.]—By an inclosure Act the common lands of a manor, the fee simple of which, with the mines & minerals thereunder, & power to work same, had previously been vested in the lord of the manor, subject to certain rights of common of pasture, were inclosed & divided into allotments. The Act provided that the lord of the manor should enjoy all mines & minerals as fully & freely as if the Act had not passed, without paying damages or making satisfaction for so doing, & empowered him to make all convenient ways, & for that purpose to remove fences, trees or other obstructions. The Act further provided that the annual rental of 500 acres, out of about 20,000, should be set apart to provide for the compensation to which the allottees might thereafter be entitled, any deficiency to be made up by means of a rate levied upon the allottees. Afterwards plffs., a waterworks co. incorporated under an Act of Parliament, which incorporated lands Act, 1845, & Waterworks Act, 1847, purchased compulsorily from the representative of the allottee land forming part of one of such allotments, & constructed a reservoir thereon. Deft., claiming title under the lord of the manor, gave notice to plffs. of his intention to work the coal under such land within forty yards of the reservoir.

Resps. constructed waterworks upon both pieces of land. Applts., who were lessees of the coal from S., gave resps. notice, under Waterworks Act, 1847, s. 22, of their intention to work the coal under the land bought from S. Resps. gave no counter-notice:—Held: the land bought from T. having been bought by agreement enjoyed the common law right it had always possessed to lateral support from the land bought from S., this right not being affected by Waterworks Act, 1847, & applts. were entitled to an injunction restraining the lessees from working the coal either within or beyond the forty yards belt round the waterworks so as to damage the land bought from T.—*NEW MOSS COLLIERY, LTD. v. In 1874 a gas co., with the consent of the surveyors of highways, but without the consent of the lord of the manor, laid down mains & gas pipes under the soil of the road. In 1878 the gas co. was dissolved by a local Act of Parliament, which incorporated the Gasworks Clauses Acts, 1847 & 1871, & the proprietors of the undertaking were incorporated by the name of the N. Gas Co. & the property of the dissolved co. was vested in the incorporated co., & power was given to them to maintain or extend the existing gasworks, & to do such acts as they might think fit for making, stowing & supplying gas. The working of the minerals under the road by defts. caused damage to the mains & gas pipes:—Held: (1) the Act of incorporation had given pltfs. a right of support for all their gas pipes, including those laid down before the Act, & they were entitled to recover for the damage occasioned by all workings carried on after the date of the Act; (2) defts., having been deprived of their right to work the minerals to the extent to which it became necessary to leave them for the support of the gas pipes, were entitled to compensation under Gasworks Act, 1847, s. 6, but that such compensation could not be recovered by action or counter-claim, but must be assessed by arbn.—*NORMANTON GAS CO. v. 366. — May be given at any time.—For security of works.]—Though a mine owner may give notice under Railways Act, 1845, & Railways (Scotland) Act, 1845, of his intention to work out the minerals under a railway, the railway proprietors are not bound to any fixed period after that notice within which they must give a counter-notice. They can stop the working at any time thereafter that they fear danger to the line, by a notice of their willingness to pay compensation for the minerals they desire left standing. A. & B. were the lessees of the minerals, viz., limestone, under a railway passing through C. They, on July 8, 1878, gave notice in terms of Railways (Scotland) Act, 1845, ss. 70–72, to the proprietors of the railway that they were desirous of working, & intended to work, the mines & minerals including limestone lying under the railway. The proprietors of the railway did not, before the expiration of thirty days, give notice to A. & B. of their desire to have such mines & minerals left unworked, but they did give such notice on Feb. 20, 1879, offering compensation for the limestone unworked. A. & B. contended that the notice of Feb. 20, 1879, was too late to prevent them working out the limestone; such notice to be valid required to be given before the expiration of thirty days from the date of their notice of July 8, 1878:—Held: the notice of the railway proprietors was valid.—*DIXON v. 368. Notice by lessee—Counter-notice to lessee—Rights of assignee of reversioner.]—In claims for compensation for not working mines adjoining a railway & railway works, Railways Act, 1845, ss. 6, 78, must be read together. S. 6 gives a general right to compensation to "owners & occupiers of, & all other parties interested in, lands taken or injuriously affected by the construction" of the railway.—In s. 78 the person entitled to give notice to the directors of a railway co of his intention, within thirty days, to work a mine is the "owner, lessee or occupier," who has the right & the power to work it—the directors are entitled to have an inspection of the mine, & to offer compensation to him for not working, which compensation may be settled as therein mentioned. The compensation thus settled is that to which he is individually entitled, according to the extent of his interest. If the lessee is the person thus giving notice, & receiving compensation, the owner, if he can show a right of his own beyond that of his lessee who has been compensated, is also entitled to compensation under s. 6. The words "he" & "his" in two of the parts of s. 78 refer to the person entitled to compensation, whether owner, lessee or occupier.—The word "lands" in s. 6 includes mines; & the sect., in regard to the compensation thereby provided, is to be read with reference to the Lands Act, 1845. After compensation agreed on, & obtained or tendered, a perpetual injunction may be granted against the working of the mines.

R. was the owner of lands with coal & ironstone under them. The surface of a portion of the lands, about $4\frac{1}{2}$ acres, had already been conveyed to a railway co., & a railway & railway works had been constructed thereon. The mines had not been conveyed. R., by a verbal agreement, afterwards converted into a lease, let into possession H., who was to work the mines, & under the name of an acreage royalty or rent, was to pay a sum of £150 an acre for each of the $4\frac{1}{2}$ acres until the money paid reached an amount which was the calculated value of the minerals in that part of the mine. Had this lease been, in fact, duly followed, there was time enough for the tenant to work out all the minerals in the $4\frac{1}{2}$ acres. It was not followed. H. gave notice, under Railways Act, s. 78, to the railway directors of his intention to work the mine under the $4\frac{1}{2}$ acres. The directors, though not within the time mentioned in the statute, gave a counter-notice, obtained an inspection of the mine,

& agreed with H. as to his compensation. In the agreement H. covenanted to pay the \$150 acreage royalty, & to use his best endeavours to facilitate the settlement of his lessor's compensation. He did neither, & died insolvent, having received from the directors different portions of his compensation. His exors. at first worked the mine, but were accused by the lessors of repeated breaches of covenant, & on a bill being filed against them compromised the matter by surrendering the lease of the whole colliery, the $4\frac{1}{2}$ acres being therein included. The minerals under the $4\frac{1}{2}$ had not then been fully worked out. The lessors sold the fee of the whole mine to S. Both they & S. were ignorant of the dealings which had taken place between the directors & H.; S. gave notice to the directors of his intention to work the mine under the $4\frac{1}{2}$ acres; they gave a counter-notice, & offered to pay him such compensation as he might be found entitled to, having regard to that which had already been paid to H. S. refused to treat with them on that footing. They filed a bill to restrain him from working & in the bill made the same qualified offer of compensation:—Held: (1) on these terms they were entitled to a perpetual injunction; (2) as in their bill they had made this offer of compensation, they were entitled to the costs of the appeal.—*SMITH v. 372. — Subsequent Act incorporating Railways Act, 1845, & repealing prior Act—Proviso in repealing Act saving rights under repealed Act.]—Land was bought by a railway co. in 1839, the conveyance being expressed to be in accordance with a special Act by which minerals were to be deemed to be excepted out of the purchase & the mining rights were defined. A special Act of 1846 repealed the prior Act with a proviso that the repeal should not affect any conveyance, contract or thing executed made or done under the repealed Act. Railways Act, 1845, & Lands Act, 1845, were incorporated in the Act of 1846. The owner of minerals under the land gave the co. notice of his intention to work the minerals & claimed that the mining rights were regulated by the Acts of 1845 & 1846 & required an arbn. under Lands Act, 1845. The co. attended the arbn. under protest, & the umpire made an award giving the owner of the minerals purchase-money & compensation under Lands Act, 1845. The owner having sued the co. on the award to recover the sum awarded & the costs of the arbn.:—Held: (1) the effect of the proviso in the Act of 1846 was that the mining rights were regulated by the repealed Act & not by Railways Act, 1845; (2) the arbn. & award were ultra vires; (3) the owner of the minerals was not entitled to the sum awarded or to the costs of the arbn., & the co. was entitled to the costs of the arbn. & award.—*LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. c. Land in lease containing coal taken for railway—Principles of assessing compensation to be paid lessors & lessees, where coal not to be worked.—Coal bearing land was leased by the owners to a colliery co. for a term of which about 30 years had still to run. The lessees were at liberty to mine under any part of the land, & to pay a "fixed rent" of £700, & "rent or royalty" at a specified rate on all coal, etc., over & above such quantity as might be worked in respect of the fixed rent, & might work such quantity of coal, etc., as should, at the specified rate of royalty, produce £700 without paying rent or royalty in respect of it, with permission to make up any deficiency in the amount worked in an year in the succeeding year. A strip of the land was resumed by the Railway Commissioners, & the lessors & lessees gave notice of their intention to work the coal under & within forty yards of the boundary of the strip. The Commissioners forbade such working except so far as might be necessary to connect the workings on either side of the strip. The lessors brought an action for the assessment of compensation for loss & injury caused by the prohibition:—Held: lessors were entitled to compensation as for a present interference with a present proprietary right; & the present value should be calculated as at the date when the notice not to work was given; & a deduction made from each annual instalment of a sum bearing the same proportion to £700, as the probable output from the inhibited area would have borne to the total output from the mine; & interest should not be awarded in respect of the period between the giving of the notice & the making of the assessment.—*NEW SOUTH WALES RAILWAY COMRS. v. 379. — Basis of assessment—Right of support allunde.—Appls. were the owners of two water pipes called the C. pipe & the M. pipe. The pipes were laid so close together that support from subjacent minerals could not be removed from one pipe without affecting the support of the other. The C. pipe was laid under a local Act, & for it applts. had a common law right of support. The M. pipe was laid under an Act which incorporated Waterworks Act, 1847. Resps., who were the owners of the subjacent minerals, gave notice under Waterworks Act, 1847, s. 22, of their intention to work the minerals under the M. pipe. Appls. thereupon gave a counter-notice under the Act intimating their willingness to pay compensation under the Act so far as resps. were entitled thereto, & requiring them to leave the minerals unworked. Resps. accordingly left the minerals unworked, & the amount of compensation was referred to arbn. in the usual course under the Act. Appls. reserved all their right of support to the C. pipe. The arbitrator awarded a sum as compensation for the non-working of the minerals under the M. pipe, but applts. refused to pay it, on the ground that the right of support for the C. pipe necessarily involved abstention from working the minerals under the M. pipe, & that there was no damage to resps. for which they were entitled to compensation:—Held: applts. having elected to put in force the procedure provided by the statute, were bound to pay the compensation fixed by the arbitrator in accordance with it, it not appearing that the arbitrator had in any way exceeded his jurisdiction.—*EDINBURGH & DISTRICT WATER TRUSTEES v. 383. Implied right—Compensation barred after lapse of time.]—A private Act passed in 1754 empowered the undertakers to make & maintain a canal for the use of the public, the undertakers first giving satisfaction to the owners of such lands as should be digged, cut, removed or otherwise made use of, or that in anywise should be diminished, prejudiced or damaged by or for the carrying on, effecting or preserving the navigation. The Act contained no compulsory powers for the purchase of land, & no express provision as to mines or minerals, & the minerals were not taken into account in assessing the actual compensation exacted. Pltfs., in whom the canal was now vested, sought to restrain defts., who were owners of coal subjacent to the canal, from working their coal so as to damage the canal:—Held: the statutory authority to make & maintain the canal involved a right of subjacent support, & the compensation clause was wide enough to include compensation for minerals, but, having regard to the lapse of time, it must be assumed that all compensation had been paid, which the adjacent owners had intended to claim.—*LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. 384. ———.]—By a private Act pltfs. were incorporated as a co. for carrying on & maintaining a navigable canal & it was enacted that they should for that purpose have power to purchase lands for making the canal & the several works thereby authorised to be made, & to enter into & upon the lands of any person or persons, & to construct & do all other matters which the co. should think necessary & convenient for making & using the canal & other works, the co. doing as little damage as might be in the execution of the several powers thereby granted, & making satisfaction in manner mentioned for all damages to be sustained by the owners of, & persons interested in, such lands as should be taken, used or prejudiced in or by the execution of the Act; but nothing in the Act should entitle the co., on purchasing any lands for making the canal, or for any other purposes aforesaid, to any mines of coal, ironstone or other minerals which should be found in cutting or making the canal & other works or that should be under same, but that all such mines should appertain & belong to such person or persons as would have been entitled to same in case the Act had not been made. Pltfs. duly acquired the lands necessary, & constructed & completed the canal & works under the powers of the Act. The purchase-money & compensation properly payable upon taking the lands were duly ascertained, & there had been no default in payment. Defts. were the owners of a colliery which they were working, & the land under which their mines were situate was traversed for a considerable distance by the canal. Defts. in the ordinary course of working their mines were desirous of working the coal subjacent or adjacent to the canal:—Held: defts. were entitled to get so much of the subjacent & adjacent coal as they could get without destroying or injuring the proper support of the canal & works; but they were not entitled to get the coal to the destruction or injury of that support; & the whole compensation having been assessed at once at the time of the purchase by pltfs., i.e., compensation for the right of support as well as for the conveyance of the surface of the land, defts. could not now be entitled to compensation for that in respect of which they had already been compensated.—GLAMORGANSHIRE CANAL NAVIGATION CO. v. NIXON'S NAVIGATION CO., LTD. (1901), 85 L. T. 53; 17 T. L. R. 617, C. A.

385. When promoters waive their right & indemnify owner against it.]—Rochdale Canal Act, 1894, s. 39, provided that nothing in the Act contained should prejudicially affect the ownership of the mines & minerals lying & being within or under the land, in, upon or through which the canal should be made, but that it should be left for the lords of the manor & the owners of such lands to work for their own use such mines & minerals, not thereby injuring, prejudicing or obstructing the canal. By s. 40 it was provided that if the owners or workers of the mines should work them so near to or under the canal as in the opinion of the canal proprietors to endanger or damage it, or in the opinion of the mine owners to endanger or damage the further working of the mines, it should be lawful for the canal proprietors to agree with the mine owners for all coals or other minerals as might be near or under the canal, as should be thought proper to be left for the security or preservation of the canal; & in case the canal proprietors & the mine owners should disagree, a jury was to assess the compensation to be paid for such coals or other minerals, & on payment of such compensation the mine owners were to be restrained from the further working of same. The mine owners gave notice to the canal proprietors that the further working for coal in land adjacent to the canal would endanger the canal. The proprietors declining to treat for the coal, the mine owners brought the action to ascertain the amount of compensation to be paid for the unworked coal. The action was referred to, & the value of the coal assessed by, the arbitrator, who found that there was no danger to the mines, but that the effect of the further working would be to cause a subsidence of the canal, which would not interfere with the navigation, but would necessitate occasional repairs. The canal proprietors offered themselves to bear the cost of such repairs & to allow the further working of the mines:—Held: as no danger was to be apprehended to the mines, the mine owners were not entitled to insist upon the purchase of the unworked coal by the canal proprietors, since by s. 40 there was no statutory prohibition of working adjacent mines so as to injure the canal, such as was enacted by s. 39 against the working of subjacent mines.—*CHAMBER COLLIERY CO. v. 393. Water-pipes—Presumption of right—Long enjoyment.]—By Edinburgh Water Act, 1819, the E. co. were empowered to lay pipes for conducting water to the city. By s. 38 the co. were authorised to take & use grounds & premises for the purpose of forming reservoirs, & to make the necessary cuts for conducting water to the city, & to lay the necessary pipes for that purpose, giving one month's notice of their intention to the owners & occupiers of such grounds & premises, & making satisfaction to such owners & occupiers. In 1823 a strip of ground was opened & a pipe laid, part of which passed through the lands of applts. & their predecessors. The pipe was continuously used without question down to the commencement of this action in 1898, when it was threatened with injury by applts. working certain minerals lying under the pipe. The co. having raised an action for an interdict to restrain applts. from working the minerals adjacent to the pipe so as to injure it, it did not appear that any payment or satisfaction had been made by the co. in respect of laying the pipe:—Held: after nearly eighty years' enjoyment of the wayleave it must be presumed that whatever was necessary to obtain the right to support for the pipe had been done.—*CLIPPENS OIL CO. v. 395. ———— In ordinary course of working.]—By a canal Act, the co. were empowered to purchase land for the use of their navigation; the minerals beneath to remain in the owners. Whenever the owner was desirous of getting the minerals, he was to give notice to the co. They, within a limited time, were to have the option of purchasing. If they did not purchase, the owner was to be at liberty to work his mines, doing no injury to the navigation. An owner, who was desirous to work his mines, gave notice to the co. They did not purchase within the limited time. The owner then proceeded to work the mines, & his doing so produced an injury to the navigation; but it did not appear that he had worked them in an improper manner:—Held: as the co. had not availed themselves of their right to purchase, the proviso, that the owner must do no injury to the navigation, required to be so far qualified as to mean, that he was not to work them so as to do any injury beyond that which was necessary in the ordinary course of working, & the co. were not entitled to maintain an action against the owner for the amount of the damage sustained by the ordinary course of the working.—DUDLEY CANAL NAVIGATION CO. v. 396. In reasonable & proper manner.]—By a canal Act it was provided that no owner of any mine should work same under the reservoir of the canal co., except as mentioned, without the consent of the co., & that when the owner of any mine under the canal works should be desirous of working it, he should give notice in writing of such intention to the co. before beginning to work; that the co. might then inspect the mine, & upon failure or neglect of the co. to inspect within thirty days after notice, the owner might work & get such part of the mine as lay under the canal & works; & that, if upon inspection the canal co. should refuse to permit the owner of the mine to work such part of the mine, the co. should within three calendar months after refusal, purchase same. It was further provided that nothing in the Act should be construed to prejudice the right of the lord of the manor or waste, or any owner of any ground through which the canal co.'s works should be made, to the mines under such ground, such lord or owner being empowered to work same, subject to the conditions therein contained; provided that no injury were done in working to the navigation:—Held: this last proviso was not to be construed as rendering futile all the previous provisions of the Act, & when the owner of mines had given notice of his intention to work them, & the co. had neglected to purchase the mines as prescribed by the Act, the owner of the mine might work same under the co.'s works, & the co.'s works having been damaged in consequence of such working, the co. could not maintain an action against the mine owner to recover compensation for such damage.—STOURBRIDGE NAVIGATION CO. v. DUDLEY (EARL) (1860), 3 E. & E. 409; 30 L. J. Q. B. 108; 3 L. T. 449; 7 Jur. N. S. 329; 9 W. R. 158; 121 E. R. 496, Ex. Ch.

397. Right to compensation for unworked minerals left in support.]—By an old Act of Parliament giving a co. power to make a canal, it was provided that nothing therein contained should affect the right of the owners of land to the mines & minerals lying within or under the lands to be made use of for the canal, & it should be lawful for such owners to work such mines, not thereby injuring, prejudicing or obstructing the canal; & further, that if the owner or worker of any coal or mine should, in pursuing such mine, work near or under the canal, so as, in the opinion of the co., to endanger or damage same, or in the opinion of the owner or worker of the mine, to endanger, or damage the further working thereof, then it should be lawful for the co. to treat & agree with the owner; & in case of disagreement, certain comrs. were appointed to assess the amount of compensation. The comrs. never having exercised their powers, it was thought expedient for more easily settling claims for compensation, to incorporate Lands Act, 1845, with the canal Act, & an Act was passed for that purpose. Defts., in working their mine, approached so near, as in their opinion, to endanger the canal, & negotiations were commenced between plffs. & defts. as to the coals necessary to be left, but no terms were agreed on. Defts. then gave notice of their intention to proceed to arbn. under Lands Act, 1845, whereupon the co. filed their bill, & applied for an injunction:—Held: defts. were justified in proceeding before the proper tribunal to ascertain how much compensation they were entitled to.

If the coal owner sustains injury, by getting less coal, or by working in a less beneficial manner, for the sake of not injuring the canal, he will, in the same manner as if he be under notice to leave a third of the coal or a pillar, have a right to compensation (LORD COTTENHAM, C.).

Semble: a ct. of equity has jurisdiction, if it be satisfied that no injury will ensue from working the coal, to restrain a party from proceeding to arbn. under their Act.—CROMFORD CANAL CO. v. CURTIS (1848), 5 Ry. & Can. Cas. 442; 12 L. T. O. S. 325.

398. Private Act.]—By an Act of incorporation of a canal co., it was provided that no owner or proprietor of any mines or minerals, their workmen, etc., should open or carry on any work for digging, etc., any such mines, etc., under any tunnel, or within twenty yards of same, without the consent of the co., etc.; & also that no owner, etc., of any mines, etc. should on any account whatever open, dig, etc. any work for the getting of coal, limestone, etc. within the distance of twelve yards from the intended canal, etc., without the consent of the co. in writing under their common seal. A proprietor of mines, etc., lying under twenty yards on each side of a tunnel of the co. on the canal gave notice to the co. of his intention to work the mines, etc. under the tunnel, & twenty yards on each side of it. The co. refused their consent, & he then brought an action to recover compensation for the minerals he had been obliged to leave ungoten:—Held: the co. were bound to pay compensation.—BIRMINGHAM CANAL NAVIGATION CO. v. 399. Duty not to injure, prejudice or obstruct undertaking.]—By a sect. of an Act empowering a co. to make a canal it was provided that nothing therein contained should affect the right of any owners of lands to the mines & minerals under the lands to be made use of for the canal, & that it should be lawful for such owners to work such mines & minerals, not thereby injuring, prejudicing or obstructing the canal. By another sect. it was provided that if the owners should in pursuing such mines work near or under the canal, so as in the opinion of the canal co. to endanger or damage same, or in the opinion of the owners of the mines to endanger or damage the further working thereof, it should be lawful for the canal co. to treat & agree with the owners for all such minerals as might be near or under the canal as should be thought proper to be left for the security of the canal or mines; & in case they should disagree then it should be lawful for certain comrs. at the request of the canal co. or of such owners to summon a jury to assess what satisfaction such owners ought to receive from the canal co.; & upon payment of such satisfaction such owners should be perpetually restrained from working such mines within the limits for which satisfaction should by the jury be declared to extend. Owners of a coal mine under & near the canal having given the canal co. notice that they were going to work the coal, the co. declined to purchase or pay compensation for leaving the coal, & the owners then worked the coal & thereby damaged the canal. The working was in the usual mode, without negligence & without doing unnecessary damage save in not leaving sufficient support:—Held: the owners of the mine had a right under the Act to initiate proceedings & to receive satisfaction for such minerals as should be thought proper to be left for the security of the canal or the mine, but were liable in damages for working the mine to the injury of the canal.—*KNOWLES & SONS v. 403. ——— ——— ———.]—A railway Act empowered the owner, in conveying his lands to the co., to reserve his minerals, but in the event of his afterwards working these it ordered him to find security against endangering the railway. The owner was also to be compensated for all lands taken or prejudiced. S. in bargaining with the co. reserved his minerals, but in claiming compensation omitted to include any demand for loss which might arise by reason of his not being able to work his minerals in the soil below or near the railway. Ten years afterwards, on discovering a valuable mine under the railway, he called upon the co. either to purchase same, or pay him compensation for the loss sustained in his not being able to work it:—Held: S. was precluded from demanding any compensation for loss in not being able to work the mine, as such claim ought to have been included in the original demand: & whether he had reserved his mines or not, the conveyance gave an implied right of support, not only from the mines subjacent to the line, but also from those in the lands of S. adjacent, & S. could not work either of these so as to endanger the railway.—*CALEDONIAN RY. Whether compensation proper remedy—Negligent user of compulsory powers—Action of tort maintainable.]—A railway co., to whose rights & obligations debts succeeded, purchased from a former owner the surface of land lying over a mine belonging to pl'tfs., & thereon constructed their railway. In order to obtain the level of their line, the co. cut through & removed upwards of twenty feet in depth of the surface clay lying over plths.' mine, which was impervious to water, leaving exposed a surface of porous rock. The soil was similarly cut away by the railway co., along the line to the place where a brook flowed, over which the line was carried by a flat bridge at about the natural level of the ground. Between this brook & the surface of plths.' mine there was originally a bank, or rising ground, through which the co. made a cutting for their line of rails, sloping downwards from the bridge to the part over the mine. The mine at this part was unworked when the railway was being constructed. Plths. in their subsequent working of their mine, came to within forty yards of the railway, & gave defts. notice under the Act, but they did not purchase the mine. Plths., therefore, worked on in a proper manner, & as a consequence, the railway began to sink. The co. raised it up from time to time by placing materials of a porous nature over the surface. The railway was made with drains at the side, which the co. were bound to keep up; after the line began to sink they did not do so, but filled up the openings with the porous materials. In Aug. 1860 a flood happened & the brook overflowing the girders of the flat bridge, the water was carried down the cutting to the part of the line overlying plths.' mine, & there percolating through the porous rock, the mine was drowned & the work stopped:—Held: defts. were liable in an action for the damage sustained by plths. caused by the flooding of the mine, & the claim was not one which could have been enforced under the compensation clauses of Railway Act, 1845.—*BAGNALL v. 409. — Mines damaged by improper management of canal—Action of tort not maintainable.—Defts.' canal was constructed under an Act of Parliament, by which the canal was to be open for use by the public on payment of tolls. Defts. were authorised to take land compulsorily & construct the canal, doing as little damage as might be, & to do all things necessary for making & preserving & using the canal, making satisfaction for all damages to be sustained by the owners of lands & hereditaments taken or prejudiced by the execution of the powers of the Act. Comrs. were appointed, who were to determine from time to time what sum should be paid for the purchase of lands, & also to determine what other distinct sum should be paid by defts. as recompense for any damages which might be at any time whatsoever sustained by owners of lands or hereditaments by reason of the making or maintaining the canal. The minerals under the canal were expressly reserved to the owners, who were to be at liberty, subject to the provisions of the Act, to work the minerals, provided that no injury be done to the navigation. By another clause, the owners were not to work the minerals without giving three months' notice to defts., who might inspect the mines, & might, if they thought proper, prevent the working of the mines, paying to the owners the value; on failure of defts. to inspect the mines, the owners were authorised to work them. The canal having been constructed & used for many years, pltf., who was owner of coal mines under the canal, gave defts. proper notice of his intention to work them; defts. did not inspect, & refused to purchase. Pltf. proceeded to work the mines, without regard to the surface, & without attempting to support it, & knowing that the effect would be to let down the surface, & probably disturb the strata, & that there was danger of the water escaping from the canal into the mines; but, except as above, pltf. did not work his mines in any negligent or unskilful or improper manner, but got the coal in the manner in which that vein of coal is ordinarily gotten, & without doing so he could not have obtained the full benefit of his coal. The canal was in good order when pltf. commenced working his coal; & defts. did all they could to keep the canal watertight, by puddling, etc. During part of the time, while pltf.'s working was going on, they had dammed back the water, & so emptied the water out of that part of the canal; but they refused to do so for the three months necessary for pltf. to work out his coal. Defts. were guilty of no actual carelessness in the management of their canal, unless it was carelessness to allow the water to be in it while the mines were worked. The result of the working was that the strata became dislocated, & the water of the canal escaped through the cracks & flooded the workings, & pltf. was obliged to abandon his coal. Pltf. thereupon brought an action, charging that defts., having brought water into the canal, so carelessly & improperly managed the canal & the water, that the water escaped & flooded pltf.'s mine:—Held: an action of tort could not be maintained.

Semble: pltf. was entitled to compensation under the Act.—DUNN v. BIRMINGHAM CANAL CO. (1872), L. R. 8 Q. B. 42; 42 L. J. Q. B. 34; 27 L. T. 683; 21 W. R. 266, Ex. Ch.

410. Basis of assessment—Value of minerals—Working profits.—(1) A canal co. were authorised by their Act of incorporation to require the workers of any mines under the canal to leave so much coal on each side of the canal as they might require for the safety of it; & the co. were to make compensation, to be assessed, if the parties differed, by a jury:—Held: the co. were bound to make compensation, not only for the value of the coal in the bed, but also for the additional profit which could only be made by getting it.

(2) Where the Legislature has provided a competent tribunal, & has given to it a certain jurisdiction, & made its decision final, no equity can be founded on an allegation that such tribunal is incompetent to decide questions properly within its jurisdiction. 411. — Value to owner—Profits likely to be made by conversion of limestone into cement—Value not affected by claimants owning other quantities of limestone.—By a private Act, passed prior to the Railways Act, 1845, authorising the construction of a railway & containing the usual provisions for the acquisition of lands, mines & minerals, including by name limestone, were excepted out of the purchase of lands, but it was provided that, upon receipt of twenty-one days' notice from the proprietor of any mines or minerals lying under or within forty yards of the railway of his desire to work them, the railway co. might purchase them or any part of them. Claimants were the owners in fee of land on both sides of the railway & of limestone lying under their land & under the railway; they had a cement manufactory on their land, in which they used & turned into cement the limestone which they quarried. Owing to the cost of carriage the limestone when quarried had no market value as an article of commerce other than its value to claimants for use in the adjacent manufactory. Claimants having in the ordinary course of quarrying approached close to the forty yards limit, gave notice to the railway co. of their intention to work the limestone within that limit, & the railway co. gave separate notices to treat in respect of the limestone within that limit, but not under the railway, & of the limestone actually under the railway, & the amount of compensation was referred to arbitration:—Held: (1) as the limestone had no market value in the strict sense of that term, its value to claimants was what they might fairly be expected to have made out of it by working it in the ordinary & reasonable manner in which it would have been worked but for the notice to treat; (2) the profits which claimants would have made by turning it into cement might properly be taken into consideration by the arbitrator as an indication, though not as a measure, of that value; (3) the value was not affected by the fact that claimants owned large quantities of other limestone which they might have worked instead of the stone in question.—*RUGBY PORTLAND CEMENT CO. v. charge which ought to be paid, but which award was invalid, no one being party to it who had power to bind the infant's interest, the awarded gross sum was paid by the co. to the steward, on an agreement for its return if the land was not conveyed to the co. on the infant attaining his majority. No conveyance was executed & the purchase-money was returned, but the co. continued in the use of the land for their canal, paying to the landowner, for forty years after he attained his majority, a rent of nearly the amount awarded by the comrs. The co. also with his knowledge purchased the interests of leaseholders in the lands:—Held: (1) an agreement could not be presumed to have been entered into or ratified by the landowner for a sale of the fee in consideration of a rentcharge; (2) an action of ejectment brought by the landowner & the intended erection of a bridge by him ought to be restrained by injunction, on the ground of acquiescence, the co. undertaking to put in force their parliamentary powers to acquire the land.—SOMERSETSHIRE COAL CANAL Co. See generally, CONTRACT; CORPORATIONS; RAILWAYS & CANALS; SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE.

442. Validity of agreement—Agreement to purchase lands on landowners withholding opposition to bill—Valid—Notwithstanding want of legal power to make contract at time when entered into.]—(1) Where an Act creating a railway co., or giving new powers to an existing co., authorises the purchase of lands for extraordinary purposes, a person who agrees to sell his land to the co. is not bound to see that it is strictly required for such purposes: if he does not know of any intention to misapply the funds of the co., but acts bonâ fide in the matter, he may enforce performance of the contract.

(2) Where a contract for the purchase of land is made by the projectors of a proposed line of railway, though an action at law may be maintained upon the contract, a ct. of equity will not, simply on that account, refuse its interference to compel specific performance.

(3) In a contract for the sale of land for the purposes of a projected railway, the vendor was described as having, so far as regarded one part of the land, no more than a mere life estate, & the projectors of the railway undertook to obtain from Parliament powers to enable him to make a good title:—Held: where they did not fulfil this stipulation, or but for their own default the title might have been perfected, they could not set up his deficiency of title as an answer to a bill for specific performance.

(4) The directors of an existing railway co. applied to Parliament for an Act to make a branch line & a diverging line, one of which would touch the property of a landowner, & the other pass through his house & garden. He opposed their bill. They entered into an agreement with him to buy his land at a certain price, & on this consideration he withdrew his opposition to the bill, which then passed, but did not give the power to make the diverging line, but only empowered them to make the branch line. The landowner executed his part of the agreement, the directors did not execute theirs, but after some time determined not to make the branch line, & gave the landowner notice that they should not want his land. He filed a bill for specific performance:—Held: as the contract was one in furtherance of the general objects of the co., although the co. was not at the time of making it empowered to execute the works for which the land was wanted, it was not a contract ultra vires of the directors, & the person who had contracted to sell the land was entitled to specific performance. —EASTERN COUNTIES RY. 443. — — — — — If contract could be lawfully entered into by company after incorporation.]

(1) Where the projectors of a railway co., in order to induce a landowner to withdraw his opposition to their bill, enter into a contract with him, in which the stipulation is that the contract is to be performed by the co. after the co. shall have obtained an Act of incorporation, such contract to be valid ought to be one which might be lawfully made by the co. after incorporation.

(2) It is ultra vires of a corpn. for the purpose of making a railway, to enter into a covenant to pay a large sum of money to a man for not opposing the passing of the co.'s bill in Parliament.

C. was a landowner, a railway co. was projected, & for the intended railway some of his land would be required. He threatened to oppose the bill. The projectors entered into an agreement with him, that in case the co. should obtain an Act of incorporation, the co. should pay to C. £1,000 for all lands required by the co. for the due making of the railway, & £4,000 for residential injury to the estate & hall of C., also that a tunnel should be constructed in a particular manner through a part of his property, & a passenger station should be made, etc.; C. withdrew his opposition, & the bill passed: the railway was not made nor were the lands required:—Held: this was not a contract which on the mere passing of the bill entitled C. to claim from the co. payment of the money.—PRESTON v. LIVERPOOL, MANCHESTER & NEWCASTLE-UPON-TYNE JUNCTION RY. 444. Personal compensation.]

By articles of agreement under seal between defts. of the one part & pltf. of the other part, after reciting that pltf. was the owner of a certain estate, & that defts. had given notice of their intention to apply, in the then session of Parliament for an Act enabling them to construct a certain extension line of railway in the agreement described, & that, inasmuch as the line of the railway would pass through pltf.'s estate in such manner as to intersect & damage same, pltf. had intimated to defts. his intention to oppose the passing of the bill, but had agreed to withhold his intended opposition upon the terms thereafter contained; it was agreed, inter alia, between pltf. & defts., first, that in the event of the bill being passed into an Act during the then session of Parliament, defts. would construct the line of railway so as to enter & pass through the estate of the pltf. within certain specified limits; & secondly, in the like event that defts. would purchase from pltf. at the price of £2,000, certain land of his required for the construction of such railway; & thirdly, in the like event defts. would pay to pltf., in addition to the sum of £2,000, & within three calendar months after the passing of the bill, the further sum of £2,000, as & for a personal compensation for the annoyance, disturbance, inconvenience, damage, loss & injury which he had sustained, & might or would sustain in respect of the sporting & preservation of game upon his estate, by or in consequence of the construction of the intended railway, & of the Parliamentary & other surveys, & other works constructed therewith & incidental thereto; & by the last clause of the agreement, it was provided that the agreement should be void if defts. failed to obtain the Act in the present session of parliament:—Held: the agreement was perfectly valid & the payment of the purchase-money into ct. was a fulfilment of the contract to pay it to a tenant for life.

By Lands Act, 1845, sect. 73, a tenant for life may not take for his own use money which may be contracted to be paid, either in consideration of his not opposing a bill, or for any special damage to be done to himself with reference to the severance of the estate; & it is for the Ch. Ct. to determine what portion of such money is to be assigned to the tenant for life, in respect of his own personal grievance. But the tenant for life is still perfectly competent at law to enter into a contract for the whole estate, for the whole damage by severance, & for the withdrawal of opposition to a bill as the condition of the contract that may be entered into.—*TAYLOR v. h. Construction of Agreement to pay on making railway.]—A ry. co., obtained an Act for making a branch within 7 years. They agreed beforehand to purchase land, on conditions that the contract should not be enforced against the co. within that time, & that the purchase-money should be paid when they "began to execute the branch." The branch was never executed or begun. The 7 years expired:—Held: obligation to pay

Pltf. agreed, on tender of £120 per acre, & £3,000, that he would convey:—Held: defts. had thereby bound themselves that the co. should pay the £3,000 on the passing of the Act, although the railway should not be constructed, or any actual damage be done to pltf.—*BLAND v. 1. Construction of s. 123—Meaning of "Land taken pursuant to Provisional Order."—Lands Act, 1845, s. 123, limits the time for compulsory purchase, if no period is prescribed, to three years after the passing of a special Act. The Military Lands Act, 1892, incorporating the Lands Act, enacted that "in its construction & in that of the incorporated Acts, it should be deemed the special Act." It also enacted that the provisions of the incorporated Acts with respect to compulsory purchase should not be put in force until a Provisional Order had been made & sanctioned by statute. A Provisional Order authorising the taking of lands was confirmed in 1895. In Feb. 1898, a notice to treat was served, & steps were taken to have compensation ascertained by arbitration. In June, 1898, an action was brought to restrain arbitration proceedings:—Held: the "special Act" within Lands Act, 1845, was Military Lands Act, 1892, together with the Act of 1895 confirming the Provisional Order.—HILL v. HAIRE, [1899] 1 L. 488. ———— Proceedings under notice after expiration of time—& after expiration of time for completion of works—Restrained.]—A railway co. having compulsory powers to take land served notice on the owner of premises, to which such powers applied, of their intention to take his property, & took no further steps towards acting upon that notice, but replied to the inquiries of the landowner that they should require the land, & intended to act on their notice. The time limited by the co.'s Act for the completion of the line having expired, & the line having, in fact, been completed & opened, the co. procured a fresh Act extending their power to take land, including the premises comprised in the notice, & then claimed to proceed under their original notice:—Held: they could not do so, inasmuch as the line having been completed for the ordinary purposes of traffic before the second Act was obtained, the onus was thrown upon the co. of showing that the land was wanted for the purposes of the original undertaking, & this onus was not discharged.—RICHMOND v. 489. ———— Time for completion extended—Notice to treat not invalidated by lapse.]—The J. Ry. Co.'s Act, passed in July, 1864, provided that certain persons who had subscribed, & all others who should subscribe, to the undertaking, should be incorporated for the purpose of making the railway thereby authorised, & by the same Act the compulsory powers for taking lands were limited to three years, & the time for completing the works to five years from the passing of the

Act. The co., having obtained the magistrate's certificate that the whole of the required capital had been subscribed for, served a notice to take certain lands of pl'tfs. In 1869 the co., having failed to raise sufficient capital to make the line, obtained an Act, of which pl'tfs. had notice, for amalgamating their co. with the N. Co., who were to make the railway, & the time for completion was extended to July, 1872. In 1871 the N. Co. proceeded under the notice to take pl'tfs.' land. On a bill praying an injunction to restrain the N. Co. from taking the land, alleging that the notice to treat, if valid, had been abandoned by lapse of time, & that such notice was invalid, as no subscription contract had been proved, & the required capital had not then been subscribed for:—Held: (1) under the circumstances, there had been no abandonment of the notice; (2) the certificate of two justices or of a police magistrate, under Lands Act, 1845, s. 17, was, unless obtained by fraud, conclusive evidence that the capital was subscribed for, & it appeared from the J. Ry. Co.'s Act that there was a subscription contract, & the notice to treat was valid.—YSTALYFERA IRON CO. v. NEATH & BRECON RY. CO. (1873), L. R. 17 Eq. 142; 43 L. J. Ch. 476; 29 L. E. Extension of Time.

491. By subsequent Act—Promoters entitled to take land within extended time.]—A co. were empowered by Act of Parliament to take lands for the formation of a railway, & to deviate to the extent of one hundred yards from the line laid down in their map, provided such deviation was made within two years from the passing of the Act, which two years would expire on July 4, 1838. In Jan. 1837, a deviation in the line, within the prescribed limits, was made. A subsequent Act, passed in May, 1837, enacted that the time by the first Act limited for the compulsory purchase of lands should be enlarged for the term of one year, but providing that no deviation from the line laid down should be made after the expiration of the period by the first Act limited. The railway co. having, subsequently to July 4, 1838, given notice to certain owners of lands on the line to which they had deviated in Jan. 1837, of their intention to take the lands under the powers given by the Acts, on a motion for an injunction to restrain the railway co. from so proceeding to obtain possession, on the ground that the co., having allowed the time limited by the first Act to expire, had no power to take the lands by compulsory process:—Held: (1) where it is clearly shown that a public co. is exceeding its powers this ct. cannot refuse to interfere by injunction; (2) the co. having, previous to the expiration of the two years limited by the first Act, & previous, also, to the passing of the second Act, deviated within the authorised limits from the line laid down in the map, the second Act must be construed to give them an enlarged period of one year in which to exercise the power of taking the land in the line to which they had so deviated.—*DUN RIVER NAVIGATION CO. v. If that notice is validly withdrawn, as it may be, for instance, upon a counter-notice by the landowner under s. 92 to take the whole of his land, the promoters are in same position as if no notice to treat had been given, & may therefore give a second notice in respect of the land comprised in the first notice, or any part thereof, & upon that being validly withdrawn, may give a third notice, & so on during the time limited by their special Act for the exercise of compulsory powers; the result being that they are entitled to proceed to the assessment of compensation upon the latest notice to treat not validly withdrawn.—*ASHTON VALLEY IRON CO. 554. Legal proceedings instituted by promoters inconsistent with relationship constituted by notice—Pleading.]—By a lease dated in 1882 deft. became lessee of a market. Pltfs. subsequently purchased the reversion of that lease. In 1902 an Act was passed conferring on pltfs. compulsory powers of acquiring deft.'s interest in the market. In 1903 pltfs. served on deft. a notice to treat. The price which they were to pay was to be fixed by arbn. Differences arose between pltfs. & defts. as to the value of his rights under his lease, & in 1907 an action was brought by the A.-G. at the relation of pltfs. to determine, amongst other things, the extent of deft.'s franchise in the market. These matters were finally determined in 1913, & thereupon pltfs. desired to proceed to acquire deft.'s interest under the notice to treat. Deft. objected that the notice was invalid. Pltfs. then brought an action claiming a declaration that the notice was given in accordance with the provisions of the Act of 1902 & was valid. Deft. by his defence pleaded that the notice was invalid; that pltfs.' powers under the Act of 1902 had expired; & alleged that those proceedings were subversive of & inconsistent with the relation of landlord & tenant & vendor & purchaser which had been constituted by the notice to treat, & consequently pltfs. were not entitled to enforce the notice if valid. Pltfs. applied to have those paragraphs of the defence struck out on the ground that they were irrelevant & embarrassing, the only question raised by their statement of claim being whether their notice was valid:—Held: the matters referred to in the paragraphs complained of were such as deft. ought not to be precluded from raising at the trial of the action against him by pltfs., & there was nothing in the present case to justify the ct. in depriving deft. of that right.—*LONDON CORPN. v. z. — A third time.—Owner stopped by previous opposition.]—A ry. co. at different times served H. with three notices that portions of land owned by him were required. To each of the first two, H. replied by a notice appointing an arbitrator, expressly reserving his right to insist that the co. had no right to take any part of his land. The co. served successive notices of desistment from all their notices, & H. gave notice he objected to the third notice, & claimed the co. had no right to desist from that notice:—Held: the co. had not exhausted their powers, but had the right to desist.—*Re HOOPER & ERNE & HURON RY. 561. Incorporation of s. 92 in special Act.—Not excluded by provision in special Act that such parts of railway line as passed through certain land should be arched over so as to afford communication.]—By the special Act for a railway co. certain sects. were introduced, requiring the securing to the owner of a certain property particular benefits for arching, making roads, etc., if that property or adjoining property were taken. By another sect. no building was to be erected on part of the land required by the co., & by another sect. the co. were required to buy certain specified property. Lands Act, 1845, s. 92, required a co., if it took part, to take the whole of a manufactory, & that Act was incorporated with the special Act. The co. gave notice of an intention to take a small strip of land which was within the boundary line of tinplate works & was used for deposit of ashes from the works, but which was not, at the time of the passing of the special Act, nor at the time of the notice, built upon, but which was soon afterwards covered with buildings:—Held: (1) the land proposed to be taken formed part of a manufactory within the sect.; (2) the sects. in the special Act were not inconsistent with the sect. of the general Act.

At the hearing, the co. produced evidence to show that what they required could be attained by making a tunnel under the land, & so not touch any part of the surface:—Held: (3) it was not competent for them to set up such a case at the hearing.

(4) Semble: such a tunnel would be taking part of a manufactory.

(5) Where the construction of an Act of Parliament, which gives authority for the compulsory taking of land, is doubtful, it should be construed most favourably to those who seek to protect the land from innovation.

(6) The injunction will be made perpetual in the terms in which it was made before, except that there must be an undertaking on the part of pltf. to make a good title to the land & to execute a conveyance. I suppose there will be no difficulty about that. If they have not a good title to the manufactory, they cannot be able & willing to convey it (LORD CRANWORTH, L.J.).—*SPARROW v. 562. Construction of s. 92—General rule.]—Pltf. was the owner of a leasehold house in H. street, & of five freehold cottages in B. Row, which ran parallel to H. Street, the yards at the back of the cottages abutting on the back yard & buildings held with the house in H. Street. Pltf. used the house in H. Street as a dwelling-house & shop, & the buildings behind it as a candle manufactory, candle store, bread store & provision store. One of the cottages in B. Row was turned into a storehouse, & was made to communicate with the H. Street premises, & was used as a back entrance to them. A tramway co. gave notice to treat for the five cottages in B. Row & the yards behind them. Pltf. gave a counter-notice that the land proposed to be taken was part of premises occupied by him as a manufactory, & calling upon the co. to take the whole of the premises; & on the co.'s refusal he brought an action asking for a declaration that he might not be compelled to sell the part only of his manufactory buildings & land which was comprised in the notice to treat; & for an injunction:—Held: (1) the whole block constituted one "house" within the sect.; (2) (BRETT, L.J.) the whole block also constituted one "manufactory."

(3) The words "house or other building or manufactory" in the sect. refer to three distinct things; & it is sufficient that the owner of premises, part of which is required by a co., should specify the premises which he requires them to take without stating whether he makes the claim on the ground that they are a "house," or a "building," or a "manufactory."—*RICHARDS v. 563. Promoters authorised to take part of certain properties provided no interference caused with main structure—Part of building proposed to be taken involving reconstruction of such building—Owner willing & able to sell whole.]—By s. 18 London County Council (Tramways & Improvements) Act, 1913, which incorporated Lands Act, 1845, defts. were authorised to take the parts of the several properties shown on the deposited plans & scheduled to the Act, comprising, inter alia, forecourt, walls, gates & railings of the H. Church, which lay within the line marked, limits of deviation, or such part thereof as they might require, without being required or compellable to purchase any greater part or the whole of any such property, provided that the sect. should not entitle the council to take or interfere with the main structure of any house, building or manufactory. On Mar. 18, 1914, defts. served notice to treat in respect of the lands scheduled to the Act. It appeared that defts. proposed to take practically the whole of the forecourt in front of the church, the entrance to which was through the forecourt by a flight of stone steps in the centre of the front of the building, & by two flights of steps at each front corner which gave access to galleries. The result would have been that the roadway would be brought to within ten inches of the central flight of steps by which the church was entered, & as the road was a steep incline, it would be impossible to enter the church or the school buildings in the rear of the church without effecting extensive alterations in the main structure. The trustees of the church were willing & able to sell the whole of the buildings. They served notice on the council requiring them to purchase & take the whole of the chapel or other building, & moved to restrain them from entering on the land in question or any part thereof & from taking proceedings to obtain possession thereof, or any further steps to assess the value thereof, until judgment or further order. By their writ they also asked for a declaration that the council was not entitled to acquire the property compulsorily without also taking the chapel building & other lands & appurtenances adjoining same belonging to plffs.:—Held: the proposed operations of the council would interfere with the main structure of the building within the proviso to s. 18 of the special Act, & they were not entitled to take part only of the property.—*GENDERS v. The leases contained covenants restraining the lessees from building on the strips, & the strips were by arrangement all thrown into one piece, & were used by F. & the other lessees in common as a cricket & pleasure ground; the whole being, however, also let to a butcher for grazing purposes. A railway co. required this piece of land for the construction of their line; F. insisted that the co. if they took the land must also take his house & garden, & on their proceeding to obtain possession under Lands Act, 1845, filed his bill praying for an injunction:—Held: the strip of land being held for pleasure only, & not of necessity for the enjoyment & occupation of the residence of plff., it would not have passed by a conveyance of the "house" simply.—*FERGUSON v. (2) A field, separated from the garden of a house by a ha-ha crossed by two bridges & occasionally used for the purposes of pleasure, but otherwise used for keeping plff.'s cows, cannot be considered as "pleasure grounds," & as forming part of a "house" within the sect.

(3) Land adjoining a house, which would not pass under a conveyance of the house, does not form part of a "house" within the above sect.

PART VI. SECT. 4, SUB-SECT. 1.— B. (a). terrac.—GLASGOW CITY & DISTRICT RY. CO. v. MACBRAYNE (1883), 10 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 894; 20 Sc. L. R. 602.—SCOT.

566.1. Access to public street—Included in "house."—Business premises abutting on a courtyard had an access from the public street:—Held: the access was part of the "house or building or manufactory" of the proprietor to which Lands (Scot.) Act, 1845, s. 90, were applicable.—CALEDONIAN RY. CO. v. TURCAN (1898), 25 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 7; 35 Sc. L. R. 404.—SCOT.

Sect. 4.—Restrictions on taking part of land and premises: Sub-sect. 1, B. (a) & (b), C. & D. (a).]

570. ———.]—Pltf. was owner & occupier of a house & six acres of meadow land on the west of E. road. He had a large family, & the ground he had, being insufficient for the horse & cows which he kept for their use, he bought six & a quarter acres on the other side of the road, the nearest point being distant 120 yards from his entrance gate. At the nearest point of this land were a cow-house, loose box, & a cottage, which was occupied by his grooms, because he had no accommodation for them on his own side of the road, & he for a number of years occupied the land for the purpose of feeding the horses & cows requisite for his establishment:—Held: the six & a quarter acres could not be considered part of the house within Lands Act, 1845, s. 92.

The word "house" in the above sect. includes all that would pass by a devise of the house; but that does not include land which is not necessary for the convenient use & occupation of the house, but only for the personal use & convenience of the owner & occupier (TURNER, L.J.).—STEELE v. MIDLAND RY. CO. (1866), 1 Ch. App. 275; 14 L. T. 3; 30 J. P. 227; 12 Jur. N. S. 218; 14 W. R. 367, L. J.J.; subsequent proceedings (1869), 20 L. T. 475.

572. ———.]—The term "house" in Lands Act, 1845, s. 92, must be taken to include everything that would pass under the grant of a "house" on a simple conveyance of it as such.

Where there was a paddock at the back of a cottage & garden, & having access only from these latter, & the paddock was used by its present, & had been used by its former, proprietor for purposes connected with their respective businesses:—Held: the paddock was within the term "house" as used in s. 92, inasmuch as it was clear that it would pass under a grant of the "house" on a simple conveyance of the latter as such.—Low v. STAINES RESERVOIRS JOINT COMMITTEE (1900), 64 J. P. 212; 16 T. L. R. 184, C. A.

573. Does not include house built on land after notice to treat given.—LITTLER v. RHYL IMPROVEMENT COMRS., [1878] W. N. 219.

(b) In Particular Instances.

See Lands Act, 1845, s. 92.

574. Land on which intended to erect wing to existing buildings—Included in "house."—(1) Trustees of a charity purchased land & covenanted to erect upon it buildings, consisting of a hall in the centre, with almshouses, some on each side of the hall, & others forming wings of the main building, with a garden in the centre. A portion was to be built within a specified time, & the rest as funds were subscribed. Before more than the centre was completed a railway co., under Lands Act, 1845, required to take a portion of the land which, when the design was complete, would be part of the garden in front of one of the intended, but then unbuilt, almshouses:—Held: the land was part of a house within s. 92.

(2) It is the duty of cts. of justice to construe Acts of Parliament so as to protect private proprietors against public cos. (KNIGHT BRUCE, L.J.).

(3) I know of no means by which we can interpret the word "house" in this sect. except by a reference to the legal construction put upon that word in other instruments. I take, therefore, the question to be, what would pass under a conveyance of the house? That, as I think, must be judged of by the particular situation & circumstances of the property at the time (TURNER, L.J.).—*GROSVENOR (LORD) v. HAMPSTEAD JUNCTION RY. 576. Semi-detached villas under one continuous roof—Party wall only carried up to ceilings of bedrooms—Space between bedroom ceilings & roof forming one continuous space—Not a "house."—Pltf. was the lessee of two semi-detached villas under one continuous roof. The party wall between them was only carried up to the ceilings of the bedrooms, so that the space between those ceilings & the roof formed one continuous space, through which a person might creep from one end of the roof to the other, but, with this exception, there was no internal communication between the two villas. The party wall was so ineffective that if one of the villas were to be pulled down, the other villa would become uninhabitable. Each villa had its own distinct garden. A railway co., under Lands Act, 1845, gave notice to treat for a strip of the garden of one of the villas, & received a counter-notice requiring them to take the two villas. The co. deposited only the assessed value of the strip of garden comprised in their notice to treat. Pltf. filed his bill to compel the co. to take the two villas, & thereupon they agreed to take the whole of one of the villas:—Held: (1) the two villas did not constitute one house within Lands Act, 1845, s. 92, & the co. could take one villa without taking the other; (2) the co. were right in proceeding on their own notice, & not depositing the value of the two villas, as the counter-notice was not good.

(3) In his counter-notice to the co. the owner of the tenements described them as two houses, claiming that they could not be safely separated:—Held: (MALINS, V.C.) he was not on that account

PART VI. SECT. 4, SUB-SECT. 1.—B. (b).

5741. Land on which intended to erect addition to existing building—Included in "house."—Defts. required part of a house, which would cut off part of an unfinished cathedral, for their ry., & took possession, but pltf., declined to sell or convey, or arbitrate as to the value of, anything less than the whole house. In an action to compel the ry. co. to take the whole:—Held: (1) the land was set apart for cathedral purposes, & an injunction was granted against the ry. taking a part only; (2) the mere going into possession of part, did not necessarily commit defts. to the purchase of the whole.—HOLY TRINITY CATHEDRAL v. WEST ONTARIO PACIFIC RY. CO. (1887), 14 O. R. 246.—CAN.

The land was comprised within a ring fence, & had for many years been used as a market garden. About twenty-five years before a cottage, consisting of three rooms nine feet in height, with two cellars suitable for storing fruit & vegetables, was erected near a road forming part of the boundary of the land for the purpose of being occupied by the tenant of the garden. A railway co. drove through this piece of land a tunnel which passed under one corner of the cottage, & divided the land into two portions, one of which was less than half an acre:—Held: (1) the co. were not bound to take the whole piece of land, but only the part lying above the tunnel, the cottage & the piece of land lying between the cottage & the road; & also, if the owner required it, the severed portion, which was less than half an acre; (2) the premises were not in a town within Lands Act, 1845, s. 93.—

601. Right of way—Not part of manufactory.]—(1) A railway co., a short time before the expiration of the time limited by their Act for the compulsory purchase or taking of lands, gave a notice to treat for the purchase of the right or easement of making & for ever maintaining their railway by throwing a bridge over a yard belonging to a manufactory: the owner, after the expiration of the co.'s compulsory powers, gave a counter-notice requiring the co. to take the whole of the manufactory; the co. did nothing upon the notice & counter-notice for nearly twelve months, they then gave a notice for the purchase of the whole manufactory, & proceeded to take steps for summoning a jury to assess its value. On an application by the owner for an injunction:—Held: whether the original notice to treat was valid or not, the ct. could not after the counter-notice, which had been given by the landowner, interfere with the proceedings of the co., this decision being, however, without prejudice to any steps which the owner might take to stay or quash those proceedings.

Semble: (2) a notice to treat for the purchase of such a right or easement is not a notice warranted by the Lands Act, 1845, the word "hereditaments," used in the interpretation clause as a meaning of the word "lands," signifying corporeal hereditaments, & not including a right of way; (3) such a notice to treat did not confer on the owner a right to give a counter-notice requiring the co. to take the whole of the manufactory, because a right of way could not be considered as part of the manufactory; (4) where a valid notice has been given to take part of a house or manufactory, & on that a valid counter-notice has been given to take the whole, the notice & counter-notice will be treated as constituting one notice for the purpose of enabling the jury to assess the value of the property forming the subject-matter of the notice & counter-notice.

(5) When a co. has given a valid notice to take land, it is competent to the landowner to apply at once for a mandamus to compel them to proceed to complete the purchase, & he cannot at a subsequent time urge delay on the part of the co. as a ground for the interference of a ct. of equity with their taking proceedings to obtain the land.—*PINCHIN v. May find no damage—Warrant containing words "if any."]—By a railway Act it was enacted that, for settling differences between the co. & owners of land, the co. should issue a warrant commanding the sheriff to impanel, etc., a jury, which jury should enquire of, assess & give a verdict for the sum of money to be paid, by way of satisfaction or compensation, for the damages sustained from the co.'s acts. It was also provided that no proceedings had in pursuance of the Act should be quashed or vacated for want of form, or removed by certiorari. The co. issued their warrant to the sheriff, commanding him to impanel a jury for the purpose of inquiring of, assessing & giving a verdict for, the sum of money, if any, to be paid to C. by way of satisfaction or compensation for the damages, if any, which should have been done, etc. The jury, on the inquisition in pursuance of this warrant, found that C. had not sustained any damage; & it was considered that no damages or sum of money should be assessed, etc.:—Held: (1) the jury, even though the words "if any" had not been in the warrant, would still have been authorised to find that there was no damage; (2) the words in the warrant did not vary the duty imposed upon the jury, or prevent the warrant from being in pursuance of the Act; (3) the proceedings were within the jurisdiction conferred by the Act, & no certiorari lay.—*R. v. of compensation in respect of lands injuriously affected by the execution of the works of any public railway, was, under Lands Act, 1845, to be settled by the verdict of a jury empanelled & summoned as in that Act mentioned, the co. or the party entitled to the compensation, may apply to the judge of any one of the superior cts. of common law, who shall, if he think fit, make an order for trial of the question in one of the superior cts., upon such terms & in such manner as to him shall seem fit, etc.; & the proceedings shall be under & subject to the control & jurisdiction of the ct. as in ordinary actions therein":—Held: the question to be tried under s. 41, by a judge of a superior ct. with a jury, was the same as that previously tried by the sheriff with a jury, & consequently the judge & jury had no jurisdiction to determine the title to the compensation, but could only determine the amount.

If power to set out such approaches be given by an additional submission, not containing a consent that this additional submission shall be made a rule of ct., the ct. cannot set aside the award on the ground that no approaches are set out; inasmuch as Lands Act, 1845, s. 36, authorises the making such submission only a rule of ct. as is in pursuance of the Act; & Arbitration Act, 1698 (c. 15) gives such authority only where the submission contains such consent.

—A railway co. under the powers of their Act gave notice to the lessees of a factory & buildings, that they required a part of their premises. The lessees thereupon gave a counter-notice requiring the co., under Lands Act, 1845, s. 92, to take the whole. The co. took no further proceedings until the lease of the premises had expired. The lessees having remained in the possession of the premises, the railway co., without serving any new notice on defts., had the value of their interest in the whole of the premises assessed, deposited the amount in ct., delivered a bond & entered into possession of a part of the premises under s. 85. Defts., conceiving that the co. had no right to proceed under s. 85, sent in a claim, & gave them notice to issue their warrant to the sheriff, to summon a jury to assess compensation under s. 68. 715. Waiver—Must be intentional act with knowledge.]—A railway co. agreed to make such accommodation works as A. should notify within one month after possession should have been given to the co. A. & the co.'s engineer met & discussed the necessary works, & a memorandum was made specifying certain works. Certain discussions as to these works were protracted beyond the month, A. supposing that the condition as to time was waived. Two months after the one month had expired A. made his award. The award provided for a cattle-arch which had not been previously mentioned. The solrs. of the co. not being fully informed as to the exact date of the award, took it up & paid the arbitrator's charges:—Held: (1) the condition as to time was not waived as to such works as had not been previously mentioned, for a waiver must be an intentional act with knowledge, & it was incumbent on any party insisting on a verbal agreement, in substitution of a written contract, to show that both parties understood the terms of the substituted agreement; (2) as the parties had agreed to leave matters to the discretion of A., the ct. had no power to substitute its own discretion for that of A., so as to order the construction of works, though such might appear to be necessary & proper.

(3) Semble: taking up an award known to have been made after the limited time had expired, does not amount to an admission that the arbitrator's authority has not expired.—*DARNLEY (EARL) v. 720. Evidence—Taken ex parte—Notwithstanding competency from personal observation—Makes award bad.]—(1) Where the owners of land, which was required by a railway co., had made an appointment of an arbitrator under Lands Act, 1845, but refused to produce it for the purpose of enabling the registrar to draw up an order which had been obtained by the co., making the submission a rule of ct., the ct. refused a motion on behalf of the co. that the order might be drawn up, or that the landowners might produce the appointment. But there being in the landowners' affidavits, in opposition to the motion, a statement that their arbitrator had been duly appointed, & there being a recital to that effect in an appointment of an umpire, the ct., on a subsequent motion, ordered the submission to be made a rule of ct. on that evidence of the appointment of the landowners' arbitrator.

A railway co. & the owners of land which was required by the co. appointed under Lands Act, 1845, arbitrators, who appointed an umpire. The arbitrators & umpire met on Nov. 4, & adjourned to the following day. On that day the co.'s arbitrator did not attend. The other arbitrator & the umpire proceeded in his absence, notwithstanding the protest of the co.'s solr., & examined a witness. The co.'s solr. left the meeting without examining his witnesses. On Nov. 22 the landowners' solr. informed the umpire that the arbitrators had not made an award, & required him to make his award, which he did on Nov. 29, without any evidence on the part of the co. having been given:—Held: (2) it must be presumed that the evidence taken ex p. on Nov. 5 was not disregarded by the umpire; (3) it was not a just inference from the above facts that the co. had no evidence to adduce, or did not wish to adduce any; (4) whether there was or not any general rule that an umpire need not receive evidence or be active in summoning the parties, the umpire, in the above circumstances, ought to have made no award without tendering to the co. an opportunity of producing evidence before him or addressing him; (5) he was bound to take up the proceedings de novo, or from the close of Nov. 4; (6) in the above circumstances, his skill or competency to decide from personal observation made no difference; (7) his award was consequently bad, & ought to be set aside.—*Re HAWLEY, BRIDGEWOOD & GOODWIN & NORTH STAFFORDSHIRE RY. 727. Within power of umpire—Under Common Law Procedure Act, 1854 (c. 125), s. 5.—(1) An umpire appointed to ascertain the amount of compensation under Lands Act, 1845, has power to state a special case under Common Law Procedure Act, 1854, s. 5.

(2) By a local Act defts. were empowered to execute drainage works. S. 43 enacted that in the execution of the Act the comrs. should do as little damage as might be, & subject to the provisions of the Act should make to all parties entitled, compensation for all damage or injury so done. By s. 45 it was provided that full compensation should from time to time, after the passing of the Act, but not beyond twenty years after the completion of the works, be made by defts. to the owners, lessees & occupiers for the time being, sustaining any damage by reason, or in any way consequential upon, the exercise of any of the powers of the Act, of the lands & hereditaments of F.; & in case of dispute as to the amount of such compensation, the same should be settled by arbn. in the manner provided in Lands Act, 1845. The local Act incorporated the Lands Act, 1845:—Held: the compensation clauses in the special Act did not extend to any damage, except such as would have been the proper subject of compensation under Lands Act, 1845, viz. damage which, in the absence of the statutory powers, would have given a right of action to the party injured.—*RHODES v. To a writ of mandamus commanding a railway co. to take up an award made under the arbn. clauses of the Act, the railway co. made return that the prosecutor's interest had not been injuriously affected by defts.' works within the Act. The prosecutor demurred to the return:—Held: as the demurrer admitted the truth of the statement in the return that the prosecutor's interest had not been injuriously affected within the Act, the award must be taken to be valueless, & the ct. would not compel the railway co. to take it up.—R. v. (2) The surveyor of a railway co. had in that character treated with a landowner, & offered a price for land required by the co. He was subsequently named by the co., & acted as their arbitrator upon an arbn. under Lands Act, 1845:—Held: he ought not to have been selected as an arbitrator, but the landowner knowing the fact, & though protesting against the propriety of the appointment, proceeding with the arbn., was held to have waived the objection.

(3) A surveyor to, & shareholder in, a railway co., closely connected in interest with, & holding many shares in, another railway co., upon an arbn. between the latter co. & a landowner under Lands Act, 1845, was appointed umpire by the arbitrators, & as umpire made his award. The landowner first discovered that the umpire was such surveyor & shareholder after the date of the award, & obtained an order nisi to set aside the award on that ground:—Held: whatever objections there might be, in point of delicacy, to the appointment of such an umpire, they did not constitute sufficient grounds for setting aside the award.—*Re ELLIOT & SOUTH DEVON RY. On Oct. 26, the co. gave claimant notice that they had appointed an arbitrator, & offered £17,000 as compensation. On Nov. 8 claimant appointed an arbitrator. On Nov. 18 the two arbitrators appointed an umpire. The umpire awarded claimant £16,400;—Held: (1) the offer of £17,000, having been made when the arbitrator was appointed, & before the beginning of the arbn., was a good offer, & was not invalidated by the previous offer of £15,237; (2) the sum awarded being a less sum than £17,000, claimant was not entitled to the costs of the arbn. under s. 34.

The arbitrators appointed an umpire & on two occasions enlarged the time for making their award. The co. after this made an offer which was not accepted; & the arbn. proceeded. The co. had previously made an offer of the sum of £11,000. Part of the landowner's claim was in respect of damage that would be caused to the residue of his land, which was building land, by cutting it off from the natural outfall for its drainage. When the parties came before the arbitrator, it was agreed between them that a right should be reserved to the landowner of making a sewer, for the purpose of draining his land, under the railway & land of the co., & consequently no claim in respect of such damage as before mentioned was ultimately submitted to the arbitrator. The arbitrator awarded the sum of £10,029 to the landowner;—Held: although the sum awarded was less than the amount of the co.'s offer, the co. were liable under Lands Act, 1845, s. 34, to pay the costs of the arbn. to the landowner on the ground that the award was not in respect of same subject-matter as that in respect of which the offer was made.—*MILES v. 816. Condition precedent to recovery—Not taxation—Under Public Health Act, 1848.]—HOLDSWORTH v. WILSON, No. 704, ante.

817. ——— Under Lands Act, 1845.]—Lands Act, 1845, contained special provisions with regard to claims for compensation for lands affected by the works of a railway, & directed that, except in certain specified cases, compensation should be awarded with costs. A special Act declared that the provisions of the general Act were, except where expressly varied by the special Act, incorporated with it. The general Act provided the forms of proceedings in arbn., such as the appointment of arbitrators by the contending parties, & the appointment of an umpire by the arbitrators, & declared that compensation might be recovered with costs. The special Act directed that arbn. conducted under its provisions should be conducted by an arbitrator appointed by the Board of Trade, but contained no specific directions as to the award of costs. An arbn. of this sort took place under the special Act. The arbitrator awarded compensation, but said nothing as to costs:—Held: (1) claimant was entitled to costs, for that the substitution of one form of proceeding in the arbn. different from that in the general statute expressly varied the provisions of the general statute as to that matter, but did not repeal the provision as to costs in the general statute, nor affect the general rule that the party succeeding in such an arbn. should recover costs; (2) the right to costs was entirely independent of the taxation of them, & an action could be maintained for the costs though the amount of such costs had not been previously settled or ascertained by taxation, & consequently an order for the taxation was a valid order.

In construing Acts of Parliament of this kind, & adjusting the general provisions in the general Act to the particular provisions of the special Act, considerations of reason & justice & the universal analogy of such provisions in similar Acts of Parliament, ought to have much weight & force (LORD SELBORNE, C.).—*METROPOLITAN DISTRICT RY. 825. Waiver of notice—Claimant appearing & not protesting.]—An Act of Parliament authorised a railway co. to take lands necessary for the railway works, on payment or tender of such sums of money as should have been agreed upon, or awarded by a jury in the manner directed by the Act; by the sect. of the Act for settling differences between the co. & owners & occupiers of, or persons interested in, lands to be taken, it was enacted that if any such person should not agree with the co. as to the amount of purchase-money, or should refuse to accept such purchase-money as should be offered by the co., or should, for twenty-one days after notice to him in writing, neglect or refuse to treat, or should not agree with the co. for the sale of his interest, etc., the co. might issue a warrant to the sheriff to summon a jury to assess the sum to be paid for the purchase of the lands, & the sheriff should give judgment for such sum. The co. issued a warrant, purporting to be pursuant to the powers given by the Act & requiring the sheriff to summon a jury to assess the value of pltf.'s land, etc. The jury was summoned & assessed the value; the owner of the land attending & protesting that the co. had no right to take his lands, as not being described in the schedule to the Act. An inquisition was recorded, purporting to be taken pursuant to the Act, on the oaths of jurors duly impanelled, in pursuance of the warrant to the inquisition annexed, who assessed the sum to be paid for the property particularised in the warrant & authorised by the Act to be taken for the railway; whereupon the sheriff, in pursuance of the Act, gave judgment for that sum.

832. — Sheriff shareholder in company requiring land—Not when request made by applicant after promoters' refusal.]—(1) By a railway Act it was enacted that if any person interested in lands affected by the execution of the Act should not agree with the co. as to the amount of purchase-money or compensation, etc., & should request that the matter in dispute be submitted to the determination of a jury, the co. should issue a warrant to the sheriff or sheriffs of the county or city where the lands in question should be situate, etc.; & if such sheriff or sheriffs should be a shareholder or shareholders in the co., then to any of the coroners of the county, etc., commanding such sheriff, etc. to impanel a jury, to inquire & assess, etc.:—Qu.: whether this enactment would apply in a case where the office of sheriff was constituted of two persons, & where one only of such persons was a shareholder in the co.

By a subsequent Act extending the line of railway, it was enacted, that in cases of dispute between the co. & parties claiming compensation, wherein the co. did not upon request, etc., within twenty-one days, issue their warrant to the sheriff or sheriffs of the county or city where, etc., it should be lawful for the party so having given notice himself to send a request in writing to the sheriff, etc., according to the tenor of the former Act; & the sheriff, etc. should thereupon impanel a jury, etc.:—Held: (2) the former enactment did not apply in a case where a party proceeded under the latter Act, so as to render void the proceedings held before the sheriff, the former enactment being confined to cases where the co. themselves issued their warrant, which they were not to direct to one of their own shareholders, & the latter embracing cases in which the co. having neglected to issue the warrant, the party in dispute with them might call upon the sheriff to hold an inquisition, as such party would have no means of knowing whether or not the sheriff was a shareholder; (3) where the co. appeared by their counsel before the sheriff & jury at the holding of the inquisition, without objection, they had waived any such objection; (4) Qu.: whether such proceedings would have been avoidable if objected to at the proper time.

By the first Act it was further enacted, that the jury should inquire, etc., & give a verdict for the sum to be paid for the purchase of land, & also the sum to be paid by way of satisfaction, etc. for goodwill, etc., & that such satisfaction should be inquired into, & assessed, separately & distinctly from the value of the land. By the second Act it was further enacted, that in case any dwelling house, etc., within fifty feet from the railway should be deteriorated in value, & the owner, etc. should require the co. to purchase same, the co. should treat for the purchase & for the compensation, etc., for any loss, etc. in respect of any tenant's fixtures, etc.; & in case the parties could not agree as to the value of such dwelling house, etc., or as to the amount of such compensation, etc., then the amount should be ascertained by the verdict of a jury in the manner described in the former Act, etc., provided that no party should be entitled to receive compensation unless the jury should by their verdict determine that the property had been deteriorated in value by the construction of the railway. Pltf., in an action upon a judgment founded upon an inquisition to recover, under the last-mentioned sect., the purchase-money of a house, & compensation for tenant's fixtures, etc., stated that the jury gave a verdict for £250 for the purchase of the house, & also by way of satisfaction, etc., for all damage in respect of the tenant's fixtures. Deft. pleaded that pltf. adduced evidence at the inquisition, not only of the loss & damage in respect of goodwill, tenant's fixtures, etc., but also of certain loss & damage in respect of the dwelling house, by reason of the construction of the railway; that the jurors did assess & give a verdict for the sum of £250 for the purchase of the dwelling house, & also by way of satisfaction, etc. for the several losses, etc. in the plea mentioned, whereby the inquisition, verdict & judgment were void:—Held: (5) the mere fact of pltf.'s adducing such evidence, & the receiving thereof by the sheriff, did not affect the validity of the verdict, as such evidence might have been given to show that the house had been deteriorated, which was necessary to give jurisdiction to the sheriff & jury; (6) the verdict, as stated in the declaration, excluded the possibility of any damages being given for the deterioration of the house by the construction of the railway; (7) the enactment in the first Act as to separate assessments, was directory only, & not in the nature of a condition.

By the first Act it was provided, that if the jury gave the same or a greater sum than the co. had previously offered, the co. should pay all the costs of the inquisition; if less than had been previously offered, that each party should pay half the costs, & that if, by reason of absence abroad or any other disability, any person should have been prevented from treating with the co., they, the co., should pay the whole costs; the second Act was silent as to costs:—Held: (8) a party proceeding under the second Act, in a case not falling within the cases mentioned in the first, was not entitled to costs. —*CORRIGAL v. 841. Omission of specific identification of lands to be taken—Omission of notice of intention to take lands—Warrant sufficient if lands identified.]—A local drainage Act created the lords or ladies of three manors, or, in his, her or their absence, their agents appointed in writing under their hands, comrs. for executing the Act; it authorised the comrs. to take lands for the purposes of the drainage; & it contained clauses for that purpose to same effect as those in Lands Act, 1845, subsequently passed; & it provided that no person should be capable of acting as a comr. or agent for a comr. till he had made a declaration that he would duly execute the powers in the exercise of which he should act as comr. or agent. The three lords of the manors, by writing under their hands respectively, appointed defts. their agents, but without having first made the declaration. Defts. acted as comrs., first making the declaration, & gave pltf. a written notice that they required to take for the purposes of the Act, 3 acres, 1 r., 25 p., of his land; describing the specific acres, rood & perches. Pltf. refused to treat; & the comrs. thereupon issued a warrant to the sheriff of the county to summon a jury to assess the sum to be paid to pltf. for the purchase of 3 a., 1 r., 25 p. of land, required for the purposes of the Act; but the warrant did not recite or refer to the notice, nor describe specifically which 3 a., 1 r., 25 p. were required. Pltf. had two hundred acres of land in the district. Both the notice & warrant were in defts.' names as comrs. A jury was impanelled, & assessed the price of 3 a., 1 r., 25 p. pointed out to them, which were in fact the land specifically described in the notice. An inquisition was drawn up, reciting the warrant but not the notice, & not showing specifically in respect of which 3 a., 1 r., 25 p. of pliffs.' land the price was assessed. Pltf., who had throughout protested against the proceedings, refused to receive the price so assessed. Defts. paid it into the bank under the local Act, & entered on the land. Pltf. having brought an action against them:—Held: (1) the lords & ladies of the manors were comrs. by virtue of the local Act & if they did not choose to officiate might appoint agents for such time as they thought proper, which agents thereupon became comrs., & might issue notices & warrants in their own names, & were not bound to show on the face of their proceedings for what lord or lady they respectively acted; (2) such appointment of an agent was well executed though the lord or lady had not previously made the declaration required by the local Act; (3) the inquisition was good, though it did not, directly or by reference, specify the particular acres, rood & perches for which the comrs. were to pay.—*OSTLER v. C. Vacating Judgment.

(a) Certiorari to quash.

See, generally, CROWN PRACTICE.

902. General rule—Defects in inquisition must be positively sworn to.]—A certiorari will not be granted to bring up the inquisition of a compensation jury unless defects in the inquisition be positively sworn to. If the objection be to the form of the inquisition, a copy should be set out, or it should be sworn that the deponent could not procure a copy; & he should in the latter case swear positively on information & belief. It is not enough to swear that he objects that the inquisition does not contain certain requisites pointed out. The granting a certiorari is matter of discretion, though there are fatal defects on the face of the proceedings which it is sought to bring up. It is an almost invariable rule that, where a party applying for a certiorari fails from incompleteness in his affidavits, he will not have a certiorari granted to him upon fresh affidavits supplying the defect. Especially if he appears to have suffered no injury, or to have assented to the proceeding below.

Semble: the rule requiring that, in proceedings by an inferior jurisdiction, the facts giving the jurisdiction should appear on the face of such proceedings, is not confined to facts necessarily within the knowledge of the party exercising the jurisdiction (LORD DENMAN, C.J.).—*R. v. SUB-SECT. 2. UNAUTHORISED ENTRY.

A. What amounts to.

972. Entry without taking necessary steps—Prescribed by special Act.—Action against the trustees under a road Act for having, in the occupation of pursuer's grounds, deviated from the line prescribed by the Act, & entered upon his lands without taking the proper previous steps, in terms of the Act, to give him notice, & settle the compensation:—Held: the line taken was authorised by the Act.

The trustees, under these road & canal Acts, ought to be kept strictly within their powers; they ought not to deviate in the smallest degree from the line prescribed by the Act; though an injunction would not be granted where there was laches in applying for it, the trustees, if they deviated, would be liable in damages, & if they entered on a person's lands without taking the previous steps incumbent on them under the Act, they would be liable upon trespass in damages & costs (LORD ELDON, C.).—GOLDIE v. S. 42 provided that upon payment, tender or deposit of such purchase-money the co. should be entitled to enter upon such lands. The co. entered into an agreement with a landholder for the purchase of lands on the line of the railway, & before acceptance of title or payment, tender or deposit of the purchase-money, entered upon the land:—Held: (1) this was not a case within the Act; (2) on payment of the purchase-money into the ct. in which the bill was filed, the co. were entitled to enter; (3) an injunction, which had been obtained ex parte, should be dissolved.

This is not a case under the Act, but a case of specific performance. The co. have taken possession as purchasers, & the whole question is, whether they have or not accepted the title. The ordinary course is to direct, either that the purchase-money be paid into ct., or that the possession be given up. The vendor by filing this bill has elected his ct., & in a case of specific performance he can require nothing more than that the purchase-money should be secured (LORD COTTENHAM, C.).—HYDE v. 979. Entry on additional land agreed to be taken—Without payment—Amount of damage by severance not ascertained.—(1) By an agreement between pltf. & the agent of a railway co., the former agreed to sell to the co. a certain portion of a field for the price of £220 in the whole, being £120 for the land & £100 for compensation for damage by severance to the remaining portion. The agreement contained a stipulation that in case additional land should be wanted by the co., same should be taken & paid for after the same rate per acre. The co. subsequently took possession of a second portion of the field for purposes authorised by their Act, & entered upon same without having previously paid the purchase-money permanent operations by a ry. co. on the lands of a party through whose property the line ran, until he should be paid the price of his lands; & the ry. co. having commenced to sink pits & excavate the ground:—Held: these acts did not amount to a violation of the interdiction.—FLEMING v. for that second portion after the rate specified in the agreement, & without having previously agreed upon or ascertained by reference to a jury the damage occasioned by the severance of the second portion from the remaining portion of the field. A bill having been filed for an injunction:—Held: the agreement only provided for the amount to be paid to pl'ts. for the value of the second portion of the field, & neither by intention nor legal construction did such value include the amount of damage by severance to the remaining portion of the field, which amount was either to be agreed upon by the parties or ascertained by a jury & until such amount was agreed upon or ascertained, the co. were not entitled to enter upon the second portion.

(2) Upon the undertaking of the co. to pay the amount of damage to the land by the severance, & to take proper proceedings, if necessary, for ascertaining the amount of such damage, the injunction was withheld.

990. — Tenant holding under building agreement.—A., in occupation of land under a building agreement determinable if the buildings were not completed by Nov. 30, 1885, was informed in 1880 of the promotion of a bill for a railway which would affect the land. A. thereupon had an interview with his landlord's agent, who told him to suspend building operations till the result of the railway scheme was known, no express agreement to extend the time for building being come to. In 1883, the co. obtained their Act, & on July 31, 1883, purchased from the landlord such part of the land as was required, the purchase being made expressly subject to the building agreement. On Sept. 16, 1884, the co. gave A. notice to treat. A. sent in no claim, & in Jan., 1886, the co. took possession without making a deposit or giving a bond, as required by Lands Act, 1845, insisting that A. had no interest in the land. A. thereupon commenced his action for an injunction, & to have it declared that the building agreement was subsisting & that he was entitled to have his interest assessed on that footing:—Held: as the co. had, without complying with the provisions of Lands Act, 1845, entered upon land of which A. was lawfully in occupation, he had ground for an action, & the action being brought to trial, the ct. had jurisdiction to make a declaration as to his interest in the property, & although the term named in the agreement had expired, he had an interest in the land, for that the agent's direction to suspend building raised an equity against the landlord to prevent his ejecting A. at the end of the term until he had a reasonable time after notice to complete the building, & the railway co. took subject to that liability.—*BIRMINGHAM & DISTRICT LAND CO. v. In 1868 pltf. claiming title under F., brought an action of ejectment against the co. & recovered judgment, & possession was delivered to him by the sheriff under a writ of possession. The co., however, continued to run their trains over the land, 1005. Plaintiff's title not disputed—Water-pipes laid in soil of highway.]—(1) Where water-pipes had, without the consent of the owner of the soil, been laid in the soil of a highway, an injunction to restrain the continuance of the pipes was granted; the owner of the soil not being left to his remedy at law & not being required to establish his right at law.

(2) The facts that the soil under the highway was of no value to the owner & that his motive for applying to the ct. was not connected with the enjoyment of his land were held not to be reasons against the grant of the injunction.

(3) Where pltf.'s title is not disputed the ct. will grant an injunction to restrain acts of trespass without requiring him first to bring an action at law.

d. Entry under award pending hearing of appeal—Injunction not granted.]—An arbitrator assessed the value of portions of land required by a ry. co. under their special act at a certain sum, & awarded a further sum as compensation for severance or other injury. Pltf. traversed the award. A great part of the ry. was completed without objection, but without any express written consent or other authority under co.'s Act:—Held: (1) an interim interdict would be refused with regard to land within the notice; (2) it would be granted as to land entered on & not included in the notice.—*RENTON v. (2) To a count for trespass to the house, defts. pleaded that the house was delineated in the plans & described in the books of reference deposited as required by their Act, & that it was necessary to take & use the house for the purposes of their Act, & that they entered & took possession of the house with the consent of the owners & occupiers thereof, & after such entry & possession taken pltf. took possession of the house & occupied same, & defts., because it was necessary to the construction of their works authorised by that Act, entered the house, pltf. then being therein, & pulled down same, etc.:—Held: the plea was good & the consent could not be revoked.

(3) To a count alleging that pltf. was entitled to support for the house from an adjoining house, & complaining that defts. wrongfully deprived pltf. of such support, to wit, by negligently & complied with the provisions of the Ry. Act, entered & completed the work. The purchase money not having been agreed upon, pltf. brought an action against the corpn. & co. for damages to the land & interference with his business:—Held: the corpn. were not liable, & pltf.'s remedy against the co. was by arbitration under Ry. Act, & not by action.—TODD v. MEAFORD CORPN. (1903), 23 C. L. T. 323; 6 O. L. R. 469; 2 O. W. R. 12, 779.—CAN.

improperly pulling down same without taking due care to secure pltf.'s house against the consequences of such pulling down, defts. pleaded, except as to so much of the count as charged them with having negligently & improperly pulled down the adjoining house, that same was delineated in the plans & described in the books of reference deposited as required by their Act, & that it was necessary for the purposes of that Act to enter upon & pull down same:—Held: the plea was good, & the portion of the count to which it was pleaded stated a good cause of action.—*KNAPP v. (3) A public co. does not lose its power of taking possession of land under Lands Act, 1845, s. 85, by the circumstance that there had been sufficient time, two years in this instance, between the notice to treat & the taking possession, to have enabled the co. to have ascertained the amount of compensation-money by the modes pointed out by the Act.

SUB-SECT. 2.—ENTRY.

A. Time and Mode of.

1035. Immediately before expiration of time limited for completion.]—The special Act of a railway co. enacted that the powers of the co. for the compulsory purchase of lands for the purposes of the Act should not be exercised after the expiration of three years from the passing of the Act; & that if the railways were not completed within five years from the passing of the Act, then on the expiration of that period the powers by the Act granted to the co. for making & completing the railways or otherwise in relation thereto should cease to be exercised except as to so much thereof as was then completed. A few days before the expiration of the three years the co. served on a landowner a notice to treat for part of his land. A correspondence ensued, no agreement was come to & the compensation was not assessed. Thirteen days before the expiration of the five years the co., having complied with the requirements of Lands Act, 1845, s. 85, entered & proceeded to make the railway, the landowner objecting & resisting. The land was bonâ fide required for the railway:—Held: (1) whether the railway could or could not have been completed within the thirteen days, the entry under s. 85 was lawful, & the co. could not be restrained by injunction, but were entitled to remain & complete the railway after the expiration of the five years; (2) (FRY, J.) clay was a mineral within Railways Act, 1845, s. 77, & a railway co. was liable to the owner of land taken by it in respect of clay from such land used for puddling bridges where it was not necessary to remove the clay in the construction of its line; (3) (FRY, J.) the Board of Trade might, under Railways Act, 1867, s. 36, approve the sureties to a bond upon an ex p. application by the co., unless the parties differ.—TIVERTON & NORTH DEVON RY. SUB-SECT. 3.—ON MAKING DEPOSIT BY WAY OF SECURITY.

A. Ascertainment of Amount to be deposited.

(a) In General.

1043. Notice to treat for whole property—Entry on part only—Deposit on account of part only insufficient.]—A railway co. gave notice of their intention to take ten pieces of land, authorised to be taken by their special Act, according to Lands Act, 1845, s. 18. They afterwards entered upon eight of such pieces only, & had them valued, & deposited the amount of valuation in the bank, & gave security by bond under their corporate seal, but without sureties, to the landowners, under s. 85:—Held: (1) the co. could not enter on less than all the lands comprised in their original notice, & deposit the value of & give security for such less quantity; (2) two sureties were required as well when the bond is given by a corpn. as by an individual.

(3) Seemle: the several bond of the co. & joint bond of the sureties is insufficient.

(4) It is generally incumbent on a co. seeking to avail themselves of Lands Act, 1845, s. 85, to show satisfactorily & clearly that they have fulfilled its conditions & complied with its requisitions; & if there is room for doubt, the landed proprietor should have the benefit of the doubt.

(5) Certain landowners, by their original bill, sought to restrain a railway co. from entering on & taking eight out of the ten pieces of land which they had originally given notice of their intention to take. Having obtained an injunction on this bill, they filed a supplemental bill, alleging that the ten pieces formed part of a "manufactory" within Lands Act, 1845, s. 92, & praying for an injunction restraining the co. from taking possession or assessing the value of the ten pieces before a jury, without taking the whole "manufactory":—Held: the landowner not entitled under the circumstances to the injunction.

Seemle: the term "manufactory" in s. 92 means the actual manufactory & not also the conveniences adjoining it.—BARKER v. NORTH STAFFORDSHIRE RY. CO. (1848), 2 De G. & Sm. 55; 5 Ry. & Can. Cas. 401; 10 L. T. O. S. 390; 11 L. T. O. S. 43, 345, 451; 12 Jur. 324, 575, 589; 64 E. R. 25, L. C.

1044. Notice to treat for part of premises—Owner giving notice requiring promoters to take whole—Deposit necessary on value of whole premises.]—A railway co. gave notice to pltf. that they should require to take a part of his workshop for the purposes of their railway. Pltf. gave a counter-notice, under Lands Act, 1845, s. 92, that the co. must take the whole of the premises. The co., however, took possession of only a part, & paid into ct. the ascertained value of that portion only:—Held: the co. were bound to pay into ct. the value of the whole premises, & could not be allowed to take possession of part, paying only for that part.—GILES v. LONDON, CHATHAM & DOVER RY. CO. (1861), 1 Drew. & Sm. 406; 30 L. J. Ch. 603; 5 L. T. 479; 7 Jur. N. S. 509; 9 W. R. 587; 62 E. R. 435.

to cover the purchase-money or compensation claimed, or the party's interest therein, & does not cover expenses.—EDINBURGH, PERTH & DUNDEE RY. CO. v. HOPE (1854), 16 Dunl. (Ct. of Sess.) 1041; 26 Sc. Jur. 558.—SCOT.

(2) The sureties in a bond to be given to the landowner, under that sect., may be appointed without notice to the landowner; but the money secured by it ought not to be made payable "on demand, to pay the owner, or on demand to deposit in the bank the amount when determined."

The condition of the bond ought to adopt the words of the sect., & make the money payable either to the obligee or into the Bank of England, "as the case may require."

(3) Money paid into the bank under s. 86, to the credit of ex p. the promoters of the undertaking, the account of the landowner, is rightly paid in.

(4) A notice given by a railway co., under Railways Act, 1845, s. 32, of their intention to take temporary possession of land, ought to state for which of the purposes mentioned in that sect. the land is meant to be used. A notice that the co. intend to enter upon the land for those purposes, or some or one of them, is not sufficient.—POYNDER v. GREAT NORTHERN RY. CO. (1847), 10 Sim. 3; 5 Ry. & Can. Cas. 196; 16 L. 1050. Proper valuation—What is—Not valuation where surveyor never entered premises valued.]—(1) A valuation made by a surveyor appointed under Lands Act, 1845, s. 85, who never entered the buildings valued, is not a proper valuation within the sect.

(2) The valuation must include fixtures.

(3) A bond made under same sect., the condition of which was, that if the railway co. should at any time thereafter pay to pltf. or deposit in the Bank of England the purchase-money or compensation required by the Act, is not a proper bond within the sect.—*COTTER v. 1097. Application of Lands Act, 1845, s. 68—To land taken under s. 85.]—(1) Although the compulsory taking of land under the Railway Acts may, to a certain extent & for certain purposes, place the co. & the landowner in the relative position of purchaser & vendor, yet it does not follow that a ct. of equity will decree the specific performance of such sales.

(2) Qu.: whether in a case depending exclusively on a notice to take land given by a co. under Lands Act, 1845, the ct. will interfere to compel the co. to adopt the subsequent proceedings directed by the Act for giving compensation to the landowner.

In a case where such a notice had been followed by a claim to compensation on the part of the landowner, & a subsequent agreement between the parties, which claim & agreement were however ultimately abandoned & repudiated on both sides:—Held: (3) the co., who were in possession of the land, could not be compelled to summon a jury; (4) the notice per se did not give the ct. jurisdiction; (5) the rights of the parties were to be regulated by Lands Act, 1845, ss. 68, 85; (6) s. 68 applied to the case of land taken under s. 85.—*ADAMS v. 1099. Construction of Lands Act, 1845, s. 68—“Taken”—Means “actually taken.”]—(1) The words “lands which shall have been taken for or injuriously affected by the execution of the works” in Lands Act, 1845, s. 68, include such lands only as are actually taken or actually affected by the works.

(2) The owner of houses, which were liable to be taken for making a railway under an Act of Parliament, received notice under Lands Act, 1845, s. 18, from the promoters that they would be required for the railway, & the co. demanded the particulars of his interest & stated their willingness to purchase. The particulars were furnished by the landowner, & £4,500 was claimed as compensation for taking the property, & he required either payment, or that a warrant should be issued by the co. to summon a jury to assess the amount. The co. took no further step in the matter:—Held: the landowner could not maintain an action to recover the £4,500.

(3) Where a co. give notice to a party that they require his lands for their works, it amounts to an agreement by them for the purchase of those lands, assented to by the opposite party, on the terms of making the compensation in the way appointed by the Act under which such notice is given, & binds both parties finally.—*BURKINSHAW v. The landholder described his title to the land as being one of fee simple, subject to a certain unexpired term in a lease, & the co. agreed to pay £1,500 for his interest in same. The treaty not being completed certain proceedings were taken under the special Act & Lands Act, 1845, to summon a jury to assess the value of the land, & proceedings at law were taken against the co. Afterwards pltf. filed his bill against the co. for specific performance:—Held: (1) upon notice to treat, together with all that followed thereon, a binding contract had been entered into, of which specific performance could be decreed; (2) although the description of the landholder's title was not completely accurate, there was no misdescription; (3) pltf.'s proceedings at law having failed, relief could be had in this ct.—*INGE v. Thus, where the title has not been accepted before the award, & the co. not being in possession, delay paying or depositing the purchase-money, they are liable to pay interest at 4 per cent. per annum, not from the date of the award, but from the time they might prudently have taken possession; that is, when a good title was shown.

1157. Adoption by other purchasers—Agreement between all parties—Decreed.]—The B. Co. agreed with pltf. to give him, for fourteen acres of land, £20,000, to be paid by instalments; other parties, called the C. Co., at same time started a rival line, & both cos. went to Parliament. In committee it was agreed that the merits of both lines should be referred to two members of the committee, & the solrs. for the rival cos. at same time signed an agreement, by which it was stipulated that the adopted co. should take the engagements with landholders, into which the rejected co. might have entered; & to this agreement the sanction of two members of each co., & also of pltf., was subsequently obtained, & was signified by a written memorandum of approval. The C. Co. was adopted, & was incorporated by Act of Parliament. Their line required sixteen acres of pltf.'s land in a different place. Pltf. filed a bill against the C. Co., stating these facts, & seeking to compel them to keep the agreement entered into by him with the B. Co., & to restrain the C. Co. from entering upon any lands belonging to him, till after payment of the first instalment, which was already due; & from proceeding, after subsequent instalments became due, till such instalments should have been paid:—Held: the general demurrer of defts. must be overruled.—STANLEY v. A landowner, W., opposed the bill, but on a promoter of the bill agreeing to pay him a certain sum before commencing the works, he withdrew his opposition, & the bill passed. v. Abandonment of Undertaking.

1165. Relief obtainable at law—No mutuality—Vagueness in terms—Not decreed.—An incorporated railway co. applied to Parliament for an Act to enable them to make a branch line. A landowner, A., through whose property the proposed railway would, according to the deposited plans & sections pass, opposed the bill in Parliament; whereupon the railway co. entered into negotiations with him, which resulted in certain heads of agreement being drawn up & signed by agents on behalf of both parties, & A.'s withdrawal of his opposition. The bill passed into an Act in 1847, & soon afterwards A. tendered a formal agreement to the co. for their execution. A. died in Mar., 1848, leaving plffs. his devisees in trust. The railway co., in same year, declared their intention of abandoning their scheme for making the branch line; & after repeated applications, returned the draft agreement, altered so as to make the taking of A.'s land conditional on the formation of the railway. Nothing further was done; & on June 18, 1850, plffs. filed their claim for specific performance of the heads of agreement. On July 9, the powers of the co. to take land compulsorily ceased:—Held: it was not a case for specific performance, on the grounds, that complete relief could be obtained at law, & there existed no mutuality in the contract; & independently of these grounds, the laches of plffs. in filing their claim, public policy & the vagueness of the terms of the contract, prevented the ct. from decreeing specific performance.—STUART (LORD JAMES) v. 1166. Not decreed.—An agreement was entered into on behalf of, & was confirmed by, a railway co., in consideration of a landowner's opposition to the bill being withdrawn, to pay him £4,500 as the purchase-money of land not exceeding eight acres to be taken by the co. for the formation of their railway, & for consequential damages to the landowner's property. The railway was abandoned, & the landowner filed a claim for specific performance:—Held: plff. had means of complete redress at law, & the claim must be dismissed.—WEBB v. 1177. Nature of right—Same as that of ordinary vendor.]—(1) The owners of land taken by public cos. under their compulsory powers have the ordinary vendor's lien for unpaid purchase-money, & they are entitled to enforce that right by a sale of the land. (2) The lien extends not only to the value of the land, but also to the amount of compensation for damages. (3) The right of lien is unaffected by the deposit under Lands Act, 1845, s. 85, & by a deposit, by agreement, before the amount payable has been ascertained. (4) The rights of the public, & of debenture creditors & others claiming under the co., are subordinate to the vendor's lien for unpaid purchase-money.—WALKER v. WARE, HADHAM & BUNTINGFORD RY. CO. 1214. — Investment of purchase-money—Acquiescence of promoters to vendor's demand.]—A railway co. gave the usual notice to a tenant for life of settled estates that they required a portion of the estates for their line, & afterwards made an offer for the fee simple. The solr. of the tenant for life accepted the offer, stipulating that interest at £5 per cent. should be paid from the time of the co. taking possession, & proposing that, as the title was well known, the co. should be satisfied without the production of the deeds. To this the co. objected, & proposed to pay the money into a banker's in the names of the respective solrs. pending the investigation of the title. The tenant for life's solr. thereupon suggested that, as the money must be paid into ct., it had better be so at once. The co. thereupon paid the money into ct. to the account of the Railway Act only, & communicated to the tenant for life's solr. that they had paid the money into ct. under Lands Act, 1845, s. 69. The solr. for the tenant for life thereupon reminded them that interest at £5 per cent. would continue to be payable till the purchase was completed. To this the co.'s solr. returned no answer, & although several other communications passed between the solrs. respecting the purchase, the co.'s solr. did not, till a year afterwards, express any objection to the payment of interest. The money remained uninvested during the whole of that period:—Held: the co. had acquiesced in the vendor's view of the case, & were bound to pay interest up to the investment.—Re ROYSTON & HITCHIN RAILWAY CO.'S ACT, 1846, *Ex p. 1216. Under Lands Act, 1845, ss. 76, 77—Who is an “owner”—Person having some title—Land may be subject to dower or jointure or other interest in third party.]—(1) A railway co. took possession of land under a contract for a sixty years’ title. The vendor failed to show more than a possessory title for thirty-six years:—Held: he could not compel the co. to deposit the purchase-money in the bank under Lands Act, 1845, s. 76.

(2) By the term “owner” in the sect. the Legislature meant a person having some title; & in providing for the event of an owner failing to make out a title to the satisfaction of the promoters of the undertaking, they had in contemplation the possibility of the land being subject to dower or jointure, or some other independent estate or interest outstanding in a third party, who is under no legal or equitable obligation to concur in the sale, but which does not displace the owner’s title.

(3) A surviving partner, selling partnership lands in discharge of his duty, as survivor, to wind up the partnership, is an owner within s. 76, & by virtue of that sect. & s. 77 the promoters of the undertaking, depositing the purchase-money in the bank to the credit of the vendor & of the representative of his deceased partner, would acquire all the estate & interest of both.

(4) A person in possession, but showing a bad title, is not the “owner” within s. 76, & where the lands are in such possession, & the true owner cannot be found, the promoters must have recourse to the jury clauses of the Act.—DOUGLASS v. Allowed—Subject to consent of remainderman.]—(1) On a petition by a tenant for life for the reinvestment of purchase-money paid into ct. under the Lands Act, 1845, the ct. will not allow any of the fund to be applied in recouping the tenant for life what he has already expended, unless such expenditure was properly a charge on the estate, nor in any proposed repairs to the mansion-house.

(2) The ct. has jurisdiction to order the reinvestment of the fund in building or rebuilding houses on the estate, & will do so if it appears beneficial to the estate, & if the remaindermen do not object.

(3) When a petition is presented by a tenant for life for the reinvestment of purchase-money in any other kind of investment than lands, the remaindermen ought to be served.

(4) Where, owing to a mistake of petitioner, the tenant for life, in not originally serving the remaindermen, there have been two hearings of a petition in the ct. below, public bodies who paid the money into ct. & did not object to an improper order being made in the absence of the remaindermen, will only have to pay so much costs as would have been incurred if there had been only one hearing, & that amount will be divided equally between them.—Re LEIGH'S ESTATE (1871), 6 Ch. Land was vested in trustees in trust to sell as soon as the youngest of a class of children attained twenty-one & to divide the proceeds among such of the children, as should be then living & the issue of such of them as should be dead. Part of the land was taken under Lands Act, 1845, before the youngest child attained twenty-one & the purchase-money was paid into ct. After the youngest child attained twenty-one the trustees & some of the cestuis que trust presented a petition, asking that the fund might be paid out to the trustees, or in the alternative that the shares of those cestuis que trust who were petitioners might be paid out, leaving the other shares in trust in the matter of the Act. The ct. below refused to order payment out to the trustees, but expressed willingness to make an order according to the other alternative. 1445. ——— Discretion of court under Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38)—Payment refused where same solicitor represented all parties.]—Where purchase-money of settled lands taken by a railway co. have been paid into ct. under Lands Act, 1845, trustees for sale of such lands are not, either under Lands Act, 1845, s. 69, or Settled Land Act, 1882, s. 21, entitled as of right to payment out. Under Settled Land Act, 1882, the ct. has a discretion to order such payment. Qu.: whether it has such discretion under Lands Act, 1845.

A railway co. took lands, held by the two trustees of a will, upon trust for the separate use of A., a married woman, during her life, with remainder to her children as she should appoint, & in default, to such children as tenants in common in fee simple, & paid the purchase-moneys into ct. The two trustees of the will were afterwards appointed trustees under the settlement made by the will for the purposes of Settled Land Act, 1882. A. & the two trustees then petitioned that the fund in ct. might be transferred to the two trustees to be held by them upon the trusts of the will. At the date of the petition A. was sixty-five years old & had three children who had all attained twenty-one & these children were resps. to the petition & appeared to consent. One of the two trustees was a solicitor & the firm of which he was a member acted as solicitors to the trust, & as solicitors both for petitioners & resps.:—Held: petitioners were not entitled as of right to payment out or transfer of the fund.—Re SMITH, Ex p. LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY.
